NONE BETTER EXIST THAN CANADIAN TROOPS

A Major's Opinion of the Men Holding Trenches—The Germans Spare Shells—Ross Rifle Great Favorite With British Snipers

LONDON, April 1.—(Special.)—A Canadian Major tells me that nothing startling has happened since the Neuve Chapelle victory, Canadian infantry merely holding the trenches. No changes have been attempted, but the artillery has been very active, the British artillery being superior.

The British aviators are the surprise of the campaign. The Germans are using their shells sparingly, indicating a scarcity. The officers think the war will be over by Christmas.

General Alderson is exceedingly popular with ranks. "The Canadians are making good. There is none better anywhere," said a Major. The Army Service and Postal Corps is giving excellent service. The men are well fed, and there is plenty of fresh meats and greens. The Ross rifle is proving satisfactory, being especially good for sniping. The British snipers like the Ross weapon.

The Canadians encounter many of the Germans who have resided in Canada. "Anybody here from Lethbridge?" shouted a German from his trench one night, adding: "I worked in Blank's colliery there."

Wintry weather has prevailed for the past week. The casualties were light. Many of the troops are in the hospital with frozen feet.

East Grey visited the Canadian Hospital during the week-end.

Captain Darling of the 48th Highlanders is not seriously wounded. He was hit in the shoulder, and is progressing favorably. Captain Abell of Cobourg is leaving the hospital shortly. Lieut. J. B. Neale of the Toronto Regiment is better. He has been in Shorncliffe Hospital suffering from rheumatism as a result of standing in water in the trenches.

America's Reply Cabled to London

Said to be Discursive in Tone, Though Nothing Is Disclosed Officially

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Secretary Bryan authorized the announcement last night that the reply of the United States to the recent note of Great Britain explaining the manner and scope of the orders-in-council cutting off trade with Germany, had been cabled today to Ambassador Page in London for delivery to Sir Edward Grey. Details as" to its character were withheld, but the character of the note had been anticipated.

It is understood that the communication insists on the American standpoint, previously reiterated, that interference with neutral American shipping should be limited to the right of " visit and search in the absence of a blockade, proclaimed and enforced in accordance with international law.

While the note is understood to set the American rights forth in firm language, little importance is attached here to sensational reports that the note will threaten drastic action, or, indeed, make any threats whatever. The note is thought to be discursive rather than final in tone.

Counsellor Lansing of the State Department, last night authorized a blanket denial of anything purporting to disclose the tenor of the American note to Great Britain. He said that he did not care to say anything about the note itself, or to discuss any particular impression of it that might be in circulation, but that nothing whatever had been given out about the note and any publication purporting to summarize it was therefore false.

As soon as the communication has been delivered, it will be made public here and in London, under an agreement between the two Governments, in the meantime, officials decline to give any intimation as to its contents.

THE LIQUOR LICENSE AMENDING ACT

(Canadian Press Special)

TORONTO, April 1.—After sitting thirteen hours with only a luncheon recess, the Legislature early this morning passed on the third reading the Liquor License Amendment Act with some amendment suggested by the Opposition which gives the new central commission power to suspend or cancel any license without reference to the Governor-in-Council. The House also passed Dr. Pyne's Bill authorizing the Government to appoint a commission to manage the Ottawa separate schools which refused to comply with the regulations of the Education Department.

Turks are Massing To Defend Capital

Thousands on the Peninsula and at Adrianople—Short of Munitions

BUCKAREST, April 1.—(Special.)—A correspondent has obtained from a reliable source details of the situation at Constantinople. The Turks have between 180,000 and 200,000 soldiers in their first line, but they need munitions. Four divisions are on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and the remainder are at Adrianople and between that town and Constantinople.

There are 600 German officers. The Ottomans are defended by German officers and soldiers.

The Turks fear an attack by Bulgaria. Almost all the Ottoman Senate, as well as the Grand Visier and the heir to the throne, would like to make peace, but they lack the courage to overthrow Enver Pasha. The German Ambassador practically governs Constantinople.

The guns from Adrianople which were recently sent to Constantinople have been fixed at different points outside the city. The mosque at St. Sophia and the new Seraglio garden are surrounded by batteries.

Roumania political circles do not believe that Bulgaria will come in before further bombardment of the Dardanelles gives them assurances of the success of the allied fleet.

GET PAPER FOR THE WAR NEWS

How Lord Kitchener Cleverly Baffled a Friend

LONDON, March 21.—Lord Kitchener's reticence about the military secrets of the war is proverbial. A civilian friend, however, was bent on extracting from the silent war minister a confidential opinion about the recent developments of the campaign. Accordingly, he invited Lord Kitchener to dine with him privately one evening. But throughout the meal he could not make up his mind to tackle his friend directly on the point, and all indirect suggestions failed. After dinner, the host escorted Lord Kitchener back to the war office. There, mustering his courage, boldly inquired "Well, what's the latest about the war?"

"Let's get an evening paper and see," said Kitchener.

FRENCH STEAMER SUNK BY GERMAN SUBMARINE

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, March 31.—There is reason to believe that a French steamer was torpedoed last Tuesday by a German submarine in the English Channel. The name of the vessel has not yet been learned. Two members of the crew were saved, but it is feared seventeen were drowned.

The periscope of the submarine had hardly been sighted when torpedoes struck the steamer in the engine room. No warning was given. The ship foundered in three minutes. A British destroyer subsequently picked up the survivors and landed them at Dover.

The vessel was carrying a general cargo consigned to South African purchasers, when she was hit.

The Flaminian, the second British liner sunk by the Kaiser's under-water craft within three days, was a new boat, having been built at Hull in 1914. She was a steel steamer engaged in freight traffic. Sometimes she carried passengers, but is believed to have none on board when she left Glasgow on her last trip.

Liberals Withdrew Porogation Notice

Toronto Globe Gets Advertising in House—Votes for Soldiers Bill

OTTAWA, March 31.—Hon. C. J. Doherty gave notice today that he would move tomorrow the resolution to give the electoral franchise to all the soldiers and sailors at home or abroad.

Hon. Robert Rogers, on a question of privilege, called attention to a change in The Toronto Globe that the Government was hastening prorogation so as to suppress scandals in the Public Accounts and Road Committees, and that a notice for the usual Easter prorogation had been withdrawn for that purpose. Mr. Rogers said the notice was put on the order paper by the clerk as usual and its withdrawal was at the request of members of the Opposition.

"Neither in this House nor in the Public Accounts Committee," said the Minister, "has the Government shown any desire to shield any one or repress anything that it is in the interest of this House or the country to know."

He added that the Government was ready to go on Saturday and Monday and Tuesday if necessary.

Sir George Foster said the House would sit on Monday. Some new measures had been brought down that were rather unexpected, but they were not serious.

German Circulars In Western Canada

Maple Creek, Sask., Sent Copy of One to the Yorkshire Post

LONDON March 31.—The Yorkshire Post has received from Maple Creek, Saskatchewan, a copy of a circular which the Germans are circulating throughout Canada. It is compiled by the Bremen Chamber of Commerce and primarily is addressed to Germans in Canada.

"The surprising thing is that Germany should think it worth their while to bombard Canada with documents as false and silly," declares The Post "Even if it be said that this memorandum is meant to influence Germans in Canada, we must remember the loyalty to Great Britain, which has characterized not a few prominent Germans in Canada although a few either of these we must leave Canadians to judge."

$2,000,000 FOR PENSIONS

OTTAWA, March 31.—Supplementary estimates for the coming fiscal year of $6,657,547.16 were tabled in the House of Commons this afternoon by the Minister of Finance. They bring the total estimates for the year up to $196,392.22 but do not change the fact that this year's appropriations are some $17,000,000 less than those for 1914-15, since to the latter have had to be added amounts for the supply of seed grain to western settlers, etc.

The supplementary estimates include $175,000 for relief, other than seed grain, for Alberta and Saskatchewan settlers; $2,000,000 for pensions and the Esquimalt graving dock; $1,127,400 for branch lines for the Intercolonial, etc.; $21,280 for public buildings in Quebec; $257,750 for harbors and rivers in Quebec.

The total amount chargeable in consolidated fund is $4,630,140.16 and to capital fund $2,027,406.

STRUGGLE GOING ON AT NUMEROUS POINTS

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 1.—The War Office daily statement says fighting is going on at numerous points on the front. To the southwest of Perenne we blow up successively four mines. North of Berry-au-Bac we blew up a mine southeast at the moment the Germans were working on it, and followed this explosion with a rain of shells from our guns. A German observation post disappeared in the gap caused by the explosion.

VIENNA FORTIFYING

ROME, March 31.—The citizens of Vienna are officially warned not to visit the wooded hills that surround the city. These are fortified annually in spring and summer, but fortifications are now being erected, and the hills are practically closed to the public. Those who disobey the orders of the military authorities will run grave risk of being shot by the military patrols, gendarmes and police, who are ordered to use their arms, especially at night.

The suburbs were fortified last autumn after the Russian occupation of Lemberg and the new precautions are the result of the fall of Przemyzl.

SNOW SAVED ENGLAND FROM ZEPPELIN VISIT

Copenhagen Advices to London Show That Two Airships Were On Way When Violent Storm Forced Them to Turn About

LONDON, March 31.—How a snowstorm may have prevented a Zeppelin invasion of England is set forth in despatches received from the Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail. He says two large dirigibles coming out of Schleswig were seen proceeding westward Monday afternoon. They passed over the island of Schier Monnikoog, bound evidently for some part of the English coast.

DUTCH CARGO BOAT CHASED AND CAPTURED BY BRITISH

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 1.—The Exchange Telegraph Company says a large Dutch cargo boat, the Lodewijk Van Nassau has been brought into New Haven by two British torpedo boats which chased and caught her near Brighton. She is suspected of supplying German submarines with fuel oil.

It is said that the members of her crew appear to be German. She has a cargo of oil on board and this is now being examined. When hailed by the torpedo boats, the steamer refused to stop.

Two More Steamers Sunk by Germans

Vessels Attacked by Submarine Off Scilly Islands—Crews are Saved

LONDON, April 1.—Special—Two more British steamers have been attacked and sunk by a German submarine off the Scilly Islands, the Flaminian and the Crown of Castle. Both were sunk by the U-28. The crews of both were saved.

The Flaminian, a vessel of 3,500 tons, bound from Glasgow to Cape Town, South Africa, went to the bottom on Monday, but the first news of her loss came today, when her crew of thirty-nine men was landed at Holyhead.

The vessel was carrying a general cargo consigned to South Africa purchasers, when she was hit.

The Flaminian, the second British liner sunk by the Kaiser's under-water craft within three days, was a new boat, having been built at Hull in 1914. She was a steel steamer engaged in freight traffic. Sometimes she carried passengers, but is believed to have none on board when she left Glasgow on her last trip.

CAN THIS BE TRUE, OR IS TRUTH HANDLED CARELESSLY?

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 1.—The headquarters staff daily report says: We have captured the hamlet of Klein-Zwarlen with forty-five Belgian prisoners. French troops have penetrated a small portion of the outer trenches to the west of Pont a Mousson. In outpost engagements near Lonreille the French suffered considerable losses. In the eastern theatre Russian attacks have been repulsed at several points. During March we captured altogether 55,

BRITAIN'S WAR SINEWS ARE YET TREMENDOUS

LONDON, April 1.—(Special.)—The capacity of Great Britain in meeting the financial burdens imposed by the war is indicated in the Treasury returns for the fiscal year just ended. The returns show that the revenue for the year amounted to £230,684,080 (1,123,470,400), an increase of nearly £28,500,000 ($142,500,000) over the revenue of the previous year.

Last year's Budget anticipated an expenditure slightly over £207,000,000 ($1,035,000,000), but expenditure has been just under £560,500,000 ($1,767,500,000) increase.

To meet this £294,000,000 ($1,480,000,000) was raised by war loan issues. At the end of the year the balance in hand in the Treasury amounted to £83,450,952. ($471,254,760.

OTTAWA STILL HAS $90,000,000 IN GOLD

OTTAWA, March 31.—The amount of gold still held here for the Bank of England account is said to be now approximately $90,600,000. Only $18,000,000 of the original gold shipments from New York have been returned.

Finance Department officials say that the New York figures in excess of this, represent shipments by the Bank of Montreal and other Canadian banks, which should not be confused with the special gold deposits belonging to the Bank of England here.

Cocking Main Stopped by Police

Fifteen Sports Discovered in a Kingston Barn—All Was Ready for Contest

KINGSTON, March 31.—With the stage all set for a cock fight, fifteen men who gathered in a barn on Upper Princess street, in Williamsville, were given quite a surprise on Monday night, between 9 and 10 o'clock, when Sergeant Robert Nesbitt, and a squad of police raided the place.

The police were just a little too early for the fight however, but were just in time to nip it in the bud.

The visit of the constables caused some excitement. They had been given the tip that a main was to be pulled off in this barn and so hurried out to raid the place. The men in the barn had no intimation whatever that the police were about to make a round-up.

Sergeant Nesbitt had with him Constables Mullinger, Timmerman, Jenkins, Nicholson and Naylon. They surrounded the barn and then at the signal they entered. Immediately there was a scramble for the door. Many of the inmate took a chance in hiding in the hay, but the most did not work. At the request of the officers they immediately surrendered themselves and then they were allowed to go.

Owing to the fact that there was no fighting in progress, it is not likely that there will be any charge made against the men. No action had been taken up till early Tuesday afternoon.

It is stated that a sawdust ring had been prepared for the bouts and that about half a dozen lively birds were on hand ready for the fray. The birds, so it is stated, were carried to the barn in suit cases. They had been weighed just before the constables appeared on the scene.

It is understood that out of the fifteen men rounded up in the barn, all are married with the exception of three or four, and that all are well-known citizens.

Fired at The Police Officer

Daring Criminal Made His Escape After Exchange of Shots

TORONTO, April 1.—(Special)—Surprised in a pool room at 656 Queen Street West, last night, Alfred Connolly, wanted by the police on a number of charges of theft and burglary, made his escape after engaging in a revolver duel with Detective Nicholls, on Palmerston Avenue and in a lane running west off Palmerston Avenue. Connolly's final shot fired in the lane, passed through the left sleeve of the officer's overcoat and underwear, but failed to penetrate the flesh. Nicholls believes he wounded the desperado, as Connolly staggered against a wall when Nicholls fired his fourth shot at him. The fugitive, however, recovered himself, and by climbing over a fence and running through several outbuildings in back yards put the detective off his track and escaped.

KITCHENER ADVOCATES BANISHMENT OF LIQUOR

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 1.—Kitchener is among the first of the prominent men in England to respond to the suggestion of abstension from the use of alcohol in King George's letter to Lloyd-George. The War Secretary today issued instructions that no alcoholic beverages are to be consumed in his household for the duration of the war.

RUSSIANS DEFEAT TURKS LOSS TWELVE THOUSAND

AN AIRSHIP THAT COULD DROP TONS OF BOMBS ON THE ENEMY

Manitoba Man Says He Has Wonderful Machine, But Wants to Sell Farm First

TORONTO March 31.—Mr. T. L. Hamilton, of Listowel, received a business letter from a man in Robbin, Man., the latter part of which reads as follows: "I have a farm two and one-quarter miles from Robin, good clay sub soil and good rich loam on top. I have $1,700 worth of improvements on this quarter. It is worth $2,500, but I will sell it for $2,500 cash, as I have an airship that will go 100 to 150 miles per hour and will carry twenty to forty people with it and seven to nine tons of nitro glycerine, and twenty barrels of gasoline, and I have steel sides and four guns on that will shoot twenty-five miles and four engines inside of it. So if you know of someone that will buy my farm, I am anxious to go to the front and help England out. With twenty airships I could clean Germany out at seven miles high, her fortifications, armies and navies. So if you know of a friend that wants a good farm, I have it."

INCREASES SUM FOR COST OF SEED GRAIN

At the commencement of this afternoon's session of the Legislature, which began at 2.15 instead of three as usual, Hon. Mr. Hearst moved that the bill to set aside $100,000 for seed grain for the use of the settlers be sent back to committee and the sum increased to $150,000. Mr. Hearst explained that it had been found during the discussion of the bill in committee that at least $125,000 would be necessary to supply the seed grain needed by the settlers in Northern Ontario. He proposed that the sum be made $150,000 so as to provide a fair margin to work on. This proposal was approved by the House and the bill was given its third reading with the sum enlarged to $150,000.

BELLEVILLE

The Rev. Alfred Young of Wellington, who arrived in the city yesterday, delivered his famous lecture in the Mess Room at the Barracks, to the troops stationed there. Col. Preston and others of the officers were present. Starting from Union Station, Toronto, the Lecturer proceeded to Montreal, where the troops were embarked on the great ocean liners. Splendid pictures, representation of the fleet and their convoys were shown, the welcome at Plymouth, England, scenes in Exeter, Bath, Bristol, Cardiff and other great historical centres were graphically described. Visits were paid also to Oxford, Windsor, Salisbury, Weymouth, Channel Islands, Southampton, Portsmouth, Ostend, Dinant, Louvain, Paris, etc, etc.

The lecturer has a magnificent set of pictures, and his personal experiences, his fund of humor, splendid delivery and vast amount of information impressed without more of any description mark him out as a lecturer of no mean order.

At the close of the lecture Col. Preston called for three cheers for the lecturer, which were accorded with a zest which left no room for doubt that the great crowd of men had thoroughly enjoyed the trip.

KINGSTON

Lieut. Lockett of the 14th signallers has vacated his position as signalling officer, and has been promoted to the rank of captain.

An effort is being made to have the recreation room in the garage building on Bagot and Queen streets turned over to the 25th battery after it is vacated by the 21st battalion.

All married men in the R.C.H.A. have been placed on the married strength from the first of last October until the close of the war. The order affects three members of the band, a bitterman and one member of the staff.

Orders have been received to stop recruiting for the 7th Brigade of artillery and the ammunition column, as sufficient men have already been secured for the entire brigade.

All preparation has been made for the accommodation of the seventy students from Toronto University who will arrive in the city today in charge of Lieut. Allen of the 27th Battery. These men will all go to the artillery, and have the material necessary to make the best of soldiers.

The R.S.A. had written exams for captaincies in training and accounts, and for lieutenants on equipment and ammunition. Both exams were written. The non-coms. of the class had the same exams as the lieutenants.

Forty-seven men from Lindsay have arrived in the city for the 21st Battalion in charge of Captain Porter. The men are the pick of 200 recruits and will make the best of material for the 21st Battalion. They have been examined by four medical officers and only one man had any kind of even a minor blemish. The men were drilled in artillery park this morning by Sergt. Harrison.

All the men of the 21st will be equipped with the Web equipment before leaving the city for the front. All the officers have been given this equipment. The open cut coat of the officers will also be discarded and the upright collar substituted, so as not to be so distinct from that worn by the men. The rank trimmings will also be discontinued on the sleeve, and will be put back on the shoulder, where, it is claimed, it is less conspicuous.

LADY BRIGGS OFFENDED

NEW YORK, March 31.—Lady Briggs, author and lecturer in an address before a meeting of the Murray Chapter of the Imperial Order, Daughters of the British Empire, Brooklyn, made the development of the British Navy, its traditions, and the character of the officers and sailors who man the fighting machines, of the sea flight of the Union Jack, but on account of the impatience of the audience the address was ended abruptly before the speaker had reached her intended finish.

Lady Briggs' address was interrupted by the distribution of ice cream and cake and the consequent hum of conversation, so that she turned to the Regent, Mrs. Florence Ritchie, and asked if she could go on under these circumstances. Mrs. Ritchie asked the members to give their attention to the distinguished speaker, whose husband was an Admiral in the British Navy.

A member made a motion that another meeting be called for the purpose of listening to Lady Briggs, as the afternoon was getting late, but Lady Briggs explained that she could not come and cut her address short.

MARSH AND HENTHORNE RECEIVE ORDER FOR WAR SHELLS

We are informed by Col. Marsh of the Marsh & Henthorn foundry people that his firm has received an order to manufacture a large quantity of an 18-lb. high explosive shell. This shell is not of the shrapnel variety. The firm are to immediately install the necessary tools and machinery and then the manufacture will be proceeded with in about two weeks. The firm expects to employ from thirty to forty extra hands when the work is fully under way.

FRENCH MONGREL DOG MADE MASTER'S RESCUE

The Paris Figaro makes itself responsible for the following story of the adventures with the French army of a dog that rejoices in the name of Fend Fair. Fend Fair, it explains, was born in Algeria of unknown parentage, a street arab, that fended for itself from puppyhood. Intelligent and affectionate, he devoted himself passionately to the master that chance gave him. The way called his master to serve under the colors and the dog managed to get on board with him. From Marseilles he crossed France and went to Belgium, taking part in the grand retreat. He was in the victory of the Marne, shared the ills of the regiment in the trenches, and one night the trench which his master was helping to guard was blown up by a shell. Fend Fair's master was buried, wounded. The dog scented out the exact place where he lay and started digging, until at last he succeeded in summoning the stretcher bearers, who saved the wounded soldier from what seemed certain death. The man has been taken to the American hospital at Neuilly and is recovering, while the hospital rules have been relaxed so as to avoid the separation of the two friends.

AN M. P. WHO KNITS

Mr. Watson Declares It Helps a Man Against Ennui

LONDON, March 31.—The London Times says that, while for women knitting is said to be the equivalent of a pipe, the great sedative, the average man dislikes to see a man knit.

J. Cathcart Wason, the Scotsman who represents the Falkirk burghs and land Islands in Parliament, and who is 6 feet 3 inches tall, disagrees with this view. Mr. Wason is probably the only member of Parliament who can knit a pair of stockings. He is certainly the only one who has included the tedium of long railway journeys by knitting in the smoking rooms.

"Knitting is certainly a great relief. I am the very poorest of knitters," he said, "and have never been able to attain any proficiency over the needles. Knitting is an extremely agreeable occupation, even if you drop stitch and have to run to your nearest woman friend to pick them up."

Mr. Wason refused to be "drawn" on a rumor that he is knitting socks for soldiers.

LIEUT. BOTTOMLEY DISMISSED

OTTAWA, April 1.—Special—The militia department yesterday confirmed the cable report of the dismissal from the position of a paymaster of the first Canadian contingent of Lieut. John Bottomley. He was short in his accounts.

Bottomley comes from Niagara Falls, and was formerly a lieutenant in the 44th Regiment. He enlisted at Valcartier last August.

PICKLES AND GIN FOR BABY

NEW YORK, March 31.—Judge Blair decided that a mother who would feed a six-months-old baby pickles and then give it gin for the stomach ache was not a proper person to have the custody of the child. The case came before the court on the application of Joseph Fiss for the custody of his three-year-old son pending a suit for separation.

Coroner's Jury Investigates Death

Mathew Switzer's Demise Caused by Gangrene. Culminated From Frost-Bite—Recommendations by Jury

"We, the jurors empanelled to enquire into how and by what means Matthew Switzer came to his death, find:—

"That at the County House of Refuge on March 27th, 1915, deceased died from gangrene culminating from frost bites, after having received every attention from the House, physician and attendants.

"We blame no one attached to Mr. Wilson, Superintendent, or any of the assistants.

"We would recommend to the proper authorities that a night watchman and a trained nurse be procured in addition to the present staff."

Such was the verdict rendered last night at the coroner's inquest to enquire into the circumstances of the death of Matthew Switzer, aged 100 years, who died at the House of Refuge. Dr. Yeomans presided over the enquiry and Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, conducted the examination.

Sergt. Harman testified as to the summoning of the jurymen, who were competent to act.

Mr. R. C. Cole testified that he, as an employe of Tickell & Son, removed the body from the House of Refuge to the firm's undertaking establishment.

Mr. T. E. Wilson, superintendent of the institution, testified that Switzer was an inmate of the House of Refuge for one year and seven months. He was able to be about and help himself, but was somewhat childish. He was ill some 10 or 11 days before he died. Some time during the night of March 15th deceased, unknown to any person, left the building and made his way across the bay on the ice to a farm house in Prince Edward County. Next morning witness went after him and brought him home. The night was cold and Switzer's hands were frost-bitten. He travelled about three miles that night. In answer to an enquiry Mr. Wilson said there were at present 88 inmates, and the attendants about the institution were himself, a matron, nurse, a helper and a cook. There was no night watchman about the place. Switzer had wandered away twice previously. Deceased had said that he wanted to get back to Camden East, where he was born. He ferried across the bay at sunrise, the witness had been informed.

Dr. J. A. Faulkner, physician of the House of Refuge, testified that he knew Switzer and visited him professionally on March 17th. Deceased was suffering from a cold and his hands were swollen, evidently the result of having been frost bitten. Gangrene set in and death resulted in a few days. No doubt exposure had contributed somewhat to the man's death. Everything possible was done for the man. Witnessed considered that a night watchman should be on the building. He considered that the attendants were inadequate for the number of inmates, many of whom were helpless. Mr. Wilson did everything he could for the inmates.

John Reid, an inmate of the institution testified that he was perfectly satisfied with the treatment he received there at the hands of Mr. Wilson. Witness knew deceased and the latter said after he was brought back that he had stepped on the ice and was very cold. On a previous occasion deceased wandered away and narrowly escaped being drowned in a marsh.

This concluded the evidence and Dr. Yeomans reviewed the evidence to the jurymen, after which they retired and brought in the above verdict.

Memel Dash Just a Raid

Fewer Than 3,000 Russians Said to Have Made It

PETROGRAD, March 31.—The Germans have issued their usual clever perversions of truth about the Memel affair. It appears that the capture of Memel was a spotting venture of an unconsiderable body of national reserve men, fewer than 3,000 in number. They routed two German landsturm regiments, seized Memel, compelled the Germans to concentrate thither some regiments of their reserve army and even disturbed the tranquility of the holiday-making German fleet at Kiel.

What they did not do was to take 8,000 hostages from Memel and afterward allow the victorious Germans to recover them gloriously, as the German version has it. These 3,000 fugitives, it there were so many, fled from Memel and took the only route on which no fighting was in progress, namely in the direction of Krotingen, where they quietly awaited the arrival of the German regiments.

It is interesting to note what the Russians found in a mass of mail captured in the village of Dommic, near the Pilica, when the Germans were driven out. It appears the soldiers had just been writing home, and among the letters found were many containing complaints about the hardships of the war. From the statements of the men they have to remain in the trenches without food until they had starved and the German losses are appalling. It is hope that "this accursed war" will soon end is frequently expressed.

Shocking helmet work by troops killed in the fighting north of the Vistula bear the letters F. R. on an eagle on the front with customary motto. They are a few inches heavier than the familiar leather pickelhaube, but are exactly the same shape and painted a nice green all over, including the brass spike and eagle, thus avoiding the necessity of a khaki covering. They have an inadequate leather lining, which must cause torture to the wearers when there is a severe frost.

The old pattern rifles in the hands of men wearing these novel helmets are of dates as far back as 1891, and they have new barrels shrunk over the original barrels, evidently to give strength to permit the use of modern explosive. The bayonets fit at the side and not under the barrel.

Back of the sight is the old-fashioned slide stocking. Some very clumsy old cavalry carbines were also among the trophies.

Cornless Feet

Are Very Common Now

A few years ago they were not. People cured corns and kept them. Or they used an inefficient treatment.

Then the Blue-jay plaster was invented. That ended corn pain instantly for everyone who used it. But it also gradually undermined the corn, so in two days it all came out. And this without one bit of pain or soreness.

One told another about it, until millions came to use it. Now those people never keep a corn. As soon as one appears, they remove it.

We urge you to do that. Prove Blue-jay on one corn. If you hesitate, let us send you samples free. If the pain does stop—if the corn does go—think what it means to you. It means a lifetime without corns. Your own friends, by the dozens, probably, know that this is so.

LETTERS FROM ABROAD

FROM ERNEST PHILIPS

France, March 14, 1915.

Dear Mother:

I thought I would drop you a few lines just to pass away the time, saying I am still in the best of health, hoping this finds you all the same. No need for you to worry about me at all, dear Mother, as I am in really no danger whatever. Am as happy as a lark and having the best time of my life. Have been driving on one of the ammunition wagons lately, therefore am billeted about a mile in the rear of the firing line, together with the rest of the drivers and spare gunners; make a trip up to the guns about twice a week with ammunition, but the rest of the time am in the rear.

Our battery has been in action against the enemy since the first of March and are doing good work. No casualties have occurred as yet, and the boys are all well and happy. Harry is billeted only a short distance from us, and he is fine and dandy. Haven't seen him myself since the first of the month, but was talking to one of the fellows from the Ammunition Column yesterday and he told me about him.

Well, dear Mother, I am still looking for a letter from you and also looking for the articles which I wrote for about a month ago. I mailed your card just lately; hope you received it safely. Received Amy's letter stating that she got the one which I sent and was very glad to hear from her.

Be sure and write and let me have your opinion of them. No doubt you think I am getting fair-sized[illegible] time. Believe me, Mother, this is some life. Jack should have come with us; it would certainly have done him a lot of good. Tell him he had better sign up with the Third Contingent. Ha! ha! Nothing doing, eh? Elsie needn't worry. I'm look after him.

Well, Mother, guess I will close for this time, hoping to hear from you soon. With best wishes and lots of love to all.

ERNEST PHILLIPS.

FROM T. MAHONEY

Dear Mother—Just a line to let you know I am quite well and hope you are good. Tell her she is the same. Well, Mother, it is quite a long time since I had a letter from you. I have not had an answer to my last letter yet, but trust to get one soon, and also hope things are going along good at home. I am writing this letter in the trenches, and I hope some day I will be writing one in a better place. Dear Mother, you must not expect a long letter with all the details in it as we are not allowed to say anything regarding them. This is all this time, so give my best respects to all at home. With kind love to you both, from your ever loving son.

THOMAS.

LITERARY NOTES.

ROD AND GUN

"The Steelhead" the Great Game Trout that comes out of the Ocean, is the subject of an article by the well known writer Bonnycastle Dale in the April issue of Rod and Gun in Canada published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont. "The Wise Fish" by Wilfrid Hubbard, is a humorous ichthyological dialogue in which Sol Pike, Jerky Minnow, Bill Tench, Peter Perch, Johnny Roach, Tim Gurgeon, Jimmy Grayling and others of their ilk take part. The Forest Fire Problem in Algonquin Park is dealt with by W. L. Wise and the fishing department and Guns and Ammunition department are of special interest this month. In addition to those named there are many other stories and articles of interest to the readers of an outdoor magazine.

SAYS POEM LURED WIFE

MINEOLA, L.I., March 31.—Joseph St. John of Hempstead today sued W. A. Browne, a fifty-year-old bachelor of the same place, for $10,000 damages for alienation of Mrs. St. John's affections. The St. John family formerly lived in Browne's house, and he boarded with the family. So friendly were the relations that one of the three St. John children was named for Mr. Browne.

Last Fall trouble broke out in the household and on Jan. 14 Mrs. St. John obtained a decree of separation against her husband for non-support, after he had spent three months in jail for failure to pay alimony.

St. John cites as part of his evidence the following verse, written by Browne to Mrs. St. John:

A passing ray of sunshine nun
A touch of love, a sweet love,
Has brightened a heart that was lonely
Praise be her name above.
'Twas a touch of the sweetness of kindness
From a heart that was willing to give,
'Twas a true, gentle hand of the Christian
That soother in comfort might live,
May your years be filled with life's blessings,
And from sorrow and trouble be free,
In the prayer of the soul you befriended
Whose thoughts will ever be of thee.

EFFICIENCY IN THE CARE OF FRUIT

Although a shade peculiar in its expression, we cannot but agree, to a material extent, with The Hamilton Herald in its viewpoint on the neglect of our applegrowers in properly caring for the fruit of their vast orchards—the pride of Ontario. True it is that efficiency in this regard is as essential to success as the spirit manifested by Britain's greatest enemy in seeking to dominate the world.

"While there is much in German methods to avoid," says the Herald, "there is much also that is worthy of imitation. It would be well for Canada if the people and governments of this country had more of the splendid efficiency in organization and systematization, which, more than any other single cause, has placed Germany in the front rank of the world powers. This efficiency is seen in every activity, but in none more than in the conservation of the national resources. Looking far ahead, the men at the head of affairs foresaw the necessity for husbanding the country's food supplies; a decree goes forth regulating the consumption of food, the requisite machinery is promptly provided, and immediately the sixty-odd millions of Germans are put on reduced rations. What every individual may eat, and how much, is prescribed, innocuous consumption is regulated, and the foodstuffs supply of food is made to last months longer than it would have lasted under ordinary conditions.

"Contrast this example of thorough national organization with the wasteful inefficiency of Canadian methods. Last fall we had one of the greatest apple crops in the country's history. There was a large surplus. Apples were a drug on the market. Hundreds of tons of apples were left to rot on the ground in this district alone, because it did not pay to market them. Now there is a scarcity of apples. The supply that was saved and stored has not proved sufficient to meet the demand even so early in the season as the present, and prices are rapidly rising. Especially apples, except in the apple-growing district, will be a luxury which people of small means cannot afford. Here, apples should be among the cheapest of food products.

"When, sometime, German efficiency is emulated in Canada, there will be no wasteful products. The surplus of each season will be stored and marketed at the right times. If not done by co-operative effort, this work will be carried on by the government."

CURRENT COMMENT

Toronto News: "The chief Liberal organs are willing to defame Canada in order to make capital for party."

Somebody is trying to kill off Senator Weeks of Massachusetts as a Republican presidential candidate by claiming that he is Theodore Roosevelt's favorite. Another equally vicious report has it that Colonel Harvey of American tuxedo fame is making overtures to Mr. Roosevelt and the Republican leaders both will be forced to make denial that he is running Republican candidates.

Some voices are being raised in Austria against the "orgies of hate" as practised in Germany. Austria-Hungary might well begin to think that following German leadership is not profitable.

Kitchener says that he is sending reinforcements into France at the rate of 10,000 a day. The futility of the German submarine campaign is shown by the fact that it is unable to interfere with this movement of troops.

The torpedoing of two passenger steamers, involving the loss of scarcely of a hundred innocent lives, they did not commend the Prussian cause to neutral nations. Nor will the report that the crews of the attacking submarines laughed and jeered while their unarmed and helpless victims drowned popularize the German navy with onlookers.

Grain Growers' Guide: "The Liberals claimed that it was unpatriotic for the Government to increase the tariff on British imports, but this argument, coming with poor grace from the Liberal party, because in 1907, it arbitrarily increased the duty on a large portion of British imports without even the excuse of the war or falling revenues. Further, The Guide complains that the Liberal leaders appear to have dropped "Reciprocity" from their programme. It predicts that when the election campaign opens the cry will as usual regard Protection in the East and Free Trade in the West. For this reason, The Guide advocates the return of independents to Parliament.

WOULD ROB ST. PAUL'S

Says Londoner of Souvenir-Hunting Americans

LONDON, March 31.—"There are some Americans who would chip pieces off the cross of St. Paul's and consider it a legitimate means of satisfying their craving for souvenir hunting," said a representative of a tourist agency to the Daily Mail yesterday, in discussing Theodore Roosevelt's declaration that Americans should make it their business to stay at home these days when Europe is in flames. "You could no more keep this class of Americans at home than dry up the Atlantic, and you may depend on it they will get as near the war area as possible in the quest of trophies in the shape of helmets, bullets and pieces of shell. It is, however, only a minority of Americans that go in for this sort of thing."

THE LIBERALS AND AGRICULTURAL IMPLIMENTS

The Liberal demagogues from the West who are making so much noise about the small increase in the duties on certain agricultural implements, seem to think that the farmers of this country are ignorant of their record on the tariff, and especially of their hostility to lower duties on farm implements in days gone by.

It is well that the country should be reminded that in 1910 Conservative, Dr. Schaffner, of Souris, moved a resolution in Parliament calling for a reduction of the tariff on agricultural implements from 17½ to 10 per cent. Every Liberal member from the West in the House at that time forgot the farmer entirely and voted against the resolution. The Conservatives supported it to a man.

The Liberals not only voted against the resolution, they spoke against it. Here is what W. E. Knowles, of Moose Jaw, said on that occasion:

"I shall give the Government hearty support, for I believe the policy of the Government is in the interests of the country."

The "policy of the Government" which the member for Moose Jaw supported was a policy of taxing agricultural implements to the limit.

Then there is that other passionate friend of the farmer, J. G. Turriff, of Assiniboia. Harken th Mr. Turriff in 1910 when the Conservatives asked that the duties be lowered on agricultural implements:

"The Tariff Commission got information all over the country. I do not think the farmers of the West at all events, asked for a great reduction such as is proposed by this resolution on agricultural implements. They asked that the duties be left alone. I shall give the Government hearty support on that question."

Such was the attitude of the men, who are now shouting and raving about the "poor farmer," less than five years ago. And what was the precious stand taken by the Government? Let the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Laurier's Minister of Finance, answer. Speaking against Dr. Schaffner's resolution, he made use of these words:

"By a careful calculation we are advised that the drawbacks we allow are somewhat less than the disadvantage under which the manufacturer is placed by the reduction of the tariff. Even suppose for a moment that he got everything free and had a duty of 17½ per cent. on the implements, would that be an extravagant duty as things go in this country? I am not the proposal of the Hon. Member for Souris, if adopted, would do an injustice to an established industry.

"My belief is that if this motion were passed we would strike a severe blow at one of the great industries of this country. I believe the International Harvester Company would find it to its interests to close up its business in Hamilton, at least so much of it as is devoted to mowers and binders and leave them made at the American branch and bring them in from the United States. The factory at Hamilton is an American concern. With a moderate duty have induced American capital to come into Canada and to establish that great industry and after we have brought it in and established it in Canada I believe that if we were to pass this resolution the company operating that industry would find it profitable to close the Hamilton factory and bring in the goods which they make in the United States."

This is Protectionism pure and undefiled. It is Protectionism from the same Mr. Fielding who was chairman of the Resolution Committee of the celebrated National Liberal Conference of 1893 which gave birth to the policy of "Free-Trade-as-they-have-it-in-England"; the same Mr. Fielding who was wont to refer to the "barbaric instinct of the Protectionist mind"; the same Mr. Fielding who left his editorial sanctum in Montreal the other day to come to Ottawa to couch Mr. A. K. Maclean in his attack on the Government's war budget.

The fact of the matter is that if the Liberal party had wanted to they could have removed the duties from agricultural implements by a mere stroke of the pen. For years they had a standing offer from the United States Government to make farming implements free. Why was not that offer accepted? Why was it not incorporated in the Reciprocity pact of 1911?

What a travesty on honesty it is for Liberals to set up a cry at this late hour about the burdens of the farmer. Could not something else have been made to serve as a better disguise for their real motive of having the people of this country funk their share of the price of this war?

Alberta's Future as Oil Producer

NEW YORK, March 31.—Whether Canada is to be the greatest oil producing country in the world, or whether as a producer of petroleum it is to be another failure, will be decided within the next sixty days, is the opinion of John Reynolds, a petroleum engineer, who has just arrived from Alberta. Mr. Reynolds said that up to last December, when a temperature of 32degrees below zero had made further drilling impossible, 60 wells had been completed in different parts of Alberta, and oil found in paying quantities.

"Only the drill can decide the future of Canada with regard to oil possibilities," said Mr. Reynolds today. "But investigation so far leads me to believe that Alberta will produce oil in larger quantities than Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana and California. The prairie portion of the province looks topographically and geologically even more like an oil country than did Texas, California, or Louisiana in the same stage of development. Within 60 days we should be able to know positively whether the surface promises are to be realized.

"Since 1881, when a geological survey of Canada was made, the presence of gas has been known, and the output at the Medicine Hat and Bow Island gas fields, is 400,000,000 cubic feet a day. This is piped 190 miles into Calgary. It is a well-known fact that where gas is found oil is near. The Canadian Government gives a bounty of 65½ cents for each barrel of crude oil pumped, a sum larger than the value of any but high grade oil in the United States, and the bounty will last still sixteen years to run."

SAYS OPTIMISM OF THE GERMANS IS UNBOUNDED

Neutral Diplomat Thinks Famine Talk Only a Ruse—Manufacturer Found People Disappointed Over Effect of Submarine War

PARIS, March 31.—The Temps publishes the impression of a neutral diplomat's recent visit to Germany. Contrary to his expectations he found no shortage of food, and he thinks reports about this are a scheme of the German Government to arouse feeling against England.

Despite the vast number of wounded he says, the nation's optimism is unbounded, though it is significant that everyone hails as a German victory the French failure to pierce the line of Champagne. The writer continues:

"The people proclaim unanimously that the Russians are certain to be defeated within two months and the French soon afterwards. They hope that France will then make a separate peace, receiving half of Belgium, and join the Germans to crush England."

Towards Austria the German attitude is one of dissatisfaction and contempt, but the press have orders to appear friendly. The Turks, they say, will easily resist the English "bluff" against Constantinople, and Italy will pay later for her treachery.

The articles concludes with this expression of popular opinion: "When Germany finally wins the war, then we will reserve on a more colossal scale than before, as the present conflict shows that our armament is insufficient."

Another Neutral's Story

LONDON, March 30.—A neutral observer, contributing to the London Times, his account of a recent visit to Germany, says:

"A manufacturer, well acquainted with the cotton industry in Germany and England, told me that the much-talked-of cotton famine is slowly approaching in Germany, but their reserves are nevertheless by no means exhausted. The cotton mills are working half time, and countless factories for which cotton is a necessity have closed their doors. The supplies, small as they were, that came from Scandinavia and Holland, have now entirely ceased and everything has to be taken from their own stock, which is diminishing daily."

The observer says that the public is disappointed with the result of the submarine blockade, but everybody agrees that Germany by all possible means humane or other, must prevent England from tightening the grip of the grip of the British navy upon Germany's throat.

"However much they realize that little is being done, they rejoice over the activity of the German submarines in British waters," he says. "At Lonbeck I was told by a naval officer that the German shipbuilding yards were concentrating their energies almost exclusively on constructing submarines. Improvements in these are said to be extensive and trial trips have been made with most satisfactory results. One of them has been out for eighteen days and hope was almost lost when it returned. The crew were in high spirits. I am also informed on good authority that the newest and best type of submarines has not yet been brought into use: and it is extremely reliable and capable of carrying a large number of torpedoes."

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

Haldane's Plea For America's Forbearance

Lord Chancellor Asserts Britain's Fight for Life is no Mere Figure of Speech

CHICAGO, March 31.—Edward Price Bell sends to the Daily News an interview with Viscount Haldane, the British Lord Chancellor, on the progress and promise of the war.

"From the first to last," Mr. Bell says, "the words of the Lord Chancellor—carefully chosen words—seemed to be full of force and fine feeling, deeply serious, unembittered, eloquent, illuminating. I hasten to quote him on an urgent topic.

"We ask you in America—all, whether for or against us, heirs of the early struggles of our races—to realize that when we say we are fighting for life we use no figure of speech. Hyperbole there is in plenty, of course; but this is not hyperbole. We are fighting for life and we ask the forbearance of America while we prosecute the struggle. If we appear in a wholly new situation to go beyond some of the rules of the books, we shall not violate the dictates of humanity and shall not turn back the clock of civilization. We take it that our interests in ending the war quickly—ending it in the only way in which the Allies can afford to do it—ended at all —is also the interest of the United States.

"Germany's submarine warfare on neutral belligerents and neutrals alike is a thing with no analogue. We are compelled to meet it. In devising a plan we have given the fullest study to the interests of neutrals. We have settled upon certain general principles that seem to be more favorable to neutrals than are the hitherto sufficient principles of international law.

"I've had recourse to the full rigors of the conventional blockade, we could claim to confiscate ships and cargoes seeking to evade it. When we wish to do is to spare neutrals all possible inconvenience and injury—spare neutral crews, ships and cargoes—and still throw the last ounce of our naval strength into the effort to break the system that despotism has set in operation against the happiness and prosperity of the world."

U.S. RIGHTLY A FREE LANCE.

"About America, let me say two or three things with all emphasis. We do not claim any right to ask America to come into this war. One has heard it said that our country, as a result of the fate it has had in the security of peace, is so unprepared for war to be relatively negligible in a warlike sense. This notion we do not share. We have not a doubt that America would be a most formidable factor in any war in which it might engage. We do not claim that your country should throw its shares into the scale on our behalf.

"We ask no nation to do this. Such a question is that of peace or war, we think, should be decided by every nation with sole reference to its own view of its duty and deeds. We rest into America's situation. We sympathize with President Wilson in what we regard as his honorable fidelity to his official trust.

"What do you think of the German argument that America should not export ammunition to the Allies?" was asked.

"It seems to be unfair." Lord Haldane said. "For many years Germany was heaping up armaments. She made the most formidable army that has ever existed, and a navy by no means negligible. Her arsenals were filled with munitions. She had selected her own time for a stupendous war of aggression. We were much less prepared. Accordingly, Germany had constructed a great system of strategical railways parallel to the Russian frontier. Russia had done no corresponding thing.

"Now, fully prepared for war, with colossal accumulations of war material, Germany decides upon the moment for war, and declares war. Is there any fairness, any chivalry, in her trying to prevent us, in full accord with international usage, from going into neutral markets to buy the implements that Germany's action causes us so direly to need?

"I am glad to know that American thought rejects the German proposal."

C.P.R. Dedication At San Francisco

Congratulatory Speeches by Railway Officials and Exposition Director

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—Formal dedication of the Canadian Pacific pavilion at the Panama Pacific Exposition was a feature of today's programme. Headed by the Philippine constabulary band and a military escort, directors of the exposition and several C. P. R. officials with a large gathering of visitors paraded through the Avenue of Progress to the Canadian Pacific pavilion.

R. O. Armstrong, C.P.R. publicity lecturer, presided and briefly introduced J. F. Britton, one of the directors of the exposition, who presented Mr. George Ham, representing Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, a bronze plaque commemorative of the occasion. Mr. Britton in an eloquent speech congratulated the company upon its great work in building up the Dominion and for its bands of steel welding together the two great nations in commercial brotherhood. He praised the company for its erection of the splendid pavilion, which was highly creditable to Canada and the C. P. R., and a decided acquisition to the exposition.

Mr. Ham, in accepting the plaque, congratulated the directors of the exposition upon the wonderful work they had accomplished in initiating, organizing and completing the magnificent group of buildings, the like of which had never been equalled in America. The exposition was a monument to the public spirit of San Francisco and California.

Canada, said Mr. Ham, is at war, though at long ranges, and had sent thousands of her sons to the front. Amongst them was a good sprinkling of Americans, and he had the authority of General Sam Hughes for stating that if he lifted his hand two hundred thousand more would enlist under the British flag. Indicative of the kindly feeling of the Teutonic race in Canada, he instanced that Mr. Weigle, a German-Canadian, was the mover of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne in the Canadian Parliament.

While the C.P.R. was Canada's great national highway, its trains ran on its own tracks or on the tracks of connecting lines through nine different States of the Union from Maine to Washington, on the Pacific Coast. Over seventy-five per cent. of the tourists through the Canadian Rockies were Americans. The exercises here of a magnificent Canada building for which the Canadian Government had to be praised and the erection of the Canadian Railway pavilion, formed an educational exposition which would make the Dominion and the Republic more neighborly and cement friendship between both and the grand old mother land beyond the sea.

Chairman Armstrong, who has been an official of the company since its inception, gave the history of the construction of the road, its difficulties and its successes.

The origin, development and effect of the gigantic scheme proved to be a subject of great interest to the audience, which showed approval by giving unflagging attention to the narration.

After the speeches a half-hour was given to moving pictures of Canadian scenery.

PANKHURST IN WARTIME

LONDON, March 31.—"Patriotic fervor draws thunderous cheers in place of old-time jeers" is the way a London newspaper heads an article on Mrs. Pankhurst as a popular war orator. The paper itself is violently anti-suffragette, but honors the war truce which the suffragettes announced at the beginning of the war.

It was only a few days when a speech by Mrs. Pankhurst was a signal for a riot, if allowed to proceed at all. Now she is described by a reporter in these words: "A graceful, dignified figure; the suffrage leader makes as she faces the audience. Over a beckoning black dress she wears a black lace shawl; suspended from a thin gold chain is a burgonette, which she does not use. The Union Jack centered across a curtain of green forms the stage background."

Her women followers still send up floral offerings to the stage, says the reporter. In speaking, Mrs. Pankhurst carefully avoids passion and invective, but she presents her points clearly and tellingly and with conviction. At the finish of her speech, young suffragettes sell postcard souvenirs for a patriotic fund.

THE SUMMER HOLIDAYS

People fortunate enough to be sure of summer vacations have to lay their plans early. This year there are reasons for laying them earlier than ever.

After the early part of May fit past years, thousands were leaving the American shores bound for Europe. By the end of June thousands of school teachers, students and sightseers have also looked to Europe for their summer vacations. Where are all these people going this summer? Owing to the war, not to Europe, and this great army of summer tourists are looking for new fields to explore and new playgrounds to visit. Canada offers just the ideal place, with variety that still suit the most fastidious. Present indications give promise that these resorts are going to have the biggest season in their history, as our cousins from the other side of the International border are looking this way for their objective point this summer. Now is the time therefore for Canadians to make their plans and secure their accommodation in the charming districts that include the following:

Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays, The Maganetewan River, Algonquin Park, Timagami and the 30,000 Islands of the Georgian Bay.

Drop a postal card to C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Union Station, Toronto, for handsome descriptive literature of any of these districts.

Facts for Health Seekers To Ponder Over

"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY

BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

Canadian rights controlled by British and Colonial Press Limited, Toronto.

BARONESS VON SUTTNER
the Authoress

"But if, some day, every man is liable to serve?"

"Oh, nonsense! We shall travel, give Rudolf a pattern education—we will follow our ideals—in working for peace, and we—we will love each other."

The carnival of this year brought with it the usual balls and affairs, from which my mourning kept me. But society as a whole still kept up the mad round of pleasure, although almost every family had sustained its losses. The young people had plenty of opportunities to dance, even if some aristocratic houses did remain closed. Those who had returned safely from the battles were the favorites of the ladies, and all conversations were of the east war and the coming of the needle guns and conscription, with which to win the future victories. Victories! When and over whom? No one had an idea, but nevertheless every if only for a loss at cards—is the universal feeling.

With the coming of spring, once more the "black spot" appeared in the horizon—a "question," as they called it. This time the question was Luxembourg.

Of what great importance was Luxembourg to the world? I must take up my studies again as I had in the former war, and my investigations led me to the following:

Luxemburg belonged to the King of the Netherlands and at the same time to the German Bund. This according to the treaties of 1814-16. Ah, these treaties are themselves the seeds of quarrels. Prussia was privileged to garrison the capital. Now as she (Prussia) had broken with the Bund in 1866, how could she keep this right? That was the "question." With the Peace of Prague the connection was dissolved. Why did the Prussians maintain their right? An intricate affair, to be sure, and of course the only sensible way to settle it would be to slaughter (red) hundreds of thousands. Every enlightened statesman would admit that. The Dutch never valued this possession, and King William III. was planning to sell it to France for his own profit. Secret negotiations were on foot. Quite right, secrecy is the soul of diplomacy. The people need not know anything of such differences. If the matter comes to blows, it is time enough for them to shed their blood. The reason for shedding it is of no importance to them.

In March the Prussians were informed that the King had telegraphed his acceptance to France, and Germany's public opinion was outraged. Who is this "public opinion"? Certain editorial writers, perhaps. The Reichstag discussed the question hotly, but Bismarck remained very cool—secretly he took occasion to make preparations for war with France, and the latter also prepared.

It was the old tune I recognized, and I feared a fresh outbreak in Europe, with so many leaders to poke the fire. One is amazed at such firebrands have they no idea how great is their crime?

Years later I heard of a conversation between the Crown Prince Frederick of Prussia with Professor Simon:

"If France and Holland have already made terms, that means war!"

"You have never seen war or you could not utter that word so carelessly. I have seen it, and let me tell you it is the supreme duty to avoid war if there is any possibility."

This time it was avoided. Luxemburg was declared by a council in London, to be neutral, and Prussia withdrew. Friends of peace breathed again, but many were dissatisfied—not the French Emperor, he wished for peace, but the war party. Many Germans, too, considered the submissive policy wise. But why should not states as well as individuals accept a verdict submissively? Is it not more sensible to do so than to engage in a war, the reason that is not clear? What this London conference attained could always be secured by rulers if they wished to avoid war, and thus accomplish what Frederick III. declared to be their highest duty.

While we are enjoying the mild weather for March, let us remember that something might happen before Spring is finally established.

CANADIAN LOAN IS OVER-SUBSCRIBED

LONDON, March 31.—Allotments of the Canadian Government loan yesterday showed that there was not enough to go round. Applicants for large amounts received only 66 per cent., while small applicants ranging from £50 to £1,000 received full allotments. The successful result of the loan had a good effect on the market.

FOXBORO

For a month our young people have enjoyed a series of Thursday evening tarry-balls at the homes of Mr. Amos Tucker, Mr. E. Caverly, Mr. C. Rose and Mr. C. Gardiner. Their hospitality is very much appreciated by the young people.

The Epworth League is ending the Conference year with programmes of deep interest to all. Following the evening program in discussion on the Ideal Church, we had an excellent evening with the immortal dreamer of Bedford jail. Papers were given under the following heads: Puritanism, Bunyan's early life, Bunyan as a preacher, Bunyan as an author, and Bunyan's country. Then came an evening in discussion on Industry, based on the parable of the talents.

But the great event of the season was on Thursday evening, April 1st. This is not an April-fool joke, but a real grand concert in two parts. The first part is a debate on: "Resolved that devotion to fashion is a greater evil than the tobacco habit." Affirmative side taken by J. B. Shaw and Wm. Preatice. Negative side taken by W. B. Tufts and R. B. McMullen. The second part is a drama entitled "Rebecca's Triumph," given by sixteen young ladies.

Offers Premium On Stolen Bills

TORONTO April 1.—(Special)—The Canadian Express Company is offering one dollar and a half for one dollar bill of January 1911 issue, series M, and numbers from 269,001 to 269,500, in the hopes of tracing Connie Sears, the Lindsay express driver who disappeared two weeks ago, and is thought to have taken with him a shipment of $2000 in bills consigned from Toronto. The offer holds good till April 12. So far not a single one has turned up.

Indian Revolt Quelled by British

SIMLA, India, March 31.—A revolt of 10,000 tribesmen at Tochi has resulted in a battle with Government troops. The tribesmen were repulsed. The following official statement was issued to-day: "Ten thousand tribesmen, composed mainly of Zadrans, collected with a view to attacking Tochi, near the Miramshah post. Government troops under Brigadier-General Vane engaged the raiders at dawn on the 29th, repulsing them completely, killing 200 and wounding 300.

"The Arab's Secret Has Made Thousands Beautiful."

The Joy Of a Perfect Complexion

There is no pleasure to compare with the joy of possessing a perfect complexion. Anyone who has suffered from wrinkles, from sagging skin, knows the delight it would be to once more appear with the fresh bloom of youth and health on the cheeks. Cleopatra, Helen of Troy—what victims of beauty these names conjure up. Yet even they never knew a thing which They led their skins. The secret of their beauty has come down to us and is embodied in 102 Westminster Ave., Toronto, Feb. 19th, 1915.

Dear Sirs:—
I take great pleasure in stating that your 'Usit' has perfectly satisfactory. It does all you claim for it. It is a good skin food, as it leaves the surface smooth and soft. When following your directions, rubbing it well in at night, I find in the morning the wrinkles disappear. After being out in the weather, your 'Usit' skin becomes rough with the sun and wind, I find it's very useful article to use, as it takes away that burning feeling.
I am sure anyone who tries 'Usit' will be perfectly pleased with its effects.
Wishing you every success in placing this in the hands of the public, I remain,

Negro Confident About Results

Also Willard for That Matter—Backers of White Want Long Price

HAVANA, April 1.—(Special.)—Jess Willard has abandoned hard training and from now until he faces Jack Johnson for the world's heavyweight boxing honors at noon next Monday only light work in the gymnasium and a few miles on the road will occupy his attention.

"Certainly I am going to win," was the answer to the query asked him a thousand times. "I have no other thought in mind. I feel stronger than never before in my life. My health is better, my hands are in perfect condition. In fact, if I were not in any superior condition I could not stand it. There are my arguments about winning this fight. Also bear in mind it means a fortune to me to beat Johnson, and I don't mind saying that I have a high regard for money It is incentive enough to make me release every atom of strength I have been hoarding up for the last four months in my strict training."

The negro is supremely confident. He says he will win inside 25 rounds. He has some respect for Willard, but only because Willard is big. In his prediction that he would stop Willard before the twenty-fifth round he seemed to convey the meaning that his fight would be methodical—a ripping fight, in which he would cut down the strength of Willard by snappy, short blows.

Dr. D. T. Laine one of Havana's leading physicians, and formerly a United States army surgeon, who examined both fighters, declared each in prime physical condition and supplemented his remarks with the statement that if the fight is not a "frame-up" it seems utterly impossible for Johnson to lose. Dr. Laine was especially impressed with the energy of the negro and with the coolness and ease with which he performed his daily hardships.

Plenty of money is still being offered on Johnson, but at shorter odds. Quotations now are generally less than 2 to 1. Willard backers are holding off in the hope of getting the former price of 3 to 1.

Reports are being heard with increasing frequency that Johnson is having difficulty in putting on the final edge.

Unusual Hats That Are Usable

The modes of the moment are reflected in the exceptional modes combining simplicity with unusual materials, distinctive designs and skilled workmanship.

Models are now being displayed in our showrooms.

McCrodan & Sills

The drying-out process is said to be extremely difficult for him on account of his age, and he finds it a constant struggle to deny himself water.

It is now evident that Johnson will go into the ring heavier than in any previous fight; probably at 220 or 225 pounds. Otherwise, he appears to be in fine condition. Nevertheless, doubt is expressed quite generally that he can go more than half of the forty-five rounds.

The hot weather of the last two days has made the gamblers cautious in their work. The temperature this forenoon was above 80. The road work of both men was easy.

SENT HIS RESPECTS TO MR. CHURCHILL

LIVERPOOL, March 31.—"Give our respects to your Mr. Churchill." These were the last words of Captain von Weddigen, of the U-29, to Captain Leonard Malley, of the Kilerman liner Andalusian as the crew of the Andalusian put off from the submarine which had just completed the destruction of their vessel.

Captain Malley was able to smile today at the cynical bravado of Captain Weddigen as he talked in his home near Liverpool, sitting with a smashed leg in splints propped up on a chair. He said, "The captain of the submarine took me aboard and down into his cabin, and we sat there over cigars and port while the crew of the submarine opened the injector valve of the Andalusian and set her afire."

Two Killed by Breaking of Saw

EGANVILLE, Ont., April 1.—(Special.)—Hiram Badham, aged sixteen, youngest son of Mr. Geo. Badham of Golden Lake, and William Kilby, aged thirty-seven, son of Mrs. John Kilby, widow, a near neighbor of Badham's, were killed at a sawing bee which was being held at Geo. Badham's Tuesday morning. While the gasoline engine was in operation the rapidly-revolving saw broke, the two parts of which struck the young men on the back of the head, both dying almost instantly.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 640 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable coal mined at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may preempt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivated. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SOLDIERS STAMPEDED BY MENINGITIS DEATH

Two Hundred Men Stampeded and Made for Station—Intended Returning to Their Homes—Officers Persuade Them to Return

The people of this city have a faint idea that something happened in military circles between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock last night. There are those versions of the affair, but none of an authentic nature. It is apparently true, however, that ringleaders from one of the outside towns manifested restlessness and inciting others to follow, started for the station, home with full kits, others less fully equipped, to the number of two hundred or more, making the air fairly vibrate with their voices, while en route to the Grand Trunk station. The art of persuasion, however, was brought to bear with good effect, and following a parley the escampers returned to town.

Belleville was the scene of much excitement last night, when some two hundred soldiers of the 39th Battalion, last mobilized for the third overseas contingent, stampeded as a result of a crash in their camp from spinal meningitis, broke bounds and made for the station with the intention of returning to their homes. Since their mobilization on December 15th there have been members of this battalion have been quartered in the canning factory. When the fatality occurred yesterday they were seized with the fear that they were in great danger and apparently decided on flight in a body, at least to that extent. The officers heard of the intended action and resistance was offered, which resulted in something of a melee before the men left their temporary barracks. They, however, proceeded to the station and at midnight four hundred men were seen after them. A parley took place at the station, with the result that a compromise was reached and the men were promised and accepted billets at the various city hotels, for which they returned shortly after midnight.

Lieut.-Col. Preston, officer commanding the 39th Battalion, when interviewed by The Globe over the long-distance telephone said the situation was entirely under control, He did not think that more than fifty men were concerned in the disturbance, and these he believed had all been rounded up by the picket he had sent out. The men concerned in the trouble were new arrivals at the camp, and had been in as recently as last Saturday and some of them even later. They had come without uniforms, and were unorganized and undisciplined. Yesterday, he said, they had come into possession of some money, drinking had resulted, which led to the disturbance last night.

Canadian Took Many Prisoners

More Than Two Thousand Germans Captured in Recent Encounter

LONDON, April 2.—The latest news of Canadians at the front is that up to two or three days ago at least they had enjoyed a period of comparative inactivity for over a fortnight, and were not expecting this to be broken upon suddenly.

"We are still stuck off the firing line", writes one in the centre of the Canadian forces. "I am not allowed to tell anything about the fighting we did recently, except perhaps to say we took over two thousand prisoners, while the German casualties are estimated at 10,000. These figures are from an official message of congratulation read out to us. All the troops engaged in the line have been strengthened. The chances of the Huns breaking through now appear equal to the chances of a celluloid cat in Hades. The firing during part of the battle was simply terrific. From four in the afternoon till eight next morning our guns were blazing away and the Germans were blazing back. The rifle fire was one never-ending rattle."

STOLEN MAIL BAG FOUND

Colborne Express—The mail bag stolen from the Colborne Post Office on Christmas Eve was found on Wednesday morning by Mr. H. Brisco in the ravine in the C.N.R. station yards, just a few rods from Division Street. It had been ripped open and the bundles of letters dumped out. Some letters had been torn open, but a number of them evidently had not been touched. The fire had apparently set fire to the lot, but only part was burned, as it was drowning at this time. In many instances the addresses have been obliterated by the exposure to the snow and weather. Parties who expected mail at that time might be able to distinguish some of these. It will be necessary to call at the Post Office within one week to get any of it.

MORE STEAMERS SUNK BY GERMANS

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 3.—The crew of the British steamer Lung Point, reported foundered at sea, have been landed at Lisbon and state that their vessel was torpedoed by the German submarine U-28 off Cape Finisterre.

A despatch from Glasgow reports three Tyne trawlers torpedoed and sunk by the German submarine U-40 today. Portions of the crews are missing. A Paris despatch reports a French and British air squadron attacked Dusseldorf and Nurnberg yesterday, doing considerable damage to the military camps there. Both points are in Baden.

RELATIVES GET SHARE OF PRIEST'S ESTATE

TORONTO April 2.—Hon. Mr. Lucas put through a bill in the Legislature this morning respecting the will of the late Father Bergin, who died September, 1913, in the township of Thurlow, Hastings county. He left an estate of $40,000 for the promotion of Roman Catholic institutional work. The will was contested in the courts by his sister, but the action was withdrawn. Under the act passed this morning Father Brophy's brother, sister and some other relatives will receive $40,000 between them.

PLANTS PLACED UNDER GOVERNMENT CONTROL

(Canadian Press Special)

GLASGOW, All motor manufacturing plants in Scotland have been placed under Government control in pursuance of the Government's plan to accelerate the supplying of war material. The best plants in future will run night and day in the production of motor lorries for transport of equipment.

HAVE TO SEND MANY MORE YET

Major Belson Writes Germans Have Advantage in Trench Warfare

ST. CATHARINES, April 3—Special—"Canadians will have to send many more troops before this job is finished", writes Major Belson of the 4th Battalion of the first Canadian contingent in France, "and I hope publication of our casualty lists will stimulate recruiting for the third contingent. The Germans are much better prepared for trench warfare than we are, and their searchlights and star shells play them a great deal. Last night we had a terrific bombardment, which lasted for nearly an hour, and the Germans had no fewer than 2,000 rifles and machine guns sent from Germany aboard various ships. Five steamers have been taken to ports on the French coast to discharge merchandise consigned to or from Germany.

German sympathizers in neutral countries, and particularly in the United States, have been sending quantities of flour and other foodstuffs by parcel post to Germany. To such an extent has the traffic grown in the United States that it has caused a serious problem to the postoffice authorities.

INVASION OF HOLLAND GERMANY'S LATEST PLAN?

LONDON, April 2.—(Special.)—The Star Sketch says Germany has been preparing a dramatic stroke to reassure her people after the fall of Przemysl, and there is reason to believe this stroke is to be an invasion of Holland. Strategic railroads were prepared on the Dutch frontier before the war broke out. Owing to the duplicity of the Krupp firm the guns and armor ordered for the Dutch coast forts have never been delivered. In the event even of partial success, Germany would by this move obtain fresh territory from which she could secure supplies, and with which to bargain at the end of the war. The primary object of the invasion of Holland would be to obtain new North Sea bases from which to threaten Britain."

CANAL WILL BE OPEN TO TRENTON

Mr. J. H. Burnham M.P. is responsible for the statement that the Trent Canal from Peterboro to Trenton will be open for vessels of light draught this spring, and will probably be for full draught also. The only delay might be due to the submarine dredging respecting the Rodgers contract, which will not be finished this season. The completion of the contract is not necessary to develop the canal for light draught steamers this summer.

At the present time the canal is open from Lake Simcoe to Healey Falls, so that no transhipping need be taken in that portion from the Falls to Trenton, where the canal opens out into the Bay of Quinte. Last season the morning Father Brophy's brother, sister and some other relatives will receive $40,000 between them.

U. S. SOLDIER IS KILLED IN RIOT AT COLON

COLON, April 2.—(Special.)—Corporal Langdon of the United States Artillery was shot and killed and three other Americans were injured in one of them seriously, in a riot here yesterday. The soldiers were engaged in a street fight with civilians of the district. The shooting, which resulted in a general fight, was the outgrowth of an argument between a Soldier, who is alleged to have been drinking, and a Panama policeman.

WOMAN TERRIBLY INJURED BY EXPLOSION

(Canadian Press Special)

QUEBEC, April 3.—By an explosion at Hotel Dieu Hospital yesterday Sister Edward, in charge of the Miss Ada Holletier, was terribly injured and cannot live. Just as she entered the disinfecting vault an explosion hurled the steel door against her, fracturing her skull and tearing her eyes from their sockets.

FRENCH FLYING SQUADRON IN MOST DARING RAID

PARIS April 3.—(Special.)—The following official communication was issued last night.

"Our flying squadron dropped thirty-three bombs on the barracks, aeroplane hangars and railway station at Vigneulles, in Woevre. A great number of the projectiles fell on their targets. The aviators were subjected to a heavy fire at close range. Three of them returned with large holes in the wings of their machines, and the canvas of other machines pierced by shrapnel bullets. None of the aviators was hit. All the machines returned to our lines.

"At 7 o'clock this morning, east of Soissons, a German aviator was shot down inside our lines. This is the third aviator to be brought down in 24 hours."

TURKS BEYOND CONTROL OF GERMAN OFFICERS

Real Purpose of Von der Goltz's Mission to Berlin is to Urge The Kaiser to Send More Officers

BRINDISI, April 2.—(Special.)—Reforms arriving here from Turkey report the anti-German hostility in the army is now verging on mutiny. The soldiers resent the German discipline, which is enforced by horse-whipping. Cases of insubordination are very frequent.

An attempt was recently made to assassinate a German colonel in Constantinople, and another officer was mysteriously shot. Several German officers have been murdered in the Caucasus. Two army corps mutinied at Adrianople. One was sent to the Caucasus and the other to Gallipoli.

Field Marshall von der Goltz has gone to Berlin for the express purpose of urging the Kaiser to send more officers to Turkey. If this is not done the Turks will get beyond control.

MERCHANDISE FOR ENEMY SEIZED BY THE ALLIES

Toulon, April 3.—(Special.)—Allied cruisers during the past week seized more than 2,000 parcel post packages sent from Germany aboard various ships. Five steamers have been taken to ports on the French coast to discharge merchandise consigned to or from Germany.

THOUSANDS FOLLOW LEAD OF KING GEORGE

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 3—It is stated that following the lead of His Majesty and Lord Kitchener, many thousands of Londoners and others today pledged themselves to abstain from intoxicating liquors during the war.

A Copenhagen despatch advances that a whole flotilla of German submarines is now in the North Sea.

J. W. BORDEN ADDED TO SHELL COMMITTEE

OTTAWA, April 2.—Special—Militia orders just issued announce that J. W. Borden, Accountant and Paymaster-General of the Militia Department, and brother of Premier Borden, has been added to the membership of the Shell Committee. The duties of this committee are, briefly, to place large orders for shells for the Canadian Government, as well as for the War Offices of Britain and her allies. Col. Bertram of Montreal is Chairman.

EXPRESS THIEF HAS BEEN APPREHENDED

(Canadian Press Special)

TORONTO, April 3—Word was received here by the Provincial Police that Howard Conrylace, express messenger, wanted in Lindsay for the theft of a money package of $3,000, has been apprehended in Edmonton, where he had been spending House Bank bills, formed part of the contents of the package. Inspector Boyd leaves immediately to bring him back.

GENERAL JOFFRE DECORATES BELGIANS

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 3.—The newspaper Eclair has a despatch from Dunkirk stating that General Joffre, in the course of a visit to the Belgian headquarters, where he decorated several Belgian officers with the Legion of Honor, told King Albert and Premier de Broqueville that the war would soon come to an end to the advantage of the Allies.

ALLIES' AIRMEN ATTACKED MULHEIM AND NEUENBURG

LONDON, April 3—(Special.)—An Amsterdam despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says a message from Berlin states that a hostile air craft appeared above Mulheim, Baden, at 5.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon and dropped a bomb which caused considerable material damage.

Another aviator dropped three bombs on Neuenburg. Also in Baden, at 7 o'clock, but the damage done was slight.

Error in Date of Death

Colborg, April 2—All uncertainty as to the death of Pte. George Earle of this town, who fell in action in France on March 2, has been dispelled by a letter received by his mother from Major (Rev.) Wm. Beattie of St. Andrew's Church, Cobourg, chaplain with the 2nd Battalion. It will be remembered that Mrs. Earle received a card bearing her son's signature some time a later date, March 7, than that upon which he was officially reported killed, The official report was in error.

P. R. will shortly run all its passenger trains in and out of the Grand Trunk Central station and will use the Broad street station for freight traffic only.

Polling Hours Are Unchanged

Rural Members Opposed Reform Desired by Urban Colleagues

OTTAWA, April 2.—Polling hours for Dominion elections will remain as they are at present, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. That section of Mr. Doherty's bill providing that the polls open at 8 in the morning and close at 6 in the evening, met with vigorous opposition in the House of Commons last night from nearly all the members representing rural constituencies. Hon. A. E. Kemp, Claude Macdonell and W. F. Maclean earnestly argued for a progressive form, which would permit workingmen, railway employes and commercial travelers more freely to exercise their franchise, but their appeals fell upon the unsympathetic house.

The minister of justice flatly refused to assume any responsibility in the premises on behalf of the government, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, through a long debate, remained silent.

Fred Pardee, the chief Liberal whip, took the position that longer hours for polling would "slacken exhaustion and E. M. Macdonald (Pictou), Mr. Blain (Peel); Dr. Edwards (Frontenac); and many other members, seemed utterly unable to appreciate the conditions prevailing in a large city like Toronto, with vast industrial interests. Most of the Montreal members were present.

Spy Led Charge To His Death

Now Three-Quarters of Scottish Regt. Was Wiped Out

NEW YORK, April 2.—The charge that a German spy was serving with a Scottish regiment is made in a letter received on Wednesday by Mrs. J. S. Meikle, of Hampton, Conn., written by her sister, Mrs. Avia, of Dorking, England.

"We have several young fellows at the front," she wrote, "that we know we receive reports of their hardships and the fearful loss of life. You know the kilted Scottish Fusiliers were killed—in fact, nearly three-quarters of that regiment. The reason was that they had a German spy in the regiment as one of themselves. He gave the order to charge, and though the men thought it strange, the order is never given in the daytime, they did so. But the spy did it and they were shot down, and it is said the spy killed a number himself.

"When the truth was known, the colonel shot the spy, but not in time to save life. The world does not know this, but it is true, as some of the Scottish men we know were there and saw it. They are sending another regiment to replace the loss. The spy question is awful on both sides.

TILL SOIL NEAR TRENCHES

Some Canadian Impressions From the Firing Line

LONDON, April 2—Private Grant, of the Canadian Royal Highlanders, writing his father, the Reverend Duncan Grant, at Sheffield, says that (except for rifle and machine gun duty) at in which I am located shows little signs of being a battlefield. It is only a striking sight to witness the sowers tilling the soil within a thousand yards of the firing line, while only a few hundred yards further back the poppies are blazing their natural lives. Children are playing games even while the shells whistle overhead."

Several Canadian battalions recently have been moved from their previous locations.

A sergeant of the Second Battalion writing to his father at Manchester, says: "My respect for the British Tommy has gone to a hundredfold. First because of the princely way they have acted towards us in the trenches. They gave up their own comfort to eat, then to have cigarettes. What the British Tommies would through this last winter must have been hell. Still, nothing can shake better all the time. When the spirit comes it will be almost unconquerable.

Cornwall Citizen Died from Injury

George Fetterly Caught Foot in Saw Mill Belt While Adjusting

CORNWALL, April 2.—George Fetterley, 42, of Maple avenue, while assisting in cutting wood at the home of Abe Bligh with a power-cutting outfit, was so seriously injured that he died a few hours later. The belt came off the saw and when Mr. Fetterley went to readjust it his foot caught, he was drawn up to the engine and his right leg was mangled so badly that it had to be amputated above the knee. The operation was performed by Dr. Marcellus, assisted by Dr. Dickey, but the patient was so weak that he died a few hours later. He is survived by his wife, his father and mother, one sister, Mrs. Becker, of Buffalo, and four brothers. They live in Yetwood, Alta.; J. Bernice and Earl W., of Toronto, and Oliver of Ottawa.

GERMAN AEROPLANE BROUGHT DOWN AFTER DROPPING BOMBS

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 3.—The following is a War Office official statement; In the regions of the Somme, La Boiselle and Dompierre mining warfare has continued with noticeable advantages for the French. The total number of prisoners taken at the forest of La Petre to the northwest of Pont a Mousson on March 30th to April 1st is more than two hundred, including six officers.

A German aeroplane was brought down yesterday after dropping bombs on Rheims. When fired on it immediately came to earth. Two aviators, who were unhurt were taken prisoners.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

WATCH FOUND

The police have in their possession a watch which was found on the street by Mr. Plumton, and handed over to the police.

WHEEL RECOVERED

Some days ago a bicycle was stolen in this city, being the property of a celestial. The wheel has been recovered, having been found near the toll house at the bay bridge. There is no clue as to who purloined the missing article.

BUSINESS PLACES BURGLARIZED

Some time during Thursday night or early Friday morning, two places of business situated on McAnnany street on the Market Square, were entered. Tufts & Carson's butcher shop was visited and a quantity of meat was stolen. Mr. Sandy Wallace's second hand store was also forced opened and some rings and other articles were taken to the value of probably $25. The police were notified of the affair and every effort is being made to ascertain who committed the depredations.

DIED IN SIDNEY

Mrs. John Young, a resident of Sidney Township, died at an early hour this morning, after being ill about two weeks from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was in her 52nd year, and had lived in the township all her life, being a daughter of the late Mr. Melville Ostrom, deceased. Mrs. Young had been for years a member of the Methodist church. Surviving is the husband but no family. Two brothers, Messrs. Austin and Abner Hogle of Trenton, survive.

THEY ATE SUGAR

A party of young men and lads left Belleville yesterday afternoon, and journeyed to Sidney to sugar bush on the 3rd concession of Sidney. As the roads were in good condition a very pleasant drive was made going and on the returning trip. Mr. Hubbel proved a good host, and put large quantities of taffy, maple sugar and syrup at the disposal of his guests. Refreshments were served, and early in the evening the merry-makers started for home, all reporting the day's outing most times.

EASTER MARKET

The Easter market was to-day, as anticipated, well attended. Produce was offered for sale and the prices realized were good. Fresh dairy sold for sold at from 30c. to 35c. per pound, according to quality and quantity; fresh eggs from 19c. to 21c. per dozen. Dressed poultry was in fair scarce and commanded high prices' Chickens sold at $1.50 up to $2.00 per pair. Garden produce was quite plentiful and was disposed of at an early hour. Maple syrup sold at 30c. and 40c. per quart, according to quality. The butchers of the city made an excellent display of meat of the finest quality.

Marvellous Accuracy

The electrically balanced scales that weigh the Purest Spices for Salada are accurate to minute proportion. If you use the basis of buying tea in bulk you will have noticed the delicate flavour of Salada. Remember just a teaspoonful makes two cups. Full weight of clean fresh tea inside the sealed packet—what you get when buying "SALADA."

EDWARD DOYLE

The funeral of the late Edward Doyle took place yesterday morning at 9.30 from the family residence 22 Alexander St. to St. Michael's Church, and then to St. James Cemetery. Rev. Father Corrigan conducted the services at the church and at the grave. Many paid their last respects to the deceased, who was very popular in this city. The floral offerings were most beautiful and numerous, also many mass cards from the friends. Among those attending the funeral were representatives of the civil service, of which the deceased was a member, city officials and citizens of every class. The pall bearers were: Alfred Gillen, E. J. Butler, Thos. Cushing, D. M. Waters, Donald Patterson and H. L. Hyman.

ANNUAL SALE OF HOLSTEIN CATTLE

Seventy-one Head Sold—Total Amount Realized 10,080—Many Buyers and Spectators in Attendance

On Thursday afternoon the annual sale of Holstein cattle took place in this city, being under the auspices of the Belleville District Holstein-Friesian Breeders' Club. There were a large number of buyers from various parts of the Province in attendance, in addition to many spectators. The sale took place in the yard in the rear of the Kyle House. Mr. Norman Montgomery was the auctioneer, filling that position in a most capable manner. There were 72 head of cattle catalogued for sale, and 71 were sold, one being withdrawn owing to it having met with an accident. The aggregate amount realized on the sale was $10,080, or an average price of $140 per head. The consigners, generally, were well satisfied with the result of the sale. The highest price paid for any one animal was $335, for a cow consigned by Mr. S. J. Foster of Bloomfield. Some of the cattle sold have been taken to the experimental farm at Ottawa. The consigners and purchaser and prices paid, were as follows:—

It is not remarkable how some tea merchants reduce the quality of their teas in sympathy with the rising markets? admitedly the auction prices of teas on the London, Calcutta and Colombo markets have risen to an extraordinary level and there seems little respite ahead. Nevertheless, we will continue to supply the public with the same high standard of quality that they have learned to rely upon in Salada packets. Salada has always been kept "up to a standard" and never "down to a price" and we will never depart from this principle which has earned us such appreciation. If market prices make it impossible to supply Salada at present prices then the loss to the retailer and consumer must go up—The Salada Tea Co. in the "Canadian Grocer."

We Offer Bonds in Small or Large Amounts.

The investor can buy as little as $100, or as much more as he pleases. He can have the bonds to mature in almost any year he desires.

He may buy bonds which pay interest only until the principal matures at the end of a term, or he may buy bonds which repay instalments of principal annually along with his interest.

The bonds are either guaranteed as to legality by the Province interested, or we will furnish a legal opinion of a well known solicitor certifying as to legality.

In all cases provision has been made to retire the principal payments either through the establishment of a sinking fund or through the repayment of principal instalments annually.

ABSOLUTE MURDER

When the great liner Titanic went down in mid-ocean with a loss of several hundred lives, the world was thrilled with horror. Costly sea disasters for centuries have given the people of every nation opportunities to come together in making common cause on the perils of the sea. For this purpose international congresses have met. To every nation has been given freely and eagerly whatever the ingenuity of man might devise for the never-ending contest with the terrors of the deep.

In sinking the liner Falaba and the steamer Aquila, by means of submarines, Germany has accomplished the ruthless destruction of more than 138 lives, men, women and children, peaceable non-combatants. She has been guilty of co-operating with the unseen perils of the ocean. Non-combatants of both sexes were her victims and, like the unspeakable pirates of old, she made them walk the plank. Their only offence was that they sailed on a British ship, which was not a ship of war.

No law man has devised or will devise gives Germany the right to murder in cold blood. Even no law gives her the right to attack a peaceable merchant vessel, when she is unable to afford protection to those who may be her innocent victims.

Whatever may be the attitude of neutrals towards the policy of reprisal undertaken by the British Government in retaliation for Germany's outrageous use of submarine "blockade" policy, these recurring illustrations of Germany's inability to enforce such a policy upon a basis of anything approaching international law—or anything approaching moral law itself—can be of great assistance to Great Britain in her justification before the world of her reprisals. It is hardly seemly, however, to calculate upon any advantage to be derived from a ruthless and deplorable sacrifice of life such as this was. It was as inexcusable as degrading.

Germany cannot offer any excuse for this loss of life. It is a natural upshoot from the seeds she planted when she proclaimed her submarine "blockade." It is simply a demonstration in real life of what Germany promised to do, but what the world, knowing too little of German "kultur," did not think any supposedly civilized nation would put into practice.

Germany's hatred of England is a calculated "bluff." The aggrieved nation is not Germany. It is the policy of the murderer to proclaim hatred for his victim in order to lend a color of justification to his murderous conduct.

Capital punishment is not yet out of date.—Montreal Mail.

AMERICANS WITH THE ALLIES

The New York Times, ever broad in its views and particularly generous toward the allied forces in the great struggle abroad, gives some special information, which is extremely interesting in these days of strife. It says that: "During a recent debate on war matters in the Dominion Parliament, last week, Minister Hughes said that Canadians would be surprised to learn that dozens of Americans on the battle line with the Canadians have fallen. He added: 'Hundreds and hundreds more are in the Canadian regiments fighting bravely.' 'Americans will be more surprised to hear it, and yet is a part of recent history, even though Minister Hughes is sometimes exuberant in his words. There is other testimony to the same effect. In a debate on another subject the member from Alberta said that:

"Thousands of Americans who have come into Canada in the last few years are loyal to the British Empire and in thorough sympathy with the cause of England and her allies to overthrow the power of German militarism. In Lethbridge, the town in which I live, a troop of mounted rifles has been organized. There are six officers in the troop, and every one of the six officers is a native-born American.'

"This is interesting in its bearing upon the war, but of interest also in disclosing American as well as Canadian sentiment. There are no known cases of American officers, meaning officers of the United States Federal army, resigning to join the Germans, but there is more than one case of resignations to join the British forces.

"There is one case of an officer who was disciplined, being reduced fifty numbers, because he sailed to join the Allies before his resignation was accepted, and it was determined not to accept it when the reason why it was offered became known. Other similar resignations have been accepted, and officers from this country are now among those "hundreds" mentioned in the Dominion Parliament. Ottawa there is talk of an American "brigade," to be discovered by Americans naturalized as Canadians. The published reports say that 2,000 have volunteered, with promise of speedy recognition if they will naturalize themselves. There is no lack of material.

"Last year's figures show that 11,390 Americans naturalized themselves as Canadians, about four times as many as of the next nation —Russia. It is odd to remark that Austrians rank next, and that there is no reluctance to receive them even since the war. It is perhaps more surprising that Americans should forfeit their native allegiance by thousands than that they should fight for the Allies by hundreds. Only a few years ago the cases of naturalization of Americans abroad were rarities. The attraction to Canada is the same as the old-time attraction to the United States. Immigrant laborers from the construction camps are able to buy farms in Canada as soon as they establish their character, and especially in a few years what would have been difficult or impossible for them at home.

"The Canadian railways provide them with what they call "ready made farms" sold on credit. The first crop is planted and a cheap house started. Americans sell their dear land at home and have larger farms in Canada, with the prospect of wealth ahead. There is no reason why they should not change their citizenship except sentiment."

CURRENT COMMENT

Chicago-Belleville News: "Eggs on Belleville market, down above 35 cents this month. Chicago prices, around 20 cents. Butter sold around 35 cents; Chicago prices around 25."

Toronto Globe: "Mr. Carter of South Wellington is a fine sample of the English Liberal. Most employers of labor are at base between privilege and equality, and Mr. Carter is always on the right side." Quite natural—from a Globe viewpoint.

Chicago-Belleville News: "Colonel Brennan, commanding officer of the Irish Brigade, with General Lawrence, is now in South Africa, is a native of Belleville. His father, at the time, was proprietor of the old Hastings House on Front Street. Did you ever hear the like?"

Speaking of the temperance movement in Ontario, The Hamilton Herald suggests that the value of Sir Rowell's criticism of the new measure was diminished by his extreme demands. On this subject the Opposition leader tolerates no compromise, no half-measures. His notion of temperance is immediate and absolute suppression of the liquor traffic. That be is far in advance of public opinion on this question is certain. The success of the government to improve the administration of the license law while leaving open the avenues to local prohibition are more in harmony with the ideas and desires of the people of this province.

Don't Suffer With Stiff Aching Limbs

Don't be "inconvenienced and annoyed by tired, inflamed muscles. Massage the parts with Absorbine, Jr., and rout out the trouble. Athletes do. They know that Absorbine, Jr. penetrates quickly and reduces soreness and inflammation—that it is powerful and efficacious in cases of serious sprains, wrenches, torn ligaments and painful affections.

Absorbine, Jr. is a different kind of liniment. It is a non-poisonous Antiseptic and Germicide. Applied to an open wound, it kills the germs, makes the part aseptic and promotes rapid and healthy healing. That is why it is so good for cuts, wounds, and scratches.

Absorbine Jr. is a discutient and repellent, effective in reducing Bursal Enlargements, Puffy Tumors, Swollen and Enlarged Glands or Veins. Use Absorbine, Jr. when you want relief quickly and permanently.

SPINNING IT OUT

The trophy for the longest sentence of the present time was held by a writer on the Montreal Herald, has been wrested from that literary genius by the editor of Buffy's Journal published in Fredericton, N.B. Here is the winning sentence:

"The large bulk of the people in this city, who are my friends in a way, which is well and cordially salute me whenever they meet me but who take little more than a passing interest in me, will not be particularly interested in my mouthy recitals of every day life, and the large number who knew me in years gone by will remember me as a friend, and a few of the younger generation, whose hearts are warm enough to remember past scenes and friends whom I sometimes meet on the street and who introduce themselves to me, fine looking women and big stapping men, who 17 and 20 years ago I carried through the door yard or up and down the roads on my back, and we laugh over old scenes of pleasure we have had together or put our handkerchiefs to our eyes when we think of those who shared our youthful sports who have gone never to return."—Beck's Weekly.

MAY RETIRE FROM POLITICS

It would not be at all surprising to hear Sir Richard McBride's early retirement. It has been rumored for several months that he is to succeed Mr. Bower as agent-general in London. For the last year or two he his made few speeches on the mainland, leaving the exposition of the government case to Mr. Bower. The latter is a fine hustings orator and a fighter from the word go. If Mr. Bower succeeds to the premiership there will undoubtedly be a further shaking up in the cabinet in order to get in young blood.

Another campaign cry against the government is that of having handed out favors in the shape of timber leases and mining rights with a lavish hand to German syndicates in Vancouver and Victoria.

German aggressiveness, these syndicates went after everything in sight a few years ago, but it has not been proved so far that they robbed special favors which were not open to all. The Germans, most of them army officers and exponents of the only true kultur, made a quick getaway when war was declared. Some of them are still in Seattle where they are engaged in fostering American sentiment against the Allies.

Betting frequently gives a good indication of what the result will be. So far quotations are only on the extent of the Opposition inroads on the government's overwhelming position. Few, if any Liberals expect to overthrow the government, but bets have been made that the Opposition candidates, including Labor and Socialists, will carry 16 seats. A few enthusiasts believe they will capture 20 seats, but on all sides it is felt that to defeat the government on this occasion is an impossibility.—Beck's Weekly.

Johnson Tried Shark's Fins Training Diet

Jack Curley got the shock of his life the other day when he went out to Johnson's quarters to see him work. "Jawnson's lak his fathuh" asked, in her faithful old Mob Armstrong, who met him at the training camp gate.

"He" an' some down to 'range for a shark's fins," said Bob.

"For a what?" schreeched Curley.

Curley leaned himself against the fence, as he saw visions of his $32,000 worth of fielding machinery reduced to the bones in the quest of the gentle monsters that gambol about in the waters of Morro Castle, have you for a machine, and raced to the docks to head off Johnson. He got there just as Johnson had tossed a deal to hire a steam yacht for the hunt. Jack had laid in a big supply of lines, bait, cigars and wet goods.

"I've sent out invitations to my friends to attend this shark hunt," said Johnson, to Curley, when he saw him.

"Well, you can't go," yelled Curley, in a white rage, that was $5 per cent fear.

"There's no danger," urged Johnson, as Curley nearly collapsed. "You simply fish for them from the deck of the steam yacht, and you've got no more to lose the decision with one of those man-eaters is to be pulled overboard by one of them," said Johnson.

Curley moaned, and his joints creaked like an old barn door in a windstorm. Then he pleaded. Johnson laughed, then threatened. Johnson bared his golden smile to the Cuban sun and held it. Curley finally was compelled to agree to the hunt, provided he remain home, along as a bodyguard over his leading man of the big show. (Copyright, 1913.)

Right outside of Morro Castle there exists the finest little shark colony on earth. Even the swaddling sharks are twelve and one-half feet long and capable of eating and digesting a perfectly good sewing machine cabvasser. Shark hunting is the chief sport of Havana, and Johnson simply had to be in on it. It is dangerous in the extreme, they say. Reports have it that Curley didn't stand guard over Johnson long. By the time Johnson had landed his fifth shark of the day our noble promoter, Curley was stretched out on the flat of his back, the most seasick man on the Gulf of Mexico. The largest shark captured measured fifteen feet in length. Shark fins were the piece de resistance at Ville de Johnson dinner that night, but mention shark or any other word beginning with "s," and poor Curley gets pale around the gills.

A Silent Reason.

There is a story of an English clergyman who had taken temporary duty for a friend and who had the ill luck to find his text for the morning the week. The plan was sent to the dentist for repairs, a faithful assurance being given that it should be returned by Sunday's post, but the dentist or the post proved faithless.

With the assistance of the clerk the clergyman managed to stumble through the prayers, but it would be useless to attempt to preach. He therefore handed the clerk to make some excuse for him and dismiss the congregation. But his feelings may be better fancied than described when, in the seclusion of the vestry, he overheard the clerk the impressive tones thus deliver the excuse:

"Parson is very sorry, but it is his misfortune to be obliged to wear a set of artful teeth. They busted last Wednesday, and he ain't got them back from Lunnon, today, as he promised. I've helped him all I could through the service, but I can't do more for him. T'isn't any use for him going up in the pulpit, for you wouldn't understand a word he said, so he thinks you all may as well go home."

COULD NOT SLEEP, COULD NOT EAT

Woman So Weak and Nervous Could Not Stand Her Children Near Her — Vinol Changed Everything for Her

Plant City, Fla.—"I wish I could tell everybody about Vinol. For nine years I was in bad health. I got so I could not sit sleep, and could not stand to have my children come near me. I could not even rest or do any heavy housework. I was simply tired all the time. I tried so many remedies I could not count them all, but nothing did me any good. One day a friend asked me to try Vinol and said it was the best tonic she ever saw. I did so, and soon got the first good night's sleep I had had for a long time. Now, I sleep well, my appetite is good, my nervousness is all gone and I am so strong and well I do all my housework, and work in my flower garden without feeling tired or nervous. Vinol has made me a well and happy woman."

A CHEERFUL BANK STATEMENT

Everything about the conditions of Canadian chartered banks, as disclosed in their statement of February 28th is encouraging and cheerful. The period of expansion in bank note circulation being past, there was no advantage to the banks in having large supplies of gold in the gold reserves so that a reduction of $1,700,000 in that item was to be expected. An increase of $5,000,000 in deposits has given bank managers some additional occupation endeavoring to find employment for these growing funds, but municipal authorities are assisting them, having taken during the month $2,500,000 more. An increase in call loans of $1,500,000 is also understood to be largely made up of advances to dealers in municipal bonds, stocks and loans through ordinary stock brokers are also being made through the inactivity of the security markets matters of interest limits the demand in this department.

Commercial loans during the month increased over $1,500,000, indicating a tendency to recovery in the general trade. The banks increased their call loans abroad by over $4,000,000, placing this additional fund in the money as being more liquid. This increased loaning abroad is in the nature of reserve, which can be called on in advance the increase in domestic trade, which it is reasonably to-expect will take place shortly in the spring in the United States markets. It is impossible that our commercial conditions should not be cheerfully influenced by the growing optimism in the neighboring country.

"PAY-UP WEEK."

(Windsor Record.

It is now over a year since a little town in a Western State originated a "pay-up week," which seems to have taken root in a very large section of the State.

When the town in question announced its purpose of observing a "pay-up week," in which all debtors would be expected to everybody simply. But the thing was done, and several thousand unsettled bills were cleared in the process.

Now the place has had its most prosperous year, and many other western towns and not a few big cities are considering a "pay up week."

The philosophy of the plan is simply this: that by paying your bills, the other fellow is enabled to pay his, and so on in a sort of endless chain, which, finally comes around to you again, with you out of debt and no one owing you.

Thus all are gain, the commercial skies are clear, and everybody feels better.

In the first experiment over $40,000 in old accounts changed hands, and the liquidation this year promises to be a financial tidal wave.

The idea of a "pay-up week" is excellent and should be pushed along. The wider it extends, the more sound and stable will be the business of this country.

Baseball fans throughout the country are adopting the watchful waiting policy, but intervention is expected soon after the umpire begins to call balls and strikes.

Ottawa Athletes Given Commission in Army Service Corps

OTTAWA, April 1.—Many well-known Ottawa athletes were gazetted lieutenants in the list issued yesterday by the Militia Department.

Several have already received their appointments and will depart in the course of a day or two to join their respective regiments. They are all in the Army Service Corps, an important branch of Kitchener's new army, to which great attention is being paid by the British and Canadian Governments.

Among the new officers are Jack Williams, captain of St. Patrick's Football Club; formerly of the Ottawa and Queen's teams, one of the greatest half-backs ever seen in the Intercollegiate and interprovincial; Ken Williams, his brother, who played for Montreal two years ago, and who took part last fall in one or two games with St. Patrick's; Eddie Phillips, ex-president of the Interprovincial Union and prominently identified with the Ottawa Rowing Club; Basil Prith, a Cliffside and Varsity hockey star, who also played football with Varsity and Ottawa. He was a member of the local team championship; Roy Pinate, a member of the Ottawa Rowing Club; Junior eight and junior fours; Felix Snowden, who was coxswain in the Ottawa Four; Ed. Catharines last year, and who was a member of the crew which tried at Henley for the Grand Challenge Cup; Joe Foley, of the Stewartson Club, and Victoria Yacht Club; Bay Neville, also of the V.Y.C.; Ken Williams is already attached to the Army Service Corps at Belleville.

Dick Baby, the well known local tennis star, is stationed with the Army Service Corps at Montreal, while Bobby Pringle, of lacrosse fame, is assisting at Lansdowne Park. Many other local athletes are now taking courses of instruction and expect to qualify in the near future.

REPLENISH YOUR BLOOD IN THE SPRING

Just now you are feeling "out of sorts"—not your usual self. Quite excusable at times and cannot prevent real energy to your work. Sleep does not rest you and you wake up feeling "all tired out." Perhaps dizziness is flying through your muscles and joints, or may be your skin is disfigured by rashes, boils or pimples. Headaches, twinges of neuralgia, fits of nervousness, irritability of temper and disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

The cause—winter has left its mark on you. These troubles are signs that your blood is poor and watery, that your nerves are exhausted. You must renew and enrich your blood at once and restore tone to your tired nerves, or there may be a complete breakdown. The most powerful remedy for these spring ailments in men, women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Irritability of temper and disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

Belleville, Its Beginning and Early History

By Mayrice D. Lynch
PART V.

(In The Chicago-Belleville News)

Belleville, the municipality, was separated from the County of Hastings in the year 1850. That divorce had a good effect upon Belleville, for the town has shone greatly thereafter.

The people of 1850 were determined that the roads leading into the town should be free and the last of the toll roads were purchased from the companies owning them. Some of these roads commanded fancy prices. The road leading to Canniff's Mills, for instance, cost the taxpayer $4,000.00.

I forgot to mention in a former installment that Canifton was settled in 1806 by the family of John Canniff.

The census of 1851 gave Belleville a population of 6,277, and the officers of the town for that year were: Francis McAnnany, Mayor; George Taylor, F. Clarke and C. L. Coleman, councillors for Samson Ward; G. O. Levisconte, J. Lewis and M. Gillen for Victoria Ward; James Brown, T. Rutherford and Dr. Holden for Baldwin Ward; L. H. Henderson, H. Yeomans and John O'Flare for Coleman Ward; R.M. Roy, Clerk; Thomas Wiis, Treasurer; M. Nulty, A. T. Petrie and J. Bullen, Assessors; John Kerr, Collector; J. Gross, Surveyor; Jenas Dafoe, Chief of Police.

The year 1867 also saw the inauguration of the Belleville Quarterly Fair, which was authorised unfter a by-law passed that year.

Belleville's first Police Magistrate was appointed in 1852. Smith Bartlett was the man who was chosen for the job.

In 1843 Captain George James was appointed Chief of Police of Belleville, The Captain was the father of our friend Arthur James of the Chicago Belleville Colony.

From 1862 until 1866 Belleville kept on progressing in a staid, respectable and strictly conventional way. The pretty, quiet little town on the shores of Old Quinte was the home of a lot of orderly, well behaved people who were following their destiny in a commonplace way; buying and selling and upbuilding their town; marrying and giving in marriage and raising families of fine God-fearing children. In fact, a community of people who had their business before them and were living up to it strictly when, suddenly, a monkey wrench was thrown into the smoothly running machinery of their lives and the first thing they knew everyone and everything went up in the air, in a manner of speaking, and they came to "kerchunk." They realize that instead of their town being Belleville, The Good, it had suddenly been metamorphosed into a correct imitation of Deadman's Gulch, or Deadwood City, with all the latest improvements.

For one of the last things the good people of that district ever thought would happen, happened. In the autumn of 1866 marvelous deposits of gold were found in the Township of Madoc and, of course, chaos followed chasing through a gooseberry bush was as slow as a one-legged snail compared to the way the news flashed throughout Canada and the United States. Belleville was at once the gateway and the jumping off place on the way to the "diggings." Men in Belleville from all directions poured en mottley a throng as ever hit the trail for a boomtown. The town was stampeded by a rush of eager, roughrude, hard-drinking, hard-swearing, excited seekers, who turned night into day and everything else topsy-turvy.

They were all there. Blase adventurers from the far West, California "forty-niners," "bad" men, who liked to drink like fishes mixed with broken glass and rattlesnake strings, reckless well from all over God's creation, with a goodly sprinkling of country yokels who had dropped the reins and plow handles as though they were redhot, since they heard the siren call of the yellow nuggets. Men with lots of money which they were willing to invest in the gold fields rubbed elbows with down-at-heel who hadn't the price of a ham sandwich, and nothing was talked of on the streets but gold, and gold, and always, and gold again. Belleville had gone gold crazy and there was no use to try to stop it. "How do you get out to the Gold Fields?" The hotels of Belleville were filled to overflowing with strangers and money madness was in the air.

The sole desire of every visitor, and many townspeople, was to get "there" as quickly as possible to the spot where, no rumor had it, fortunes were being picked up on every hand. Every day several four-horse coaches left town filled to the limit of their carrying capacity with the adventurers, while others, well in any sort of conveyance that could be passed into service. Anything with wheels on was good enough for them, just so they kept on moving in the direction of Madoc. Those who didn't have the "price" to ride hit the trail on foot and hiked; they would not be denied.

Sir William Crooks Lenses

During the past five years there have been more experiments and greater advancement made in the manufacturing plants of the Optalmic lenses than was accomplished during three hundred years preceding. In 1908 Sir William Crooks, one of the world's foremost scientists and well known for his wonderful work that led to the discovery of X-Rays, was induced by the Cataract Commission of the Royal Society of London, to investigate and if possible find a prevention for the numerous cases of cataract. Sir William Crooks found the trouble to be due chiefly to the glass, and started experiments on different kinds of glass that would cut out the rays, but decided also to enlarge the research to include glasses that would cut out the Ultra-Violet Rays, which have been demonstrated to be the exciting cause of such irritation and inflammatory condition of the eyes). Sir William Crooks made over three hundred experiments, extending over four years, he finally succeeded in perfecting a lens that cuts out all the harmful ultra-violet rays and forty per cent of the heat rays, while at the same time the lens let through 99% of visible light. This is the first time that the Crooks lens has ever been produced for optical purposes which cuts out so much of the ultra-violet rays without changing the natural color of objects.

It is a common complaint of people wearing glasses that their eyes often smart and feel gritty. This is because the ultra-violet or chemical rays of the white light and also the red heat rays are intensely irritating to the sensitive retinae. In Crooks' glass all of these rays are entirely eliminated, with the result that such glasses give the greatest comfort and rest to the eyes. It is a great blessing which Sir William Crooks has given the world of bestowing on humanity, something which wearers of glasses have for many years been looking for."

We are pleased to be able to announce to residents of Belleville and surrounding country that we are now able to supply them lenses ground to any form required—Alexander Ray, Belleville's Eye-Sight Specialist.

LONG WAR, SAYS GEN. PAU

Found Russian Army to be Admirably Organized

SALONICA, April 2.—General Paul Pau, who just passed through here on his way to Athens, accorded a brief interview. He declared he was well satisfied with his journey to Russia. "The Russian army," he said, "is admirably organized, and represents a very considerable strength. The Allies, when they are closer in union between them, may be sure of victory, but the war will last a long time."

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be and wish to reduce yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orifices in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orifice increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orifice in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1 address Dr. Jackson Little Drug Co., Box 2240, Montreal, Can.

CONSTIPATIONS
, Read This

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When one is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning. The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be named poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of exercise in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 50c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health.

Father and Son Banquet at Y.M.C.A.

An Interesting Event Held on Thursday Evening—Toasts and Responses

The Fathers' and Sons' Banquet held Thursday night at the Y.M.C.A. in connection with the Boys' Department was a great success. This is the first time the local Association had attempted to get the boys and their fathers together and the invitation was indeed worth the effort. Owing to the approach of the holiday period, a number of the fathers were unable to attend because of business engagements. There were, however, about 130 fathers and sons present. The good things to eat were all provided by the boys and these good things in turn were served by the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mr. E. R. McBride, Chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, officiated as Toastmaster, carrying out the duties of this office most admirably. He heartily welcomed the boy's and their fathers, and then proceeded to carry out the somewhat lengthy toast list and programme. The first toast on the list, was the Young Men's Christian Association, Its Aim and Scope, proposed by Mr. H. P. Ketcheson, and responded to by Mr. D. V. Sinclair. In proposing this toast, Mr. Ketcheson urged every boy to have an aim in life. He said that the boys always expected on their team the fellow who could place the ball just where he aimed it. So, he said, also in life, the boy would reach that goal in life to which he aimed. Mr. Sinclair, in responding, spoke of the number of years he had been identified with the Association, both as a member and a Director. He had the profoundest admiration for the Y.M.C.A. because it aimed at saving the whole boy and young man, body, mind and soul. As to the scope, he said there was absolutely no limit, and until it had reached the last least boy in the world, then and then only would the limit of its scope have attained.

The toast "Our King and Country" was not given a second place on the programme, but became one of the names coupled with it, was at present at the opening of the program. Leslie Roberts, one of 16 leading young men in our city, and possessed of rare ability as a speaker, proposed this toast in most eloquent words, and brought forth from the responses, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, a splendid tribute. Mr. O'Flynn has endeared himself to the hearts of every citizen in Belleville, and indeed to the boys too, who are citizens in the embro. There is an added touch to Mr. O'Flynn's remarks on a subject like this at this remarkable crisis in the world's history, because he lives in the trenches, Capt. O'Flynn, his own boy, is fighting for that King and Country, to which his father paid such a beautiful and glowing tribute. Mr. O'Flynn was listened to with intense interest by every one present. The toast "The Association Boys," was proposed in a very able manner by Eric Wrightmeyer. Eric is the type of Association boy, both in physical strength and clean cut clean character. Mr. Allison, Boy's Work Secretary, responded briefly, and took occasion to pay a compliment to the Belleville boy's, saying that they were as fine fellows as he had ever met in his experience with boys. "Our Guests and the Fathers" was the last toast on the list. In proposing this toast Mr. Ketcheson voiced his appreciation at seeing the fathers and their sons present. He spoke in highest terms of Mr. Sydney Allen, the guest, who had so revolutionized the Association work in Toronto, where he now is the Metropolitan Secretary. Mr. Ketcheson, at the outset took occasion to tell the fathers that they should understand their boys, appreciate their feelings and natural boyish desires. He told of how his own father had taken him to prayer meeting when a boy, and would ask all present to pray for his boy. He said that he could not appreciate this nor understand why they should make him a subject of prayer, because he thought he was quite natural and was not entirely doomed to despair and perdition. Mr. Warburton therefore urged that parents do not force upon their boys a long-faced serious religion but to remember that a boy was a boy and his boyish nature should be considered. To the fathers, he said: "You are the boy's prototype's," and told them that when they saw and realized mistakes in their boys, to remember that they were boys and perhaps made exactly the same mistakes, and to remember that a boy invariably emulates his father and his traits. "You are your son's ideal," he said to the fathers, and every boy saw in his father an ideal, therefore if a boy was not everything that he ought to be there was something wrong with the ideal. "A father ought to be his son's friend." He told of how there was lacking of unmindfulness and real genuine friendship between most fathers and sons, and here was accounted for, a great many of the misunderstandings between the father and the boy. Mr. Warburton had this to say to the boys: "You are your father's hope." He said that every father hoped for great things in his boy and urged that every boy should try to realize this hope for their father. "You are your father's pupil," he said, and a boy should be submissive to the teachings of father in as far as those teachings are helpful and for the best interests of the boy. "Every boy is an enigma," in fact, the definition of a boy was an enimgma in trousers. Lastly he said: "You need your father's council." He lamented the fact that fathers did not council their boys in the problems that beset the average boy, especially around the ages from 12 to 16 years of age. He thought there should be more parties and witticisms and these appealed to the boys and helped carry home the great truths he wished to convey. Mr. Warburton is perhaps the most eloquent and distinguished visitor who has visited Belleville for some time, and there is no doubt but that he left an impression on the fathers and sons that will mean inestimable value to both in the future.

During the evening, Mr. Harry Dawson sang a fine tenor solo, and Bruce Towers gave a piece of boy monologue in the Boys' Dept. gave a piano solo, which was appreciated very much by all.

HOW OLD IS GUNPOWDER?

Research Shows It Was Known Nearly 700 Years Ago

That gunpowder was well known for a century or so before it was used in guns appears probable from investigation, at Oxford. Bacon's claims to the invention of gunpowder are often pressed by English writers in opposition to those of Herthol Schwartz, who is generally said to have invented it about 1354—a century after Bacon's time. It seems certain from the latter's writings that he was familiar with the composition, but he does not claim to have used it in various countries of the world. Apparently, however, it was regarded merely as a firework, a means of producing sudden and brilliant flame, and its users were far from suspecting that in a confined space the expansive power of its gases could be put to use in hurling projectiles. Roger Bacon, the Franciscan friar, who

...ious retentiveness: "The text that we have studied allows no further doubt that Bacon knew of gunpowder. On page 213, under the title 'Of the powder,' he also informs us that it is known in various parts of the world, and that it is composed of saltpeter, sulphur and willow charcoal.

"Comparisons of the terms used by Bacon to describe the effects of explosive powder in three different places shows that he was writing of the same powder. Now his letter on the 'Secret Works of Nature' would appear to have been written to William of Auvergne, Archbishop of Paris, who died in 1248 or 1249. It seems, then, that the explosive properties of black powder were known in France and England before the middle of the thirteenth century.

"It should be noted, however, that nothing whatever is then known also of the projective power of the powder when ignited in a closed vessel, or that he ever dreamed of making use of it. Nowhere in his writings, in fact, did he allude to it, and the first cannons must have made their appearance much later."

Printers' Errors

Newspaper compositors and men who edit copy, no matter how sagacious they may be, sometimes make errors to get by that are either laughable or humiliating. A big daily in reporting a political meeting, said that the vast audience rent the air with their shouts. A weekly paper reported that the propeller Alaska was leaving port with a cargo of 40,000 bushels of oats. A Buffalo paper in describing the death of Roosevelt took the oath of office as President, said it was a spectacle never to be forgotten when Roosevelt, before the Chief Justice of Supreme Court, and a few witnesses took his simple bath.

CLEAR YOUR SKIN

Eczema, psoriasis, ring worm, pimples, scales and crusts are due to microscopic germs that burrow in the skin. To secure relief and cure these germs must be destroyed and eliminated.

The D. D. D. Prescription, a mild combination of liquid balsams of oil of wintergreen, thymol and other soothing elements, will give instant relief in all cases. Unlike salves, it penetrates to the deeply buried germs, kills and washes them out.

All druggists have D. D. D. A generous trial bottle for 25c. Come in and let us tell you about our money back guarantee offer on a full size bottle. Ask also about D. D. D. Soap—J. S. McKEOWN, Druggist, Belleville.

MET WITH ACCIDENT

On Thursday, April 1st., Clarence Madigan, an employee of the G.T.R. round house, met with a severe accident. His heel was caught between the turntable and the main floor of the building, the heel of the boot being torn off, and the flesh on the heel also being broken away from the bone. The sufferer was removed to the hospital, where he is now progressing favorably.

A WORTHY RECORD

Mr. Thomas Portlund, Picton's new Chief of Police, has four brothers in the Royal Navy. One on the super-Dreadnought Queen Elizabeth now in action in the Dardanelles; one on the Empress of India, a sister ship to the Queen Elizabeth that has just been commissioned; another brother with the naval brigade at Antwerp that was interned in Holland, and the fourth on another of England's fighting ships. This is a record that indeed a worthy one.—Picton Gazette

FOUND DEAD IN BED

At an early hour yesterday morning Mr. Alfred Scott, aged 62 years, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. Capt. Fagan, George street, was found dead in bed. Heart trouble was the cause of death. The evening previous the deceased retired apparently in his usual health. Mr. Scott was born at Enniscorthy 75 years ago, and had resided here many years, where he was well known to many. He was a member of the Methodist church. An aged widow and family survive.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

FROM R. W. FELSTEAD

France, March 15, 1915.

Dear Bill—Your ever welcome letter dated February 25th, received here yesterday. The Belleville boys are doing their fair share of the work it seems. Good luck to them all. I hope to be with them back in Belleville again and see them all.

They gave the Canadians 150 rounds each before they left England. We have had a good deal of shrapnel picked out to us since we left England, and we have dished them all out again to the Germans for souvenirs. They have sent us a few in return. The Canadian Contingent is out here. I have seen a few of them and I have written to your brother and am now waiting a reply. I received the paper alright.

You can keep your eyes on the papers between the 15th of February and to-day's date, fore we have had a pretty busy time round Ypres lately. On the morning of the 10th we were giving it to the enemy with our big heavy guns and light ones followed up by infantry attacks. The casualties on the enemies' side were terrible. Over a thousand prisoners have been taken. The number of killed and wounded must have been terrible. The roar and crack of the guns and the bursting of shell has been ten times worse than any thunder could be. I have heard a few bombardments but never one as fierce as this has been.

We have won a splendid victory this time, and have gained considerable ground. When our boys attacked with fixed bayonets, hundreds of the Germans threw down their arms and gave themselves up.

They say they are glad to be taken prisoners for they all seem to be fed up with it. While this has been going on we have had a few German shells coming our way, but all the casualties we have had is one man slightly wounded with a piece of shrapnel shell. They keep sending us a few shells over our way, but we are having our usual luck so far and are as well as ever we were. We are all eager to do our bit, and give them you know; for the sooner we have them wiped out, the sooner we shall get back again.

I feel quite confident that I shall come out on top, and that we are going to be the winners in this world's war; for it is to the interest of the whole world that Germany should be defeated. We know what it would mean if they ever set foot in England as victors; but thinking is about as near as they will get.

Well, it is not very nice to have shells dropping around, and I think all are a bit excited about them at first; though I don't think anyone takes a great deal of notice to them now, with the exception of saying: "Here comes another fellow to lay it hurt somebody." A lot of the German shells are blind and come over without bursting, so they do very little damage.

Well, we have thousands of horses out here, and some of them are alright and some are not. We have some that are not in the battery and they have a nasty habit of tying to chuck a fellow on his neck. I have been thrown off three times, but did not get hurt much. The horse got hurt, though, afterwards.

Say, Bill, I can hear some of the shell coming over here now as I write this letter. "I believe Infantry get so many days on and so many off; but we don't. We get very little rest or the guns either. They are at it day and night. I guess it is more comfortable in Belleville than it is here. The letters that are sent to us are not opened; we receive them just as they are sent.

Well, give my best wishes to all the boys and I will write as often as possible. Best wishes to you and all I remain

Your sincere friend,
DICK.

P.S.—Papers are always welcome.

DEATH ROLL.

JOHN JOHNSON

On Thursday, March 5, John Johnson, Esq., one of the best known of the Belleville men in Chicago, passed away at his late residence, in the Austin District.

Mr. Johnson, who was a son of the late James Johnston, alone finest contractor of Belleville, was over sixty-five years of age and had lived in Chicago and other western points upwards of thirty years. Death came rather suddenly as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. John Johnston was a genial, whole-souled, upright citizen whose every acquaintance was a friend. He was widely known in Chicago building and contracting circles. Mr. Johnston was an enthusiastic old Bellevillite and was always keenly interested in everything pertaining to the welfare of the old home and its people. He will be missed by his many friends and associates. In addition to the widow, formerly Miss Winnie Blair, one of Belleville's most talented daughters, there are left to mourn Mr. Johnston's passing, two sons, one daughter, one brother and two sisters. To all of these sorrowing ones the "News" extends its most heartfelt sympathy.—Chicago Belleville News.

MISS HATTIE SPRY

Many were yesterday afternoon in attendance at the obsequies of the late Miss Hattie Spry. Services were held at the residence of Mrs. J. R. Davis, sister of the deceased, conducted by the Rev. W. G. Clarke, B. A., pastor of the Trinity church, assisted by the Rev. Amos Campbell. The former officiated at the interment at Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. John Buchanan, Frank Thompson, Wm. Leslie, Geo. VanTassel, Carl Simon and Jas. C. Dempsey. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, the contributors being as follows:

Spray—Mrs. L. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. B. Mayo, Mrs. Downer and Miss Bowen, Baraca Club Tabernacle Church, Miss Hazel Walmsley, Mrs. Embury and Miss Corinam, the Misses Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. C. Frost, Mr. and Mrs. A. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. F. R.—Naylor, Miss J. Gowsell, Mrs. Carl Strom, Miss P. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Merrifield and family, Port Hope.

MOTHER'S PRAISE
BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. S. E. Laurie, Grafton, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets ever since my baby was two weeks old and would not be without them as I consider them the best medicine in the world for little ones." What Mrs. Laurie says thousands of other mothers say. Simply because they have found the Tablets safe and sure and pleasant for the little ones to take. They are sold by druggists direct or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOUSECLEANING
LINOLEUM
The old-fashioned method of scrubbing with soap and water is being abandoned for the better method of waxing and polishing, as water penetrates and softens the lard and so causes it to wear out quickly.

RONUK
the English Wax Polish and Cleaner is a combined cleanser and polish. It removes the dirt without the help of soap and water and leaves your linoleum with a bright, polished surface which will stand wear and tear. The wear will be on the RONUK, not on the linoleum.
On sale at all stores, 25c. to $1.00.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULAT

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 640 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NOR WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application for entry must be made in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years, cultivation of fifty acres and erection of a house worth $300.00.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after obtaining homestead patent, cultivate fifty acres and pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

ROYAL NAVAL COLLEGE OF CANADA.

"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

Canadian rights controlled by British and Colonial Press, Limited, Toronto.

BARONESS VON SUTTNER
the Authoress

May found me in Paris, seeing the great exhibition. It was my first visit, and I was dazzled by the brilliancy. The empire was in its highest splendor. Many European rulers were visiting there, and it seemed almost like a great international capital—this French city which was in those few years to be bombarded by its eastern neighbor.

All the nations were assembled in this great peaceful and profitable pageant of industries—this productive, not destructive, strife of business. At the riches which art and manufactures contribute to use and beauty were here displayed, and one felt proud of the progress of time—proud in the fact that how natural it was to feel that never more should any development be threatened by the brutal menace of destruction. And I breathed easily when I reflected that all these royal guests commingled in congratulatory festivities. Certainly they would never again exchange shots with their cannonial entertainers and hosts. All this splendid public recognition and congratulatory association seemed like a pledge that an era of unbroken peace and plenty had begun. Paris, indeed, would these civilized nations draw the sword—the barbarous and useless sword—to be capable of that.

In the midst of it all it was rumored that the Emperor was seeking the earliest available opportunity to present his favorite idea to the powers for general disarmament. The information came from reliable sources.

What government could refuse such a suggestion when the example is de facto for conquest? What nation would not revolt at such a refusal? The proposal must succeed.

Frederick was not so confident as I. "First of all," he said, "I cannot believe Napoleon will ever propose it since the war game is too strong. Occupants of thrones cannot govern public opinion; they are prevented by their closet secrets. In the second place, one cannot command a great organic body to cease to exist—as such. It would set itself in opposition."

"Of what great body are you speaking?"

"Of the army. As a body, it has life and has the power to sustain its existence. As an organism, it is to-day full proof that if universal conscription is introduced it is on the point of enormous expansion."

"And yet I have to oppose this thing!"

"Yes, but not by stepping up and crying, 'Die, monster!' Such an institution would hardly respond by stretching itself and dying on the spot. I will urge war against this monster by introducing another living, though fragile form, which as it unfolds will finally wipe the other out. It was you, Martha, who first introduced me to the ideas of modern scientists. An insensible blow is dealt to an organism by the world, and what is opposed to it must go. Politicians, rulers, and soldiers seem not to feel the slightest notion of this truth. A few years ago I was just as blind as they. We lived at the Grand Hotel, and since I had not laid aside my mourning, we did not go into society much. Of course Rudolf was with us, but he did not make many long excursions with us, for the fatigue was too much for him to learn, and he spent much of his time with Ida in the lodge yard.

The world which opened to us here was all new to me. There had come together, from the four corners of the earth, the famous—and I was fairly confused by the crowd, the fame, the luxuriousness, all so enchanting and interesting. But I longed for the quiet and peace of home as ardently as one wishes for the day world when entirely shut out from it.

We kept ourselves outside the hubbub and sought only the acquaintance of the producers, thinkers, who could be of benefit not only to our mental life, but to those who could help further the work in hand. Of these I will speak later. My dear, you are too much. To have to pretend for a single day to be unwillingly what you detest—to live in ill-advised, and I mean to train my son for the army.

"Then he should have been born a few centuries later, my dear," replied Frederick. "To be a perfectly true man and a perfectly free one he should appreciate in our day. The deeper I go into my studies the more I see it so."

Double time was now possible to Frederick for his work, and in our quiet summer we determined to return to the next winter to Paris, not for society, but to devote the entire season to the one object of our lives. We wished to help bring about some practical results, and hoped to be able to cooperate with the plans of the Emperor for disarmament, for we might get an ear through our friends. Through our old friend the Cabinet Minister we hoped also to get to the ear of the Austrian government. Frederick also had influential relations at the Berlin Court, through whom such a plan might be brought to the consideration of Prussia.

But our return to Paris was disarranged. Our little Sylvia, our treasure, became seriously ill. These anxious hours filled with fear of death threw everything else to the background. But she did not die. In two weeks the danger was past. Then the winter's end dragged on somewhat till March.

BOOK VI.

CHAPTER I.

Forebodings! There were none in all the gaiety of the Austrian capital—not on that beautiful sunny March day in 1870. It was all cheer and promise. But one thing now what horrors were hanging over it all.

We engaged the same apartment which we had occupied the year before. The same servants awaited us, and as we drove through the streets on our way home, we met many acquaintances, who were driving at that delightful hour of the afternoon, the press, who graciously saluted us in passing. Visitors were being announced everywhere, and the air was full of the promise of spring.

This season we were determined to avoid the gaiety; we declined all invitations, seldom went to the theatre and kept ourselves quite apart, spending our evenings at home or in the society of a few intimate friends.

Our plans regarding the Emperor's project of general disarmament were at a standstill, for the time seemed unripe for such an idea. The people were in a fever, and the throne itself, seemed not on the surest foundation. We were accustomed to hear that the only safety of the dynasty would be in a fortunate campaign. There seemed no possibility of war, and yet talk of disarmament was dropped for the Hosaparte talk large. Napoleon spoke of military glory. Neither Prussia nor Austria responded to our plan. Expansion of the army was everywhere the fashion, and our dream of disarmament fell upon deaf ears.

"The time is not ripe," said Frederick, "but we must keep standing on hopeful, to help personally to hasten the peace of the nations. What I can contribute I shall bring to the fore in the first hour it dawned upon me, it possessed me that the moment that it was the one most important thing in the world, I must be faithful.

"If for the moment the project for disarmament must be postponed, yet I am determined to work for the immediate threat of war. At coups and among the people those who believed the the dynasty must be reshattered in order to bring up all hope of glory in a charming little campaign on the Rhine. Napoleon was to return after the harvest had fallen, forage was scarce, the army had to set its teeth on the extra recruits had been cut off by legislation, and above all there was not to be any political complication; in short, as Olivier proclaimed from the forum: "The peace of Europe is assured."

Assured! How the word rejoiced us. The papers were repeated it, and thousands picked with me. What greater good can be given to the masses of humanity than the assurance of peace?

It was worth of this jubilling security, which the statesmen assured us in June 1870, we all realize now. We have since known then and always in the future that we mistake when we put our innocent trust into the assurances of diplomats. How can peace ever be secure when any hour the rendezvous of war may be up some agitation? We can never be secure from war until some other means for settling differences is provided.

In Paris again society, scattered itself, but we remained, as then for business, since we had decided to buy a house there. We met many of our friends owned houses in the near neighborhood of Paris, and we visited them all several times during the early summer. I clearly remember that it was at the villa of the Princess Mathilde that I first perceived that there was a new agitation in the air. It was said that a prince of Hohenzollern was a candidate for the Spanish throne. It seemed of little consequence who should sit on the Spanish throne, but it cut me to the heart when I heard some one make the remark: "France will not tolerate that!" I knew what this phrase always meant: it will not

The subject was idly dropped, and those of us realized the full import of the doubtful Spanish succession. But the matter revived itself more and more, privately and in the newspapers. Everybody declared that Prussia stood purposed to provoke war. Yet letters from Berlin assured us that the Spanish throne was not considered a question of any importance.

We were deeply interested in our house and its furnishings, and little realized the approaching storm that began to threaten us here and under the Tuileries.

CHAPTER II.

"War is declared!" Those three words, what do they mean?

I remember the peculiar frame of mind in which I received them when this war broke out. The whole population was in a tension, and one could escape the infection! Naturally, according to old custom, the beginning of war is heralded by triumphal marches; that is, of a martial, a patriotic duty. Too "Marseillaise" breaks the silence, and the "Marseillaise" theatrical performance the first evening of the singer—for the opera it was Marie Sass—must appear before the curtain in the costume of the time, and carrying the standard, the colors, must sing this battle-song. The audience rises, and the orchestra joining in the chorus. Frederick and I realized one evening the might of this popular enthusiasm. We were compelled to rise to our feet—compelled to sing with the rest.

"Sie, Martha," exclaimed Frederick, "this spark which spreads from one to another, this flame which electrifies and making every heart beat higher, is—Europe!"

"Do you believe so? It is a song inspiring hate."

"That makes no difference; a cotton bolted is but another form of wool when it is spun. Hate is but another form of love when it is bound together by the same feeling, they love one another. When the Germans hate the French it is because aspiration than the interests of nationality, namely, the cause of humanity, is violated."

"Ah, when will that time come?" I sighed.

"When? One can speak but relatively. As a result of this battle, parted with our personal existence—ever, when we shall have the existence of our race—to-morrow."

When war breaks out the infatuation of certain minds were at a two camps; one siding with this, the other with that party, as if there were a great stake in which every one had a share. We were unconsciously influenced by our environment. Frederick was a Prussian decent and the Austrian language was his own. The declaration of war had been made by the French on such frivolous pretexts that we could only see that the Emperor was not ready for war, and yet talk of disarmament was dropped for the Hosaparte talk large. Napoleon spoke of military glory. Neither Prussia nor Austria responded to our plan. Expansion of the army was everywhere the fashion, and our dream of disarmament fell upon deaf ears.

"The time is not ripe," said Frederick, "but we must keep standing on hopeful, to help personally to hasten the peace of the nations. Montreal Star: "American sympathy is overwhelmingly with the Allies. This is and has been a very valuable asset of our side. It has given us many advantages, and in the present questions might arise over shipping or other matters of international law there was not the smallest danger of the United States espousing the German against us. The Germans can have no such confidence. If they laboured into a serious misunderstanding with the American Government, the most popular thing at home in the United States would be to declare war."

WHAT IS YOUR DIET ?

Canadians eat too much meat. They are one of the three greatest meat eating peoples in the world, Australia and the United States being the other two. High prices for meat are, coming. The cost of food as well as its nutritive value should be considered.

Prof. James Long, the eminent British authority, recently addressed the following advice to the Wise Men:

"Jam has three and a half times the energy value of butter, its value lies in its richness of sugar, of which one-half its weight consists—in the minerals present in the skins of fruits, in its laxative character and its mechanical aid to digestion.

"The sugar of fruit has a remarkable effect on nutrition. Commercial sugar, if eaten too freely, causes irritation, debility and other freaks of indigestion.

"The most nutritious and useful varieties of jam are those made from the plum, apricot, gooseberry and currant, but a mixture of plum and apple stand at the head of the list. Jam should not be considered as a dainty but as an articles of food."

Dr. Frank T. Shutt, of Ottawa, Dominion Chemist, adds to the foregoing authoritative statement as to the great importance of vegetables, especially fresh ripe green peas. The importance in connection with small gardens in towns and cities is very apparent, and the subject is opportune at this time of the year, when a box in a small garden will keep down the doctor's bills.

That many of the ills that flesh is heir to arise from indiscretions in diet is a fact that more of us should realize and lay to heart in life. Be happy. Many of us, and perhaps the ills applies especially to those who live in the city are too much. As a result, we get too stout as the advancement, and what is still more serious, an extraordinary strain is put on certain of the organs of the system in the endeavor to get rid of the waste. Further, we who live more or less sedentary lives, eat too much; those men who are at work all day long or stands behind a counter may eat as hard as the navvy or ploughman. But it is different and even if we do not call for the same amount of strong food. There is no necessity to diet ourselves by formula or to count up what we should eat, but we ought to be guided to a certain extent in our eating by common sense and the knowledge which science furnishes respecting the requirements of the body for the maintenance of the vital heat, the development of energy and the repair of tissue.

"As city people we might keep in better health if we ate more of a meatless day if we would eat less meat and consumed foods and use more vegetables in the form of salads. Fruit might be specially be emphasized for the same sort diet, when there is the same call for the system for the strongest foods.

"Fresh vegetables are wholesome, palatable and productive of good health. Those who eat plenty of fresh vegetables yield a first place in meats. It must not be supposed they are destitute of those nutritive elements which the body tissue and keep the machine going. It would be possible, though not desirable to live exclusively on vegetable foods. But vegetables and especially fresh vegetables, are not to be regarded merely from the standpoint of nutritive elements. We must expect that now-a-days they would make a very good showing on the ground of economy, but they are also very inexpensive use on the grounds simply that they are appetizing and furnish variety to the diet. They, in addition to these excellent qualities, possess a medicinal value; they are aids to digestion and afford that rest to the bowels and to the food necessary for the right distension of the alimentary tract. Many vegetables are laxative while one gently laxative, relieving constipation. Another scourge that is the forerunner of so many dangerous and not infrequently fatal diseases. And again, many vegetables, especially those used in salads, have a special value in cooling the blood, and, especially, during hot summer, especially in the summer season.

"Fresh vegetables are vastly superior to those that are wilted from keeping a day or two, in succulence, crispness and palatability. To be enjoyed at their best, vegetables must be eaten strictly fresh."

A Now Jersey wife has been given $7,000 for alienation of her husband's affections. She will probably get the money and if she lost because she was not capable of holding them she is not entitled to damages.

One United States Presbytery has fixed $1,000 a year as the limit of a parsonage as the minimum salary for pastors. That seems a small enough sum for any faithful ministers who lacks the revenue-producing resources of a recent German invention. What an

The Uncrowned Kaiser.

It is interesting to recall that the Kaiser has never been crowned. When the time approached for that great ceremony he made tremendous preparations, arranging what was to be dazzlingly beautiful—masses of uniforms and gorgeous carpets. Unfortunately, however, the cultured ruler overstepped the mark. He decided that he would be crowned by the German Emperor, but Emperor of Germany. The Kaiser's ambition was to be crowned in the latter capacity. The rulers of the German states refused to let the gentleman with the moustache to assume so haughty a title. "I am Emperor," said he, "I can't have any coronation at all, then!"

DISABLED SOLDIERS MUST BE CARED FOR

It is Generally Recognized in Great Britain That the Government Will Take Matter in Hand

Hitherto discharged and disabled British soldiers have been cared for almost exclusively by the army authorities or by charitable people, who have organized employment societies for their welfare. In spite, however, of these splendid efforts, they have only been able to find employment for a certain percentage of ex-soldiers and ex-sailors, even in peace time.

Between 20,000 and 30,000 soldiers in times of peace are discharged from the army every year. Only just over one-half of these are able to obtain permanent employment, although in the majority of cases they possess excellent characters. In one year 16,624 ex-soldiers asked the National Association for the Employment of Ex-Soldiers to find them work. Thanks to the efforts of this excellent institution, 10,813 men were placed in permanent employment but this was at a time when trade was booming and furthermore the men were not disabled soldiers, but those who had served their time in the army and were physically fit.

Many Maimed For Life

If, therefore, 12s and kindred organizations have such a difficulty in finding permanent employment for ex-soldiers in times of prosperity and peace, what is to become of the many thousands of disabled men who will be seeking work when the war is over. The number of disabled men is likely to be enormous. On the basis of an army of two millions, and of the war continuing for two years, the Government, actuaries estimate the number at 250,000.

It is safe to affirm that the majority of employers will endeavor, as far as possible, to reinstate in their former situations the men who left their employment to go to the war. But many of the wounded men will be unable to return to their former employment, owing to their crippled state. Already the hospitals are discharging young soldiers who have been crippled that they are entirely unfitted for ordinary occupations. Lead writer, for instance, formerly in receipt of £20 a week in London, has his foot shot away. A miner, formerly in receipt of £2 2s a week, had the nerves of his right wrist permanently injured. A lad of nineteen was shot through the right wrist, rendering the arm permanently useless.

Want Government Supervision

It has been suggested in some of the London papers that what is really wanted is a scheme, formulated under the auspices of the Local Government Board, which could be worked through the local authorities, to ensure that not a single man who is partially disabled is left without suitable employment.

All the Government has done hitherto is to endeavor to find openings for a small percentage of discharged soldiers in Government offices, such as the Post Office, and prisons, while there are certain employments in always give the preference to ex-soldiers, notably the railway companies all of whom have testified to the fact that the ex-soldier gives the greatest satisfaction.

In Canada, all situations in Government factories and buildings are given to ex-soldiers and ex-sailors, and the man who joins either service is practically assured of a situation when he returns. It is the same in France, where preferential employment is always given to men who have served in the army or navy. But, as one military authority put it, in countries where conscription exists soldiers are the only good workmen to be procured, and even in France and Germany the disabled soldier is greatly deprecated on employment societies similar to those which exist in Great Britain, for all chances of work, and that after the Franco-German war disabled soldiers had the greatest difficulty in obtaining situations.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Two Lancashire Lads Had a Battle all to Themselves

Two Lancashire lads who had enlisted in a cavalry regiment were drafted to the front. One day they were on outpost duty when the officer in command sent them, together with several others, to reconnoitre, each man taking a different direction.

Now, the day previous there had been very heavy fighting on the very ground that they were scouting, so that when the Oldham lad saw a German helmet lying behind a hedge he was struck with a bright idea.

Putting his greatcoat on and the Prussian headgear he thought he would be able to disclose the enemy's whereabouts without himself being detected, especially as it was getting dusk.

He had not got very far, however, when a shot rang out only a short distance away.

He dropped behind a hillock, and fired back in the direction of the shot, and then the sniping started in earnest.

It happened that they were within shouting distance, and the Oldhamite could not resist bawling out:

"I'll get one o'er on thi yet, owd mon!"

You may guess his surprise when the reply was:

"Ay, if aw dunno get thee fust, tha bloomin' owd German!"

Torpedoes Frequently Miss

The calculation has been made that for every successful hit by a torpedo fired from a German submarine there must have been over ninety misses.

Fifty thousand British railwaymen joined, or rejoined, the colors when war was declared.

A NERVY GERMAN

The following story was related by a wounded soldier at the 2nd Canadian General Hospital, Beckett's Park, Leeds:

Rather a queer thing happened at dusk one evening, when our trench was only about thirty yards away from the enemy.

We had ceased off sniping at each other for some time, when we saw a German coming towards us with a white flag, and carrying something in his hands. We put it down and held up his arms when he saw us cover him with our rifles, and when we got up to us he asked if he could be told us that their fire would not burn, and would we let him boil some water for their tea on ours? Rather cool, isn't it?

We all said he deserved to be shot for his cheek, but somehow we were so taken aback by his pluck and so pleased at his confidence in us that we really had to be nice to him. So we boiled his water for him and gave him some of our tea while he waited, and he offered us all cigarettes. Then he strolled to his own trench with his jam and shilling water.

You see, we cannot always be hating and killing, even though we are soldiers. We are human, after all.

KIPLING WANTS BANDS

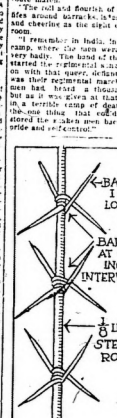
Music an Inspiration to the Soldier, Says the Bard

Rudyard Kipling made an interesting speech at the Mansion House on behalf of the fund for providing bands for the new armies. Here are a few characteristic passages:

"The new battalions were born quite rightly in silence, and there is no reason why they should continue to walk in silence the rest of their lives. Unfortunately most of them have been obliged to walk in silence or to no better accompaniment than whistles, concertinas and other meritorious inadequate substitutes for music with which they provide themselves. From the lowest point of view a few drums and fifes in a battalion mean at least five extra miles in a route march.

"The roll and flourish of drums and fifes stirs no heart-beats. It is rhythm and cheering as the spirit of fire is music.

"I remember in India, in a cholera camp, where the men were suffering very badly. The head of the line had started the regimental air. It went on with that queer, defiant tune. It was their regimental march that the men had heard a thousand times, but as it was given at that sad time in a terrible camp of death, it became one thing that called and gave the soldiers men back to their pride and self-control."



Deadly Barbed-Wire

Kokomo, Indiana, supplies the armies of Europe with deadly barbed wire to make the most formidable entanglements in the war.

The wire has barbs more than one inch long, was cut on a one-eighth-inch steel rod. The barbs are placed in sets of four one inch apart along the steel core, the points standing out at right angles.

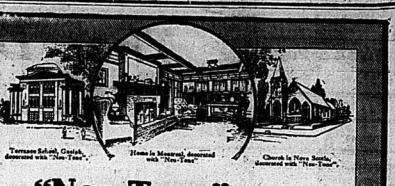
Barbed wire entanglements have come into general use to hold the enemy at bay.

King Albert and a Traitor

No Belgian loves his country more fervently than King Albert of Belgium, and a striking story is told of how he once went up to Paris and punished a traitor who betrayed the Belgian army at Ghemme. The incident was told to a reporter by a trusted Belgian officer who witnessed the incident.

When King Albert heard that one of his trusted commanders had proved a traitor he immediately ordered a court-martial, and the man was condemned to death. At the execution there was a memorable scene. King Albert was present, and when the doomed man stood up to be shot his self-control went up to the ceiling. trembled with rage. Suddenly he drew his sword from its scabbard, and tore from it every decoration, the Belgian equivalent of the Victoria Cross. The officer handed his revolver to the King and asked him to shoot him. The monarch flung the revolver back into his face, stepped back a few feet, signalled to the firing party, and then was rent with a volley, and the man was no more. He had paid the penalty of his treachery.

All Belgians must submit to have a certain number of pigs billeted upon them. But after seven months of Germans probably the Belgians won't mind much.



"Neu-Tone" for the Walls

It is so easy and so economical to have a beautifully decorated home, with "NEU-TONE" Flat Finish.

MAKING MAPS UNDER FIRE

Adventures of the Ordnance Man at the Seat of War

Attached to the headquarters staff of the British Expeditionary Force are experts in every branch of warfare. Among them are officers whose particular work is to mark on maps the precise position of troops along the whole front, and the connecting lines with the rear and base, and also as far as can be ascertained, the lines of the German front. It is from these maps that all movements of troops are planned and arranged at headquarters.

The making of these war maps is work requiring not only considerable expert knowledge, but the coolest courage and daring. Supposing, for example, the army, or a part of it is advancing. The country in front of it must be surveyed before the advance begins, and the position which the troops are to take up marked on the maps. The enemy may have to be, and often is, made aware of it.

An officer on this duty, for example, during the operations connected with the advance to the River Marne, had to mark on his map a line extending from the opening of a valley across an open piece of country, ending at the foot of a narrow, rocky pass, all together about seven miles in length. Whilst engaged on this work he was under fire the whole time from rear patrols of the enemy, his horse being shot under him. Perhaps a hundred or more officers may be engaged on this work, and as soon as the maps are completed they are borne as quickly as possible to headquarters.

The maps are made out in sections, and when all these are put together the exact positions of the troops, and the positions they are to advance to, are shown at a glance.

The maps used are the Ordnance Survey sheets, and these must first all be preserved, and, at the end of the war, will form an exact and precise record of every movement of the British troops in the Great War.

REGRET LACK OF TRAINING

English Schools Feel That Students Should Have Been Well Drilled

The question of military training in the schools is a live one over all Britain, and the chief agitators are not army men, but teachers. All of the higher schools have been called on for substitutes as the British "Tommy" objects to serving under any officer but a gentleman and the teachers feel that they were in a sense to blame for not having given their students some elementary military training further than that of the school cadet corps.

At a meeting of the incorporated association of headmasters in the London Guildhall, F. H. Temp'ar said in regard to New Zealand system of universal military training in the schools: "While conscription produces militarism, training produces intelligent men. The citizen soldier is a man who knows every interest along with the maintenance of peace."

Another speaker pointed out that military drill and rifle shooting were compulsory in the Swiss schools, yet he asked who could accuse the Swiss of militarism.

A resolution declaring that military training in the schools would save the country from having to improvise an army in war time by providing a reservoir of partly trained men, was passed with only a few dissenting votes.

MRS. WISEneighbour says:—

"I should have told you the other day when I was speaking of "Eddy's" Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an indurated Fibreware Tub to hold your clothes if you want to make a success of washday."

MRS. NEWLYWED says: "I've heard of Eddy's Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between Fibreware and Woodenware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat, all in one solid piece, it cannot warp or fall apart, no chance of splinters—it costs much longer, looks much better—and is lighter to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

H. G. Wells, England's famous author, predicts that the naval war of the future will be a battle of submarines. That may be. It is hard to discount the future. In the present conflict, however, they would cut but a sorry figure in reducing the fortifications of the Dardanelles.

It is easy enough to tell how to run a war when one is not on the ground doing it.

In Montreal civic politics the way of the transgressor—or rather—is apparently easy—but the tellow who attempts to expose him is up against it for-fair.

If the Trenton artist who smashed into the Front street hydrant yesterday morning had kept on it. Hoch Quinte, as was his first intention, she would have reached his destination without mishap. It is the quick side twists that get one into difficulty.

Almost daily now come reports of steamers ignoring the orders of German submarines to stop and be torpedoed, and even of freight steamers trying to ram the terrors of the deep. The case of British skippers has evidently not lost any of its proverbial courage.

London Daily Express: "Among the savages of Central Africa war is suspended according to certain rules and conventions. Germany entirely declines to be hampered by any such restrictions. During the last seven months she has broken every tradition of warfare, and she realizes that she is fighting for a losing cause by savagery become the more blatant.

The capture of Przemysl seems to have been a bigger thing that was realized at first. Austrian fortifications dwells on the prolonged siege—but on the details of the surrender. It is clear enough that the Austrian storm may expect to hear overtures for such has had enough of fighting; and peace at any time from Vienna—either directed toward Petrograd or Rome.

Nelson's Prayer

Now, when terrible battles are being fought every day, the Empire would do well to remember the prayer Nelson wrote in his diary on October 21st, 1805, "In view of the enemy":

"May the great God Whom I worship grant to my country, for the benefit of Europe in general, a great and glorious victory, and may no misconduct in anyone tarnish it; and may humanity after victory be the predominant feature in the British Fleet! For myself individually I commit my life to Him Who made me; and may His blessing alight on my endeavours for serving my country faithfully. To Him I resign myself and the just cause which is entrusted to me to defend. Amen. Amen. Amen."

Ingenious German Helmets

Despite the heavy appearance of the German soldiers' helmets, they are exceedingly light. They are made of steel, but they are nearly as light as a straw hat, and far more comfortable.

The large military-looking spike is not placed on the top of the helmet for ornament alone. There are several large holes in it, which ventilate the wearer's head.

The steel from which the helmet is made is exceedingly thin—almost as thin as paper, and all round the inside, next to the helmet touches the head, there are a number of springs. These springs, which are covered with leather, serve to keep the helmet firmly on the head, without any great pressure.

Saucepanned by a Turco

A Turco, one of the soldiers fighting for France, captured single-handed a German captain. After carefully disarming him, he was taking him to the rear, when the officer, in a violent temper, cursed and swore at the gallant Algerian.

The latter stood it for a while, but as the flood of abuse showed no signs of diminishing, he at last pointed his rifle at the German, and calmly handed him and made him carry his knapsack and the whole of his equipment.

He completed the luckless German's discomfiture by sticking a saucepan on his head, and thus led his inhabiter through the lines amid roars of laughter.

SUPERB GALLANTRY OF YOUNG FRENCHMAN

Saved His Colonel in Hail of Lead and Went Back Successfully For Englishman—Twice Wounded

"Jean Berger, 'simple soldat' of the 2nd Regiment of Infantry, should, after the war, be Jean Berger, V.C.," wrote a special correspondent of The London Daily Chronicle from Angers. "He is a Frenchman—yes, but listen to his story! He, a boy of about 18 years of age, lies in hospital here, wounded badly, but not dangerously, in the side and also in the hand."

It was during one of the almost innumerable fights on the River Aisne that the colonel leading the gallant Second was shot down. Machine guns were raking the quickly thrown-up trenches; showers of rifle bullets were falling everywhere around. With that heroism which takes account of nothing save the object in view, Jean rushed out of his shelter to carry his colonel to safety. Through a rain of leaden death he passed scatheless, reached his colonel, and carried him to safety.

As he was performing his glorious act he passed an officer of the Grenadier Guards wounded severely in the leg, who called out for water.

He put the colonel in the shelter of a trench where the Red Cross men were at work, procured some wine from one of the doctors, and set forth again to face the bullet showers. And again he went out untouched.

Hit by Two Bullets

Reaching the English officer, Jean held up the flask to the wounded man's lips, but, before he could drink, a bullet struck the young Frenchman in the hand, carrying away three fingers, and the flask fell to the ground. Quickly, as though the flask had never been slipped out of one hand by accident, Jean picked it up with the other; and, supported by the young Frenchman, the English officer drank.

While he was doing so a bullet drilled, thin, through his cap. Yet, in spite of the intense pain, he managed to take off his knapsack, and, searching in it, discovered some food, which he gave to his English comrade.

"But what about you yourself?" asked the officer.

"Oh!" replied Jean brightly, "it's not long since I had a good meal."

As the Guardsman was eating, he and Jean discovered that near them was a wounded German soldier, who, recovering from the delirium of wounds, was crying out for food and drink. The Englishman, taking the flask, which had still some wine in it, and also the remainder of the food from the Frenchman's knapsack, managed, though suffering great pain, to roll himself along till he reached the spot where the German soldier lay. There, however, he found he was, by himself, too weak to give the poor fellow anything.

So he shouted to Jean to come to his assistance, and, though movement could only be at the cost of great pain, the young Frenchman managed, to, to reach the place, and together, Englishman and Frenchman, succored the dying German. One held him up while the other poured wine between his parched lips.

All Lie in a Heap

Then human nature could stand no more, and all three fell, utterly exhausted, in a heap together. And through the long night, a night continually broken by the roar of cannon, death watched over that strange sleeping place to the three comrades of three great hearts—Britain, France and Germany.

In the morning, shells bursting near the trenches, the English officer "lent" the French soldier. Their German neighbor was dead, and for a long time they could only wonder how the day of battle was going. When the forenoon was well advanced they saw Germans advancing.

"We are thirsty," the weak German, called out. "We are thirsty; please give us drink." Jean, who, as he has since heard by some officer of Uhlans, was highly decorated, dismounting and covering them with his revolver, asked what was the matter.

"We are thirsty," replied Jean. "We are thirsty," replied Jean.

The German looked at the little group. He saw the English officer lying dead with an empty flask beside him, and guessed at what was the scene of comradeship and bravery which the spot had witnessed. He gave instructions to an orderly, and wine was brought and given to the two wounded men.

Just then the cannonade burst forth again with tremendous fury, and the German force which had come up had to retire. Shells were soon bursting all around, and fragments struck the Englishman officer, the became cautious.

Safety at Last

Jean tried to lift the Englishman, but found him he had not sufficient strength left to take his comrade on his shoulder. So, half lifting him, and dragging and pulling him, at times, the gallant little Frenchman brought the wounded English officer nearer and nearer to safety and help. The journey was two miles long!

But at last it was over.

The two men came upon some trenches occupied by the allied forces, and were taken in charge by an officer of the English Red Cross. They had both just enough strength left to shake hands and say good-bye.

"If I live through this," said the officer of the Guards, "I shall do my best to get you the British Victoria Cross. Give your number and that of your regiment. God bless you, gallant comrade." And the Guardsman lost consciousness.

Jean Berger lies in hospital in Angers, he is expected to recover.

"That is the story; and that is why I believe that England will think that Jean Berger, 'simple soldat' of the Second Regiment of Infantry, should become Jean Berger, V.C.," concluded the correspondent.

A large order for bullets was placed with a Toronto firm, the lead to come from British Columbia.

McLAUGHLIN

Power and Economy

Combined with Permanent Service

The "McLaughlin Six," which we made last year caused an entire revolution in automobile construction—providing a most luxurious and powerful Motor Car at a moderate price.

Experienced Motorists throughout Canada showed their appreciation by creating such a demand that we were unable to meet it.

The result is that we have been assured of its popularity, and are able to produce them at and give an even better car—that is the car has many minor improvements in body refinements and mechanical details.

The McLaughlin-Buick famous "Valve-in-Head" Motor develops most power with least fuel. Every Motor is guaranteed to develop and DELIVER more power than any other type of Automobile Motor of equal size of any make.

The "McLAUGHLIN SIX" is of the graceful Streamline design—has Delco starting, ignition and lighting system—dimming searchlights—disappearing tonneau seats—best hand buffed leather upholstering—English weatherproof top material—new vacuum gasoline feed—cantilever rear springs.

Every "McLAUGHLIN SIX" is GUARANTEED to run at least 17 miles to each gallon of gasoline.

SCOTS LOVE THE KILT

Indignation at Prospect of Wearing Full Khaki Garment

Anyone acquainted with the sentimental regard which Scottish people have for centuries had for the tartan kilt will understand the feeling of indignation aroused by the statement that in future Highland regiments are to wear a khaki kilt instead of the familiar tartan. What is worse still, the khaki kilt, according to the latest order, is to be composed of seven yards less material than is at present used.

It is pointed out to those who argue that the brilliant tartan makes the Highland soldiers a conspicuous target for the enemy, that the khaki kilt or covering which they wear when going to the front is sufficient protection.

The Highlanders are very proud of their distinctive dress and its traditional associations. They are as proud of the kilt as they are of their feather bonnet, which, by the way, the War Office endeavored to abolish a few years ago. But the proposal aroused such a storm of indignation that the military authorities ultimately decided to let the Highland bonnet alone.

"It does not seem to be much doubt that the kilt as a Highland garment was originally the outcome of the clan system, which arose in the eleventh century, when a chief gathered his kinsmen around him and fought other neighboring clans or tribes. Each clan would be desirous to have distinguishing marks, and it is possible that this is the origin of the many distinct patterns of tartan which have come into existence, says one authority.

The kilt as we know it today, however, was not the original dress of the Highlander, but is really a modification of the original Highland plaid, which consisted of a plain piece of tartan, from four to six yards in length and two yards broad, which was folded or pleated round the waist and firmly bound with a leather belt, so that the lower side fell down below the knee-joint, the upper part being fastened to the shoulder with a large brooch or pin.

This upper part was often used as a covering for the shoulders and body in wet weather. To either himself in the pleated plaid in the old days required, on the part of the Highlander, no small amount of dexterity. The usual way was to lay it on the floor, and, after carefully arranging the folds, to lie down upon it and then buckle it on. By adding the waist belt the plaid was made to form a blanket, in which the Highlander could at night envelop himself.

Ultimately the Scottish plaid—or "breacanfeile," to give it its true Scottish name—was succeeded by the kilt as we know it today. The plaid and the kilt were supplemented by an elaborate sporran—the original sporrans being made from the skins of wild animals—and stockings, which were usually cut out of the web of the tartan, the garters being of rich colors.

There as a peculiar reason why a Highlander decorated his sporran with silver buttons in earlier times for if was thought that should the wearer fall in battle the value of the buttons would provide him with a decent funeral.

The origin of the white gaiters worn by the Highland regiments also provides an interesting story, for they were worn in memory of some of the trials which they underwent in the Peninsular War. It was during the retreat of the forces under Sir John Moore at Corunna that the soldiers suffered great hardships, their boots becoming worn owing to the rocky nature of the ground on the Portuguese coast. The Highlanders therefore took the shirts from their backs, tore them into strips, and bound them round their feet for protection, and this did not fail to attract considerable notice at home, as the white spats or gaiters were instituted in memory of these trying times.

LOYAL HEAD OF MOSEMS

Aga Khan Offered to Serve as Private Soldier

Widely travelled and as well known in the best English and French circles as in India, the Aga Khan has done more valuable work in connection with the present world crisis than any other Indian potentate by freely and wisely using his great position as the acknowledged leader of the Indian Moslems and the spiritual head of a widely-distributed section of the followers of the Prophet, the Ismailis. When the war cloud burst he was in Zanzibar on the outset of a tour to meet his followers in Africa, and he immediately telegraphed to the councils of the Ismailis within the Empire and on its borders directing the members of the community to place themselves at the immediate disposal of the local British authorities. Not having had a military training in youth fitting him for a commission he offered Lord Kitchener his services as a private, stating that it would be a profound gratification to him to stand shoulder to shoulder with his fellow countrymen and British troops. The authorities justly felt that his life was too valuable and his influence too great to permit of its acceptance.

IT'S THE NAVY THAT DOES IT

It is one of the commonplaces of this war that the operations of the navy are silent and invisible. Little imagination is, however, required to realize the contrast in the conditions at the five greatest ports of Europe. Rotterdam, nominally a Dutch port, but three-fourths German in its services, is languishing in a fraction of its ordinary trade. Antwerp is entirely cut off from its wide-world trade, and the slight ripple on the Scheldt arises from the navigation of small vessels and barges transferring to Germany cotton and other goods "lifted" by the enemy from the warehouses in the Belgian port. The magnificent port of Hamburg affords but a pallatial prison for its own liners that were at its quays when war broke out, whilst a few small craft dart furtively across the Baltic to the Sound between Sweden and Denmark with such parcels of merchandise as can elude the vigilance on the cruisers of the allies or the prohibitions of neutrals. But the trade of London and Liverpool in overwhelming volume flows in and out with each tide, enjoying as much freedom and security as in peace time, and the only problems are to find space and labor for what come, and for what we know is coming in the immediate future.—Westminster Gazette.

FROM VIKING SHIP TO DREADNOUGHT

We hear so much about Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts nowadays, that perhaps, a few words on the evolution of these giant war vessels will be interesting.

In the latter years of the ninth century Britain was attacked continually by the Danes, who used ships about 75 feet long 16 feet wide and 4 feet deep. They were constructed of oak, with carved figureheads and stern-posts, and were propelled by oarsmen as well as a sail. The attacks of the Danes became so frequent that Alfred the Great organized a marine fighting force to protect Britain. So began the British navy.

Cannon were first used during the fourteenth century, but little progress was made with these weapons, and bows and arrows were the chief armament of the navy till late in the sixteenth century. The early part of the fifteenth century was a bad time for the fleet, and it is interesting to note that in 1435-9 the expenditure on the British navy was only about forty-two dollars! Ships of this period were about 100 feet long with two masts and they were no longer propelled by oars or sweeps.

The sixteenth century saw a great improvement in warship construction, including the first Dreadnought, which was built at Deptford in 1573.

Although, in 1637, was launched the Sovereign of-the-Seas, the largest ship up to her time ever built in England; 432 feet long, 232 feet over all, and having 31 anchors, the largest weighing 4,000 pounds.

After the launch of this boat the navy quickly improved, until we come to ships of the Victory type.

The Victory "herself England's most famous ship) was built at Chatham in 1765, and was a first class battleship of 2,162 tons. She was 226½ feet long, 52 feet wide, carried 104 guns, and had a total broadside discharge of 1,116 pounds (not as much as one shell from a modern 12.5-inch gun).

Then came a great revolution in shipbuilding. In the '60's, iron steam-driven warships, began to oust the "wooden walls" of England. The first of these was steamship was the Trident, built at Blackwall in 1845. She was 2,000 tons, 300 feet long, and possessed engines of 320 horse power.

H.M.S. Warrior, built at the Thames Iron Works in 1861 had a displacement of 9,420 tons; armor plating, 4½in tons; length, 380 feet; width, 59 feet; engines of 5,770 h.p. and a speed of 14½ knots. She was considered a marvellous engine of war.

From this date onwards warship building made rapid strides. Until in 1913 was launched the super-Dreadnought Iron Duke, the flagship of Sir John Jellicoe. She is the second battleship to be so named, the older vessel dating back to 1870. There are four Dreadnoughts of this class. Among the novel features are powerful anti-aircraft guns, which can send a projectile to a height of over 10,000 feet. She has a normal displacement of 25,000 tons, is 620 feet long and 89½ feet wide. In places her armored belt is two feet thick. She is armed with ten 13.5-inch guns, twelve 6-inch guns, and four three-pounders besides numerous other weapons, and has four submerged torpedo tubes. With her turbine engines of 30,000 horsepower, she can travel at twenty-one knots an hour.

TREACHEROUS PRISONERS

Germans Surrendered Then Opened Fire on Their Captors

Private William Marlowe, of the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, is in Pankenby Hospital, Liverpool, suffering from a bullet wound in the head, and when his mother visited him he gave her an account of his adventures: "Along with some more of our company he came across a big detachment of Germans who, in response to our request, surrendered. They threw their rifles down and we faced right about and told them to follow. We had got about 50 yards ahead when the Germans, who had picked their rifles up, opened fire and I was shot in the knee. I saw the man who had wounded me fall and I shot him with his head shaved—a big fellow to him and he fired again, but missed, and I then bayoneted him

"I followed my company and was told to go to a farm and get my wound dressed, but I had only been there about five minutes when the Germans bombarded the place. From there I was taken to a church and later reached the hospital here."

The Kaiser's Man

Two British soldiers lay wounded beside a dying German. They were 1,000 miles from home in pain, and one called for a drink.

The dying German understood. "Here," he said, pointing to his water-bottle. Thinking he wanted lifting up, they refused to touch it, but later on they found that he was lying on his water bottle, and so helped to his lips.

It was almost his last hour in the world. He was dying for the Kaiser, but there was a touch of the Kaiser's own nobility in this dying man. "No, not one die; you live," he murmured, as they held the water to his lips.

He died, and one of the Englishmen died too, but the other dug a grave and laid the enemy in it. "We buried him properly," he said, "with a cross of headstone, and I got a stick, and I found a bit of paper, and I wanted to write something on it, and so I wrote 'Ja.'"

He was one of the Kaiser's men, and by rights have been alive today if the Kaiser had been fit to be an Emperor—or to tie the latchet of his shoe.

A New Anæsthetic

A new anæsthetic is being used in the treatment of wounded in the present war. It is understood to be related to amigerzine, a preparation discovered, it is said, too, way by M. Paulin, a distinguished French chemist, and pupil of Pasteur. Its action is not local; it operates upon the nerve centres of the body, and produces a state of drowsiness to pain which may last for several hours. It is claimed that by an injection of this fluid into the system the wounded soldier may be rendered unconscious sufficiently long to cover the period of his removal to the station, where the first serious treatment of his injuries may be seen to.

Every Little Helps

An old lady of ninety sent $5.00 to the Prince of Wales' National Fund which she herself raised by making and selling little silk bags filled with lavender. There was also a cotton button at $1.50 from a little Bristol girl, who had made and sold kettle and iron holders from pieces of soldiers' khaki given her by her father.

SUFFRAGE LEADER DESPISES GERMANY

"Prussian militarism, if it should triumph, would be the most terrible calamity that could happen to the women of the world," declared Mrs. Pankhurst in an interview. "It would mean the return of women to utter slavery—the renewal of the medieval conception of womankind. The militarist-mad type of German regards his wife as chattel—he calls her 'die hausfrau'—his woman!

"The women of England would far rather face the Krupp cannon that submit to the soul-crushing dictates of the Kaiser! It finally necessary to can stand shoulder to shoulder with the men of England, who are, after all, commercial—for the soul of the English woman is now too unfettered, too free, ever to allow the yoke of the woman-contemptuous military Germans to clasp it again into the dumbness of slavery!"

BRAVE DRUMMER BOY

Brother of Winnipeg Man Decorated For Conspicuously Gallant Deed

How a young brother of a Winnipeg man, Mr. R. L. Foster, of the Merlin Hotel newsstand, saved a position for his regiment by gallantry, carrying an important message in the face of the enemy's fire, to be rewarded with the distinguished conduct Medal, was told in the columns of an English exchange. The item read:

"An English lad, a mere drummer, had securing high honor is that of Drummer Arthur W. Foster, son of Sergeant A. Foster, of the Royal Canadian Regiment, who has now gone back to the service and is doing duty in the Machine School of Cookery at Aldershot. The boy has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal by His Majesty the King for conspicuous bravery in the field. He, with his companions in color-sergeant and a private, displayed great coolness and gallantry in bringing up supports and ammunition, and in carrying messages under a deadly hail of fire during a very stiff battle. It was during a privater that has been sent home that Cpl had practically saved the position by getting through with a certain message in regard to supports. Young Foster enlisted as a drummer in the Inoculatation of the Royal Canadian Regiment at Chatham in January, 1912. He is only 17 years of age, and has taken to his profession with great enthusiasm, making himself extremely popular with his companions and much respected by the officers, who think t great deal of him."

TESTING BAYONETS

Almost Impossible For Human Strength to Break Them

Key British soldier will say that nothing in the equipment was more useful than his bayonet. For this few weapons are more valuable in close quarters under a deadly hail of fire during a very stiff battle. Furnishing a Dreadnought

The 12-inch gun of a Dreadnought is 50 feet long, and if set upon end would be higher than many a country church tower. The cost of each gun is about $50,000, while each time it is fired $500 vanishes into the air.

As a protection against the guns of the enemy, a Dreadnought is covered with armor costing $600 per ton, and as something like 6,800 tons are used in covering the vessel this means an expenditure of close upon $2,000,000.

Boilers and machinery at $1,615,000, stores and fittings at $40,000, torpedo-tubes at $15,000 each and guns' projectiles at $2,400 each; and $250,000 for searchlights and electrical fittings make up the total bill which is said to make a Dreadnought the costliest vessel afloat.

Prepared For Raid

Acting on the advice of the military authorities the Witbergen (Holland) district Council called on all shopkeepers in the town to close their shops and cease business for the day of 9 am. An appeal was made to the public.

COALING A WARSHIP

Competition Between Crews Makes Sport of Hard Dirty Work

Although the exigencies of war may demand that a vessel shall be coaled at sea, this indispensable duty is almost invariably carried out in port. A super-Dreadnought of 27,000 tons displacement, and with a sustained steaming speed of 25 knots, is swallowed by 2,000 tons of coal. Indeed, it is vital to a warship nowadays, and the price for this speed, must be paid.

When one considers that, under full steaming conditions, a super-Dreadnought, such as the "Queen" or "Princess Royal," will consume a round 1,000 tons of coal during the twenty four hours—approximately one ton every one and a half minutes—one is able to obtain some tangible idea of the fuel bill which the British Empire has to be prepared to face every year to keep its fleet in being.

"Coaling ship" is the dirtiest operation in the round of toil upon a warship, but Jack is irrepressible in a dirty calling, although it is indescribably filthy; although the finely-divided dust persistently penetrates every crack and crevice of the quarters; although it discolors the skin of the face, finds its way to the lungs, and threatens acute asphyxiation every succeeding moment; and although it entails monotonous between various parts of the physical anatomy and unyielding parts of the ship is user by sport!

Why coal ship? This is the obvious question of the uninitiated. Jack Tar and he will be the first to tell you—he is out to establish a record. The crew of one of his Majesty's super-Dreadnoughts is crowding sail and wide over the fact that they took in a 1,000 tons of coal in three hours something "an unprecedented achievement. Instantly the crew of every other vessel in the navy is on its mettle. It will lower that record by hook or crook.

When the crew is piped to "coal ship," the first and most imperative preliminary is to encase the guns in overtents. Into these down it streams, and to make the living quarters as habitable as a dress against the pervading fine dust. When the consignment in existence is given the Tars buckle into the job with a will that is amazing. The coal is bagged, whisked ashore, and on the tackle descending to the lighter it is discharged into the bunkers in a trickling stream.

It is somewhat strange to observe the extent to which the coal consumption, even on sister ships, varies. Some vessels are hungrier than others, "coalers," as the engineer calls them. Thus the original Dreadnought of 20-21 knots devours fuel greedily at 12 knots speed. On the other hand, when under full power she is a dream against the pervading fuel dust. SOLDIERS' CHEWING GUM

Indians Are Always Asking For It But the British Prefers His Smoke

"Give me a smoke" is the continual request of the Indian, but "Give me some chewing gum" is the cry of the British soldier on the front. The husky fighter prizes his chewing gum as much as the British fighting man values his cigarette. Indeed, the Indians claim that chewing gum not only satisfies the craving for food, but soaking a supply of saliva it keeps the throat moist in the absence of water. The amount of bread eaten in a week by the German soldiers in the field and behind the lines is 60,000,000 loaves, and weighing 60,120,000 pounds. Meat for the same number would make a side of bacon 130 feet long and weighing 16,050,000 pounds.

WEALTH FROM THE WAR

A Bright Idea Has Brought Gold to Hany a Merchant

Many new fields of enterprise were opened without any warning when the war broke out, and many persons have benefited in the direction of ease and make a comfortable sum.

There is a prosperous Birmingham dealer in Birmingham who has hitherto been successful in the manufacture of gas burners. Since the war broke out this might have followed, fortune in the shape of orders for shells. But the first blot of war a plant was hurriedly bought and rented, fitted up and installed, and since then buttons for every occasion, sympathetic smaller buttons for his children's wear have been produced in amazing quantities by the manufacturers of the art of dying proffit.

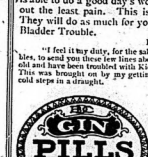
Fine Old Gentleman Suffered 40 Years With His Kidneys

He even had Hemorrhages from the Kidneys, so you may know how bad he was. Yet today, at 67 years, Mr. Allen is able to do a good day's work or enjoy a long drive without the least pain. This is what Gin Pills did for him. They will do as much for you if you have any Kidney or Bladder Trouble.

Port Elgin, N.B. November 12th.

"I feel it my duty, for the sake of those afflicted with similar troubles, to send you these few lines after using 4 box. I am about 67 years old and have been troubled with Kidney Trouble since I was 25 years old. This was brought on by my getting overheated and then getting a cold steps in a draught.



Atlast, I had Hemorrhages of the Kidneys. I went to three doctors and tried most everything on the market but got no relief. I got very weak, had pain and lameness in the back, also. I had to be on duty during theday and it hurt me to be on a steamer. I again tried, but there was no help for me. The bleeding continued for 40 years, until I just happened to try Gin Pills which has now put an end to the trouble.

Now I can look back over 15 months at my relief from suffering and anxious care. I can do a lot of there work and have no pain, although I am still taking 2 pills a week as they seem to make things easier."

FOR THE KIDNEYS

Philadelphia Inquirer: "No bellig erent country ought to be without it," says President Wilson, overlooking, possibly, the fact that they do.

The end of the war prophets are pretty well agreed on the date of the close of hostilities. That will make a record for the bloodiest period in the world's history.

The Turks appear to have resigned themselves to the forcing of the Dardanelles as a matter of course, and the allied fleet before Constantinople. All the conventions seem to be to make the best of the inevitable.

It is well that there are no Newfoundlanders interned in Germany. An Ottawa paper just issued by the Canadian Government prohibiting pastry making. A New England without pie and cake and fish would be puzzling.

Gun Sales to Allies Condemned by Germans

Hamburg Paper Calls Our Trade Murderous—Sneers at Gifts to German Children

LONDON, April 3.—The Times says that in a violent article entitled "Uncle Sam's Earnings From the War", the Hamburger Nachrichten declares that while all the other neutral States are suffering, the Americans are gladly earning thousands of millions from the sale of war materials. The article proceeds:

"The purpose of all these supplies from the United States is to kill or incapacitate sons of the German people and of the Hapsburg Empire. General von Hindenburg asked an American reporter whether any individual manufacturer in the United States has formed a picture of a German warrior torn by a shell of American origin. This picture will not for the Yankee have anything unpleasant about it.

"It is not he who has to bear the pain and mutilation. On the contrary, they make big money and feel comfortably, and if, when forming such a picture, he has any wish it is the wish that these shells may remain many Germans at whom ammunition can be fired. It is clear from the enormous supplies of war material obtained in America and the high price paid for them that the Allies are not in a position to produce supplies themselves.

"They would soon be on the verge of exhaustion if the United States did not come to their help and constantly swell the ranks with fresh material. The war would perhaps already be at an end if it were not for the support insertation from the United States and England by way of Canada and into Russia by way of Vancouver."

After declaring that American neutrality is not allowed to deprive England of the advantages of its position, but that Germany of the fruits of her successes, the writer scoffs thus at American charity and morality:

"By way of compensation the sentimental Yankees send shipfouls of dolls and toys to Germany at Christmas and at Easter, perhaps we shall get a shipload of sweets for the children of our heroes, who have been torn to American shrapnel and dumdum bullets.

"With tears in their eyes, the Americans keep all available hands at work and all their machines running day and night in order to produce masses of murderous material for war against the German people. With unctuous phrases about peace and intervention at their lips, they are manufacturing shells, and in their hearts they cherish only the burning wish that the war may last much longer and longer, and that the opportunity to pocket enormous profits may not soon be taken away from them."

Belgians Refuse to Aid Enemy

PARIS, April 4.—Information has been received here that officials of the Belgian public works department, who agreed to continue their duties with the understanding that they would not be asked to aid in the construction of military works, resigned in a body when ordered by the German military administration to direct the repairs and construction of roads designed for strategic purposes.

The valuable hydrological and historical collection, belonging to M. Hybrigte of Tongres, Belgium, is reported to have been ruined when his house was destroyed. The collection was valued by German experts before the beginning of the war more than 250,000 marks ($37,500.)

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCES IN ATLANTIC STORM

Nearly a Dozen Vessels Destroyed off the United States and Seventy-four Lives Lost—West Indian Liner Founders

NEW YORK, April 5.—(Special)—Death and disaster rode on the terrific hurricane which swept the Atlantic coast, according to reports from many points received here to-day. Almost a dozen vessels of various kinds foundered at sea or were swept to their doom on the shoals, taking a toll of 74 human lives, of whom four were passengers and the remainder seamen. Other lives, dozens of them, were saved by the breeches buoy, and the "S.O.S." wireless call brought succour to more. The gale, which wrought such havoc at sea, accomplished its work on land, too. Telegraph and telephone wires are down all along the coast, so that only the most meagre details of the disaster are obtainable. When all the facts are learned the hurricane toll will undoubtedly far exceed its present known numbers.

By far the most deadly work of the storm was the sinking of the steamer Prins Maurits of the Royal Dutch West Indies Co., which is believed to have foundered some time Saturday afternoon off Cape Hatteras. For some hours the pitiful signal of distress came from the helpless ship. The last heard from her was a wail: "Sinking fast." She carried a crew of between 40 and 50, and four passengers. Not a trace of any of them has been found although the sea has been combed in the vicinity where the ship went down.

WOUNDED LEFT IN TRENCHES FOR THE BRITISH TO RESCUE

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 5.—The latest "Eyewitness" report says there was not hearty co-operation between the Prussians, Bavarians and Saxons at Neuve Chapelle. The Bavarians and Saxons were under the impression that they were grossly mishandled by Prussian officers. Eyewitnes also says the Germans allowed their wounded to lie in front of their trenches without attempting rescue, even when the British moved by pity, went to their aid, the Germans in the trenches continued firing and wounded several would-be rescuers.

Zeppelins' Failure Disappoints Enemy

War Lasses Only Just Met—No Raid on London Likely Until Late Summer

LONDON, April 3.—A "Neutral Observer", writing in The Times of his latest visit to Germany, says:

"The Germans are utterly disappointed with their Zeppelins. London, they repeat, must be bombarded. Not all but a majority of the Germans are glad to hear of the killing of English citizens, no matter whether they are women or soldiers, but London is the place they aim at and want to destroy.

"It is fully realized now that the German army will never be able to enter London, because they under stand at last the impossibility of landing an army."

At the end of 1912 Germany possessed more than thirty airships of different models. What the exact number is at present nobody outside of the highest military circles can say for certain. I had the other day an interesting conversation with a business man who holds a patent for the manufacture of a special article necessary for Zeppelins. He said:

"Even I do not know the exact number and present strength of Germany's air fleet, but I am convinced that it has increased since the beginning of the war. On the contrary I am of the opinion that we have just been able to replace our losses which have been much greater than were expected during the first months. I am still able to build fifteen to eighteen new Zeppelins of a greatly improved model, better armed and able to carry more than two tons of explosives.

"But my fleet is most likely being built for the purpose of reaching London. That city will not be approached by one or two airships but by many and quite regardless of possible losses. If we have not yet made an attempt on London it is because our Zeppelins needed special improvements, shown by experiments during the war."

Washington Is Interested

Secretary Daniels Sees Justification of His Naval Order

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Government officials today showed a lively interest in the declaration of David Lloyd George on prohibition of the use of intoxicants in Great Britain for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of workmen engaged in repairing warships and manufacturing war materials. But there was no official opinion on the part of these officials to which the matter for publication on the ground that it affected another nation. The letter of Secretary Daniels to that effect spread comment, however, in official circles.

On account of his action in abolishing the wine-mess in the naval service Secretary Daniels was asked to say something concerning the affitation in England.

"While I cannot, of course, comment in regard to the King's expression of his willingness to set an example to his people," said Mr. Daniels, "it may be proper for me to say that naturally it is gratifying to one to find that the views that I do with reference to this matter, to find that the subject is being given consideration in other countries from the viewpoint of increasing efficiency. It is coming to be recognized by railroads and great industrial concerns that men who abstain from intoxicating liquors are more efficient, and some of the companies have not only adopted the rule that employes must not drink while on duty, but have insisted that they must abstain at all times. It seems to me that in a great organization like our Navy, where the highest of military and mechanical efficiency are required, we cannot be doing wrong in following the example of the leading industrial concerns."

WILLARD WINS OVER JOHNSON IN 26TH ROUND

Gladiators Enter Ring Five Minutes of Each Other—From the Rounds One to Sixteen Honors are Even—Smashing Blows to Body and Face—Johnson Draws the First Blood—The Fight by Rounds

HAVANA, April 5.—Johnson entered the ring at 1.15 p.m., Willard following at 1.20 p.m.

The pugilists were weighed in the ring. Willard tipped the scales at 230 pounds and Johnson at 225. Time was called at 1.53 p.m. New York time.

Round one—Johnson feinted and landed his left on Willard's jaw, then repeated with an uppercut to the jaw. The latter appeared very nervous. Johnson laughed when Willard drove three lefts to the negro's body. Johnson drove a right to Willard's body.

CUT THROUGH STEEL HULL OF SHIP TO SAVE SAILOR

One of the most thrilling rescues which ever happened or was ever dreamed of was that of the cook of a schuyt craft which had turned turtle off Peterhead.

A salvage craft, the Salvor No. 1 belonging to a Hull firm was on its way to the Humber from the north of Ireland, when stress of weather sent it into Peterhead. There it was moored to the quay and it lay safely in the shelter of the breakwater until nearly seven o'clock, when daylight had begun to creep in.

The anchors may have begun to drag, but whatever the reason, the master evidently decided that there was danger in remaining where he was and he endeavored to put out to the open sea. As the little craft's head headed seaward three immense breakers swept down upon her.

The first caught her a considerable distance across the bar, the second engulfed and almost capsized her, and the third lashed her doom. the ship turning turtle and sinking. The waves washed the craft keel up on to a reef of rocks on the other side of the bay, about 300 yards from the land.

All this happened in a few minutes, and, with no sign of life about the craft the watchers on shore assumed that the crew had been thrown into the sea or carried overboard by the mountainous breakers. Shortly before seven o'clock, however, a hand was descried waving from the fore porthole on the port side of the upturned ship, the owner was facing the beach. The porthole was only a few inches in diameter, and only a little accessible to the raging surf. It seemed impossible to rescue the imprisoned sailor, but Francis McBeddy, a young boilermaker, who has had considerable experience of mechanics and gases in America, thought an attempt might be made to cut through the iron hull by the use of the blowpipe.

Assistant Time and Tide

He accordingly got two cylinders, one of oxygen and the other of acetylene, and, stealing almost naked deep in the water for an hour, made an opening some twenty inches square through which steel plate, and ultimately affected a rescue, which is probably without a parallel. It was the ship's A. B. J. Richen, hailing from Yarmouth, who owed his life to this ingenious and skilful blacksmith.

A great crowd had gathered opposite the scene, and followed the operations of McBobbie and his assistants with intense interest. It was a fight against both time and tide; for the sea was rising. When the poor fellow was hauled into the light of day cheer upon cheer was raised and rescued and rescuer were the heroes of the hour. Riches was, as may be imagined, in a dazed and weak state, and some time elapsed before he was able to make any statement about the ordeal he believed he was the only one of the crew of seven who was below when disaster overtook the ship.

Next day he had completely recovered, and told the story of his terrible experience. "I don't know exactly what occurred. I was down below cooking in the fo'c'sle. I felt a tremendous slapping strike the boat, then everything went topsy-turvy. I was knocked from one end to end of the fo'c'sle, and found the door where the ceiling should be. I could not get out. I did not know what to do, and within a couple of seconds the boat was grating on the rocks inshore. We had turned over so quickly that plenty of air was left in the fo'c'sle, so that even if I was imprisoned for a good many hours I still had enough oxygen to keep me going.

"As the boat lifted to the swell I could see the light through one of the portholes and I put out my hand and waved it. Every minutes or so the boat thumped beneath the waves, and went on for three hours.

"I was almost dazed, and was practically gasping for breath. I heard tapping outside the hull of the boat. Then some one spoke through the porthole. The voice said, 'Where will I cut open the hull?' I indicated this to him, showing him how to keep clear of the stanchions. It seemed hours before I knew anything else. There were fumes of acetylene blown into the vessel, and then something fell with a thud on the rock and pulled me out of the dark dungeon of the hull where for a time death seemed to be my only hope or release."

Mr. McBobbie, the rescuer, is very modest about his part, and said that when he saw the man's hand he realized that with the appliances he was acquainted with there was a fair chance of having his life. At all events, he decided it was worth making the attempt; all he would say was that he was glad his effort had succeeded.

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

All articles and notes under this head are passed by the commanding officer of the 29th Regiment and authentic in every particular.

BELLEVILLE

Rumors of Various kinds were afloat about the city yesterday and today in reference to trouble with the members of the 39th Battalion, who are quartered here, but they proved to be exaggerated, and in many cases were absolutely untrue.

Col. Hemming of Kingston, officer commanding of the 3rd division, Col. Duff, head of the Army Medical Corps, and Dr. Caulfield of Toronto, an expert on meningitis, were in this city yesterday, and went over the barracks of the 39th Battalion. They explained to the men what was necessary to be done in cases of meningitis for their own protection. One thing they urged strongly was that an outbreak of meningitis in camp was in no way due to the barracks in which the men were living or to the city in which they were quartered. Germs had been brought from some outside point.

Their plan is, said Col. Preston, Officer Commanding 39th Battalion, this afternoon to examine every man in the battalion in order to isolate any who are carriers for a few days, and to eliminate the disease within a very short time. For this purpose there is to be a number of experts coming from Toronto on Monday and Tuesday.

The explanation given of the soldiers leaving on Friday night for the station is that they were panic-stricken. The company to which the soldier who died belonged was alone concerned. They had been detailed outside the barracks while precautionary measures were being taken in the barracks, and seeing others marching out to the barracks, but not knowing where they were going, they decided to go away, and they went off to the station. However, they were persuaded to return, and are now housed in the Armouries for the night.

It was currently reported that a member of the 39th Battalion had made his escape from the military quarters on Pinnacle street, by leaping out of the second storey window. Such is, however, not the case. The party did escape from the building and was found on the bay shore. He became frightened from some cause, but was by no means suffering from any ailment, otherwise than fright. He effected his escape by getting upon a landing and then reaching the ground.

An enlister was yesterday afternoon apprehended and for a brief period was held in detention at the police station. It was alleged that he had left without leave, and gone to his home at Picton, where he was apprehended and brought back. It appears that he had received a pass for absence but it was subsequently countermanded, hence the misunderstanding. The case has been satisfactorily settled.

No. A12700 Pte. A. T. Davidson 'C' Company, having died at this station on the 2nd inst., is struck off the strength of the Battalion accordingly.

With reference to B. O. No. 30, para 8 of the 1st inst., the promotion of Acting Corporal of No. A12616 Pte. J. Beesley, 'C' Company, is cancelled and the following substituted:—No. A12230 Pte. E. Palmer, "C" Company. 30-12-14.

The investigation at Lindsay resulting in a number of the men rejected here being declared medically unfit by the Board, and similar results are expected at Peterboro, although the percentage of 57th men sent back was very small.

Until further orders all officers will attend the early morning parade.

The undermentioned officers are attached to the Battalion for duty and instruction and are posted to companies as stated on the dates stated against their names:

Lieut. McPhun, 1-4-15, to "B" Coy.
Lieut. Maund, 1-4-15 to "B" Coy.
Lieut. A. B. Colville, 2-4-15, to "D" Coy.

The Young Men's Christian Association have issued an invitation to all men of the 39th, whether Association members or not, to make use of their building for reading and writing. Special tables are being put up and writing materials will be supplied. In the evening, 8.15, there will be a musical and patriotic song service for the men.

KINGSTON

"Ken." Williams the well-known rugby player, has received a commission in the Army Service Corps, and has been transferred to the 39th Battalion at Belleville where he will be supply officer, succeeding Capt. J. Welch. Lieut. Williams attended a class a few weeks ago in Ottawa and qualified with high honors.

W. Nickle, son of W. F. Nickle M.P., has applied for membership in the Queen's platoon of the 39th Overseas Battalion.

A medical enquiry into the cases of the Peterboro men who were sent back from Belleville and Ottawa as medically unfit was conducted at the Peterboro Armouries on Wednesday afternoon by Lieut.-Col. H. R. Duff, A.D.M.S.

D'Arcy Smith, who played goal for Montreal the past winter, and who last year played with Toronto R. and A.A. has enlisted and is in Kingston with the Varsity battery.

Major Brown, G.S.O., Major E. W. Jones and Capt. A. K. Hemming, 21st Battalion, are on a board of officers and will examine the N.C.O.'s of the 21st Battalion wishing to qualify for lieutenants.

Six boxes of books have arrived in the city for the Germans at Fort Henry. The books are first read by one who understands the Teuton language and then handed over to the patients at the fort. They are sent here by the German Embassy at Washington.

All recruits under twenty-one years of age who apply for enlistment, must have the consent of their parents in writing before they can be sworn in.

Days of Rheumatism Now Over! Wonderful Miracles Worked by "Nerviline"

IT'S STRANGE POWER IS THE MARVEL OF THOUSANDS IT HAS CURED.

You will welcome the good news that "Nerviline" rapidly relieves the most excruciating pains.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the tissue, and possesses pain-subduing power at least five times greater than anything heretofore discovered. Its curative influence upon rheumatic pains is really wonderful.

Nerviline is offered to the people of this community under a positive guarantee of its reliableness.

As a curative agent of severest pain, every rheumatic should test this great remedy.

Rheumatism is the greatest test Nerviline has to meet. It cures pains, big and little, but to rheumatics especially it is a great blessing, just as it is to those who suffer from neuralgia, lumbago, stiffness or enlarged joints.

Remember this: There is nothing harmful in Nerviline.

You can use it freely on your children for their aches and pains. It is dependable, reliable, safe. Nothing to equal good old Nerviline as a general family remedy.

Get the large 50 cent family bottle; it is far more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

MEETING POSTPONED

Owing to the fact that today, Easter Monday, is a public holiday, the regular meeting of the City Council is postponed until tomorrow evening.

DEATH OF INFANT

Yesterday evening an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. Walker of this city passed away. The little one had been ill for some days.

BAND CONCERT

Under the auspices of the Fifteenth Regimental Band, a sacred concert was given in the Grafton Opera House last night. Many who desired to attend were unable to do so, as every available seat was taken. The programme given was in every respect most satisfactory.

FATAL ACCIDENT

A sad accident occurred in the 9th concession of Sidney, near Glen Ross yesterday, when the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. D. A. Wheeler, a farmer of that section, was fatally injured by a horse. The boy was in the stall with the animal, when it viciously knocked him down and trampled upon him until life was nearly extinct, death occuring about three o'clock this morning.

TEACHERS IN CONVENTION

A number of school teachers from the city and vicinity will attend the Ontario Public School Teacher's Convention, which opens tomorrow in Convocation Hall, Toronto. An excellent programme has been provided in the afternoon the president, officers and members of the national executive of the I.O.D.E. will entertain the members of the convention as a musicale and tea from four to six o'clock. Under the auspices of the Alma Garnochan Chapter, Sir George Foster will address the convention. There will be a banquet in the evening.

REMAINS SENT HOME

The remains of the late Private A. T. Davidson of Lorneville, Victoria County, who was attached to the 39th Battalion, and who died here as the result of an attack of typhoid fever, arrived here at an early hour this morning taken to the G.T.R. station for shipment to his late home. An escort under the command of Sergt.-Major McManus accompanied the body from Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment to the station. Yesterday many of the deceased comrades viewed the body, which was hermetically sealed in an air-tight case. Upon the casket was placed many beautiful floral tributes from the officers and others who are connected with the 39th Battalion.

DEATH ROLL

MR. D. PATTERSON.

On Sunday Mr. Wm. D. Patterson passed away at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. C. L. Babcock, Bellonerville, Prince Edward County. Deceased was 73 years of age and had been in failing health for some time. A few months ago he came from Whitby to make his home in the adjoining county. By profession Mr. Patterson was an electrical engineer. He had been for some time a member of the Methodist church. Besides his son and daughter, Mrs. C. L. Babcock, survive; also two brothers, John Y., of Whitby and Charles of Manitoba.

MRS. E. J. SISSON.

WEDDED ROMANCE IS STILL POSSIBLE

Sentiment Should Not Be Dropped When Courtship Days Are Over, Says Englishwoman

Marriage, rightly understood, so far from making a former lover indifferent and careless, ought to make him fondly devoted, declared a woman writer in an English periodical.

If marriage is anything, it is a solemn compact between two twin souls to stick to each other through thick and thin, and to make each other's happiness the chief end and aim of their lives.

Yet there are innumerable jokes about the way the wedding rubs off the bloom of matrimony; how the waning of the honeymoon is really an eclipse of the sun of love and devotion; how the cares of life make one careless of the things that matter most.

But is marriage really the fiasco it is so often represented to be? Probably not that is, not quite as bad. Probably the truth would be that nine-tenths of married couples leave a lot to be desired in the conduct of their married life, simply because they are so much together that, bit by bit, they throw off the sweet little amenities which made the days of courtship an immortal—yes, sacred memory.

Positively many a wife looks at her husband across the breakfast table, and wonders if he is really and truly the same man who had the lovelight in his eyes ten, twenty years ago.

Can he really be the man who used to buy her a box of chocolates once a week at least? She had to chide him in those days, and tell him to save his money for more important things. She never has to chide him now. She would think the silly was about to fall if he were to drop a box of chocolates in her lap. Yet if he did! Just once in a while! What a difference it would make.

Not that she cares for chocolates as chocolates. Not she! She would give them all to the children. It is as an evidence of her husband's continued loving thought for her that she values a little gift.

Of course, the man is not always the chief sinner. Sometimes a wife devotes the "don't-be-silly!" type of foolishness. She becomes frightfully matter-of-fact.

One would think a kiss was a real infliction, and, as for allowing her husband to give her a good, old-fashioned squeeze—well, she would not dream of such a thing.

"When people are married they ought to be sensible," she says. And her pet conduct is really by no means sensible, although she seems to think it is.

Wives Take Note!

A woman who gives her husband a peck when he asks for a kiss, or pouts a face and asks him when he has shaved last, or tells him his moustache smells like a skunk cabbage is looking for trouble. She would not have done or said these things when they were courting. She would have feared to hurt his feelings. Doesn't she fear to hurt his feelings now?

The taunt sometimes thrown at married folk that they act like two spoony lovers is the best of compliment. Probably the taunters wish they could be sharers in the same ideal state of affairs.

The man who laughs at his old love-letters is the presence of his wife is foolish, and if he does it in her absence he is a traitor. All that kind of pretence that love was something that belonged to the calmer days of courtship, and is only a subject of mirth, is essentially wrong. The Bible did not make a mistake when it called love the greatest thing in the world.

When you catch a married couple of ten years' standing saying to one another, with a tender inflection of voice, "Do you remember?" you may be pretty sure that they have found the secret of perennial courtship.

GLAD EASTER SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE CHURCHES

Large Congregations Attend Throughout City—Inspiring Music Rendered and Discourses in Keeping With the Day

Yesterday was certainly a bright day to all a happy Easter Sunday, in the various churches of the city special services commemorating the day were held. Large congregations were present to take part in the services. Special music was provided by the choirs and the discourses were all relative to the resurrection of the Saviour of mankind.

JOHN STREET

The Easter theme marked the music and sermons in John Street Church at both services yesterday. Rev. E. C. Currie chose as his text in the morning Ps. 116:8, "Thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling." He described these words as unique and aptly suited in relation to Easter, which of all public seasons has the preeminence. He then dwelt upon the three natural divisions of the text. Easter comes with its message of life. The ministry of Jesus was prophetic of this. His declaration of His purpose was to give life, and His resurrection was the ratification of His claims. Two results accrue: (1) Death is no longer the dread monster to beget chill and shrinking. (2) We sorrow not as those who have no hope. Through the Easter music comes the message: "The bother shall rise again." And our eyes are delivered from tears. new incentive is given to life. The preacher then dwelt upon the relief influences of the Easter hope.

The evening service was mostly of a musical character. Easter hymns and anthems were well sung, and the choir, under the efficient leadership of Mrs. A. E. MacColl, did itself credit. The solo by Mr. MacKay was also much appreciated. Mr. Currie spoke for a few minutes upon the effects of the Easter hope in possession and told the following points: (1) Grief is assuage. (2) Gratitude is stirred. (3) Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself. (4) All work is the better done, and when the end comes there is quietness and confidence.

BRIDGE STREET

At the evening service there was a large congregation present and all were much inspired by the discourse of the pastor, Rev. H. S. Osborne, and the selections given by the choir under the able leadership of Prof. Cameron. The pastor's discourse was based on the words found in St. Mark 16th chapter and 3rd verse: "And they said among themselves, who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?"

During the service the choir rendered in a most able manner an anthem entitled "Unfold Ye Portals", from Gounod's Redemption. Miss M. Stork rendered most acceptably a solo entitled "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth", from Handel's Messiah. The Anthem Resurexit, was given. Miss. Stork taking the solo part. A quartette composed of Miss Stork, Miss Price, Prof. Cameron and Mr. Staples sang "Hosanna", by Gremier. Mr. Staples sang a solo entitled "My Hope is in the Everlasting," from Jairus.

EMMANUEL CHURCH

The services both morning and evening were bright and happy with Easter song and story. The rector, Rev. A. M. Hulley, preached at both services. The morning text: Matt. xxvii, 6; subject: "The Garden Grave." Evening subject: "The Vanquished Foe"", 1 Cor. xv. 55

Both sermons were cheering in tone and evangelical in doctrine. Hymns for the day were also selected: "Happy Morning", "Jesus Christ is Risen to-day." "Bread of the World in mercy broken", "The Strife is O'er, the Battle won," "Ye choirs of New Jerusalem", and "The Day Thou gavest Lord is ended."

The morning anthem was: "Christ Arose", by Robert Lowny. The evening anthem; "He rose and left the grave", by H. P. Banks. A large number participated in the Communion of the Lord's Supper. The offerings were $131.65.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Large audiences gathered at both services at the Baptist Church yesterday to celebrate Easter. The church was fittingly decorated with ferns and Easter lilies. Rev. Dr. Gaetz, Chas. G. Smith, preached appropriate sermons. The music was in keeping with the day and of a high order. The large chorus choir under the direction of Mr. W. B. Riggs, rendered the following selections: Anthem, "Christ Arose," with solo parts by Miss Brown and Mr. Davidson. Solo, "Hail Easter Morn", Miss. Margaret Brown. Anthem, "O Lord of Life." Quartette, "Jesus died for us", by Miss Brown, Mrs. Doolittle and Messrs. Davidson and Cook.

Mrs. W. R. Beeton, associate-organist, presided at the new pipe organ, and rendered splendid accompaniment to the music and also musical numbers throughout the day. A communion service was held in the morning, and a Baptismal service at night.

ST THOMAS CHURCH

The queen of festivals, Easter Day, was fittingly celebrated in the Parish Church of St. Thomas yesterday. Services began with celebrations of the Holy Communion at seven and eight o'clock, at both of which there were large congregations. The church was beautiful with Easter lilies and other fine and potted flowers. At eleven o'clock the chief service of the day was rendered, a choral celebration of the Holy Communion. The sermon by the Rector, Rev. Canon Beamish, was founded on the words of the Easter Anthem: "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us, therefore let us keep the feast." There were in all 258 persons who received Holy Communion. In the afternoon an open session of the Sunday school was held, with addresses by the Superintendent, Mr. Elliott, and also by Mr. Snepd. The service in the evening was full choral with anthems and solos by the choir. The Rector was again the preacher. The offertories of the day totalled upwards of $330.

Throughout Lent the services were unusually well attended, averaging for the most part over 50 persons every day. During the "Three Hours" service on Good Friday the church was filled to overflowing and from first to close with reverent and devout worshippers who joined heartily in the responsive services and the passion sermon. The Rector gave the addresses, eight in number, and also held an additional service at eight o'clock, which also was largely attended. The sung Eucharist is the most beautiful of the Anglican Church services and Prof. Priestley in his setting (founded upon the ancient Gregorian tones) has quite caught the devotional atmosphere. The full choir, under the ability direction of the composer, gave excellent rendering. The celebrant, Canon Beamish, sang the intonations and responses, also the Gospel and Preface and cross (showing the progress of Christianity through the world) was most impressive and uplifting. Mrs. C. Wilmot sang the offertory, "The Resurrection Morn," and Mr. Allan Harper "Solve, Festa Dies" both renditions being most inspiring. In addition to the communion office, the choir sang "In Excelsis Gloria." Many of the large city churches cannot boast of better music than is heard at St. Thomas.

THE TABERNACLE

The Easter services at the Tabernacle Church yesterday were very bright and inspiring. The choir rendered excellent anthems, which reflect ed much credit on their leader, Mr. J. Grant. Especially pleasing was the solo, sung by Mrs. Singer at the morning service, "Hear My Cry," by Mrs. Singer has a voice of fine quality and compass, and is a decided acquisition to the musical circles of our city. Miss Gunn sang very sweetly and correctly at the evening service.

The Ladies Trio, Mrs. Nicholson, Duff and Miss Gunn, sang very well "The Homeland." Mrs. Duff's numbers on the organ were given in her own inimitable style, and were enjoyed by all present. The music was of a high order. In the morning the pastor gave an interesting resume of the history of the Tabernacle Church and Congregation from its earliest records in 1838 down to the time of Union in 1883. In the evening the subject was Patriotic: "Volunteers for Jesus."

The following is a list of the music rendered yesterday:

Anthem—Full Chorus—"Christ Our Passover."

Solo—Mrs. Full Chorus—"They Have Taken Away My Lord."

Solo—By Mrs. Singer—"Hear My Cry, O Lord."—(Wooler.)

Solo—By Miss Gunn—"Face to Face."

Trio—Mrs. Grant, Nicholson, Duff—"The Homeland."

ST. ANDREWS' CHURCH

There was good singing at both the services. In the morning the choir rendered the following selections: Anthem, "Christ Arose," Solo by Corp. Lightheart, who is soloist in St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro'; Anthem, "Hallelujah Chorus," "This is the Day that the Lord Hath Made"; A solo by Mr. Wrightmeyer, and a male chorus entitled, "Up From the Grave He Arose." The pastor preached from the text "How say some amongst you that there is no Resurrection of the Dead." He followed Paul's argument that the denial of the Resurrection involves the denial of the Resurrection of Christ, the reality of the new life, and the honesty of the Apostolic witnesses and no one who knows history and reality can do that.

In the evening the music rendered by the choir, under the able direction of Mrs. A. P. Allen, was of high merit. Two anthems were sung; "King of Kings," and "Arm, Soldiers, of the Lord." Also a ladies double quartette sang very sweetly. The pastor chose as his text the words in Revelation 1:18, "I was dead and behold I am alive forever more and have the keys of Hades and death." He pointed out that these words stated three great facts upon which Christian Church is founded: viz. The Cross, The Resurrection and Supremacy of Life over Death.

In the afternoon an open session of Sunday School was held, when there was a large attendance of parents and children. Those taking part in the exercises were Mr. Wm. McIntosh, superintendent; Mr. George Kelley, Mr. Kelso Roberts and Rev. Mr. Kerr. The new Victor lantern was used for the first time and the Easter Bible Pictures were full of instruction to those who saw them. A number of children in beginners and primary department also took part in the exercises.

CHRIST CHURCH

The Easter Services yesterday at Christ Church were in keeping with the greatest festival of the Christian year. There was an exceptionally large number of communicants at the three morning services, 8, 9, and 11 o'clock. The special Easter music was as follows: At 11 a.m.—Arthur Derry's communion service was sung and the anthem, "Why Seek ye the Living among the Dead?" by Cooke, was rendered. At Evensong the magnificat and Nunc Dimittis by Tonos were sung. The anthem was Gounod's "The Living" and a solo "Hosanneal," by Miss Anna Fenton.

The annual meeting of the church was decorated with Easter lilies, as also was St. George's were the 9 o'clock service was held. The total offering for the day approximated $340, the largest ordinary Easter offering in the history of the Church. At the Sunday School yesterday afternoon prizes for catechism study were presented by Rev. A. L. Geen, the Rector, and Mr. W. Griffith.

BETHEL HALL

Last evening at Bethel Hall, Mr. J. C. Hill, evangelist, late of New Jersey, delivered a very instructive address on the present war, showing in his comments from a Scriptural standpoint, with past and future events. He showed from the prophecies of Daniel that there were to be four great world powers, and how the history of the world had fulfilled this and that at the termination of the 4th world power the Lord Himself would set up His Kingdom on earth. Before the end of the personal coming for His church as the Bridegroom for the Bride, must take place. He showed that we were in the period of prophecy, but a harbinger of these soon coming events, all which would be fulfilled in the sign of Easter, and here about the resurrection, in proportion measure of the old Roman Empire.

HALLOWAY STREET

At the services yesterday the pastor, Rev. A. R. Sanderson officiated and the discourses were in keeping with Easter. In the morning his subject was "The Empty Garden," having reference to the Risen Savior. The choir rendered special selections for the occasion.

Sir William Crooks Lenses

During the past five years there have been more experiments and greater advancement made in the manufacturing of glass for ophalmic lenses than was accomplished during three hundred years preceding. In 1909 Sir William Crooks, one of the world's foremost scientists and well known for his splendid work that led to the discovery of X-Rays, was induced by the Optical Committee of the Royal Society of London, to investigate and if possible find a prevention for the numerous cases of cataract. Sir William Crooks found the trouble to be due chiefly to Heat Rays, and started experiments on different kinds of glass that would cut out these rays, but decided also to enlarge the research to include glasses that would cut out the Ultra-Violet Rays, (which have been suspected to be the exciting cause of much irritation and inflammatory condition of the eyes). Sir William Crooks made over three hundred experiments, extending over four years, before finally succeeding in perfecting a lens that cuts out all the harmful ultra-violet rays and forty per cent. of the heat rays, while at the same time they let through 89% of visible light. This is the first time that a tinted glass has ever been produced for optical purposes which cuts out so much of the ultra-violet rays without changing the natural color of objects.

It is a common complaint of people wearing glasses that their eyes often smart and feel gritty. This is because the ultra-violet or chemical rays in the white light act and also the red heat rays are intensely irritating to the sensitive tissues. In Crooks lenses the harmful ultra-violet and 40 per cent. of the heat rays are absorbed, consequently the result that such glasses give absolute comfort and rest to the eyes. It is a great blessing which Sir William Crooks has been the means of bestowing on humanity, something which wearers of glasses have for many years been looking for."

We are pleased to be able to announce to residents of Belleville and surrounding country that we are now able to supply these lenses ground in any form required—Alexander Ray, Belleville's Eye-Sight Specialist.

SUBMARINE WARFARE

Notwithstanding the activity of the German submarines off the British coasts marine insurance in London still remains at a moderate figure. The Government rate is one per cent., and Lloyd's as well as the marine companies compete with it, although the rate has been hardening since recent losses. In an interview reported in a New York paper the commander of a German submarine indulges in tall talk about what is going to happen in the near future. He says the vessels and crews are becoming more efficient every day and boasts that before long British commerce "will be strangled." He cannot understand, however, why insurance rates are so moderate, probably because he is unwilling to realize that the damage done is really insignificant by comparison with the vast amount of tonnage going in and out of British ports every week, counting ships as well as ocean ships included. This commander justifies the torpedoing of passenger vessels practically on the ground that for Germany everything is fair in war, and that there are no longer any German vessels in the passenger business to be destroyed. He is frank enough to explain that he and others in control have a method of concealing their periscopes so that it is extremely difficult for a British merchant ship to learn of its danger. According to The Montreal Gazette, English journals who employ naval experts say the radius of action of the submarines now extends from the west coast of France to the west coast of Ireland. They concentrate outside a particular port for a time, then return to their base, and, after repairing damages and giving crews a rest, go on another "beat" usually for ten days. When some of the nations of antiquity made use of Greek fire in naval battles or to destroy a besieged town, others protested that it was a barbarous innovation because it exposed the non-combatant as well as the combatant to a painful death. During the Napoleonic wars the British War Office rejected a number of inventions for taking life by wholesale for much the same reason. In the Peninsular campaign Wellington refused to open fire on towns filled with a civilian population which had "sniped" his soldiers. "I am here," he said on one occasion, "to fight the enemy, not to kill the innocent." In all modern wars till the present one consideration has been shown to the passengers on enemy merchant ships, but the Germans have no regard for what an old text-book writer calls the "conventionalities and standards of mercy and fair play." It is a sad commentary on Kultur.

In its proclamation of February 4th the German Admiralty declares that all enemy merchant ships within the zone of the British coasts would be destroyed. "Even if it may not be possible always to save their crews and passengers," so that everyone was warned of what is now happening. On the other hand, leading German newspapers gave the assurance that the lives of passengers would be scrupulously protected. But that profession is now abandoned, and the passenger is sent to a watery grave with the rest. The First Napoleon was not a very tender-hearted soldier, but he said in one of his Austrian campaigns, there may have been some warrant for silence. Out of the public indignation aroused by these latest crimes there will almost certainly come a demand that our Government take notice of them. It is be true that the life of an American was lost when the German submarine destroyed the Falaba, our protest should be made at once. At any rate, now that we have been put on notice that Germany intends to carry on naval warfare by methods that belong to the primal savage, the American public will be very little concerned about protests against mere interference with our commerce. When monstrous crimes against humanity are committed minor offences sink into insignificance.—New York Times.

MURDER ON THE HIGH SEAS

The tales of German atrocities in Belgium, even if we assume them all to be true, are outdone in horror and savagery by the act of the commander of a German submarine in sending a torpedo against the British merchant steamer Falaba while many of her officers, crew and passengers remained on board, and others were still lowering the boats. The facts are attested by many witnesses. It is beyond dispute that the German commander discharged the torpedo which destroyed the Falaba before her crew and passengers could possibly have time to get into boats after repeiving his warning to leave the ship. In consequence more than one hundred innocent victims lost their lives. Again, in the case of the Aguila, the German submarine U-28 ordered fire before the ship's company could lower the boats, killing a woman passenger, the chief engineer, and two of the crew, and kept up the fire while boats were being lowered. This is not war, says the New York Times, it is murder. It has not even the palliations of piracy, for the pirate, like the highwayman, kills for gain, not because he delights in slaughter. The sinking of the Falaba is perhaps the most shocking crime of the war. It is a crime directly chargeable against Germany, a crime for which Germany will be held responsible in the judgment of civilization, unless an official disclaimer of the act as unauthorized and condemned is promptly forthcoming. It is well-nigh incredible that whatever threats Germany may have made in her war zone proclamation, she should have issued to the commanders of her submarines orders to commit these crimes of fiendishness atrocity. The sinking of a peaceful merchant ship, even though she belongs to the enemy, and the killing and drowning of her officers, crew, and passengers, are no part of the operations of war.

The objects of the war are not furthered by the slaughter of innocent men and women. And in authorizing or permitting her naval commanders to carry on war in this savage manner, the Germans do infinite harm to themselves. The destruction of the Falaba and so large a part of her company in this ruthless way tends to make the stories of German atrocities credible. At a time when the Germans know and admit that they are condemned by the opinion of civilized nations, it behooves their Government to be prompt in denouncing the Falaba crime as an unauthorized act.

The Government at Washington has been criticized for its failure to protest against repeated violations of the laws and usages of war. We made no protest against the outrage upon neutral Belgium, none when Germany began the planting of mines in the open sea. In view of our profession of strict neutrality, there may be some reason for silence. But the public indignation aroused by these latest crimes should not be held back. It is true that the life of an American was lost when the German submarine destroyed the Falaba, our protest should be made at once. At any rate, now that we have been put on notice that Germany intends to carry on naval warfare by methods that belong to the primal savage, the American public will be very little concerned about protests against mere interference with our commerce. When monstrous crimes against humanity are committed minor offences sink into insignificance.—New York Times.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Ottawa Government is reported as being determined to punish the war profits grafters. And they should be hit as hard as possible.

Montreal News: "The gentle Kaiser is quite capable of bobbing up serenely one of these days and disavowing all knowledge of the submarine murders, which will be characteristically "smart" German "diplomacy."

Toronto News: "The country would have many millions of dollars for the next quarter of a century if the National Transcontinental Railway could be leased under from Cochrane to Moncton."

The Wall Street Journal declares that the great stroke planned by the Germans for a quarter of a century has failed. "The numerous plans which were to 'exterminate' hay have not done so in the sense that humanity has been appalled by their murderous futility." The Journal believes that Austria is on its last legs, and that the population of the Germans is in sight.

SAVING FIVE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS

In Western Canada they burn one million tons of flax straw a year. Why didn't they think to ask why they burn many millions of tons of wheat straw a year. The answer is that nature is so prodigal, they can afford to do so, as long as they continue to raise the greatest wheat crop in the world. The reason they burn the flax straw, however, is because there has been no market for it as it is grown at present, but the flax plant with its valuable fibre can and will be raised in a marketable form in the near future. The climate conditions and the soil of Western Provinces are ideal for the growing of this plant, from the fibre of which the world's linen is made.

In 1914 the total area in flax in the West amounted to one million and a half acres, properly grown this would have yielded at least two million tons of fine flax straw worth on the basis of the lowest prices for the European product five hundred million dollars.

In Europe there is not much science employed in the methods of flax cultivation and harvesting methods are simple, yet Irish flax fibre during the last five years has brought $325.00 a ton and Belgium flax has averaged over $400.00 a ton.

The War in Europe has practically cut off the supply of this commodity and it is stated that the existence of the Irish and Scotch industries are threatened by the scarcity of the crude product. This presents an opportunity for the Western Provinces to grow flax at great profit because there will be a great demand in all countries for high grade fibre. Proper methods of course will have to be adopted but these do not necessitate disorganization of present farming operations.

A larger quantity of seed will have to be sown for fibre than for seed production, from two and one-half to three bushels to the acre, according to the quality of the straw to be produced, and this will yield from one and one-half to two tons of fine flax straw. Owing to this close method of sowing, aeration to a great measure is prevented and the plant in its efforts to reach the air and sun grows up in long straight stalks, thus a long thin fibre is secured. This method has the advantage of preventing branching on the single root. The straw is harvested by pulling the plants straight up by the root, the object of this being to secure every bit of the fibre. The ripeness of the plant is judged by its color; when it reaches a yellow tinge two thirds of its length from the root up it is ready for harvest.

While it can be seen that there is a good deal of variation between the Irish price and the high grade price paid for the Belgian product; special grades of flax command still higher prices. Fine certain fibre for example is harvested when the plant is in flower, the fibre is used for point lace, etc. and is worth from eighty-five cents to one dollar and ten cents per pound. The straw is stacked and remains exposed to the weath ten or fifteen days before it is put under cover. The threshing is done in such a manner that the straw remains whole and unbroken.

Experts appointed by the Dominion Government and others who have investigated the conditions in Western Canada agree that there is much land open for homesteading along the line of the Canadian Northern Railway that is ideal for flax growing, and that there is no reason w hythe finest flax straw in the world should not be raised in these districts. From the first breaking flax can be grown, although it could not be expected that fine flax straw would be raised the first year, but the flax seed will yield sufficient to put the homesteader on his feet. One advantage in planting flax the first year is that it is one of the best crops to break up the soil and in free certain natural fertilizers that remained latent in virgin soil which is too rich at the first to grow wheat. It is necessary, of course, that those who are going in for flax growing should be careful in the rotation of crops and the same seed must never be sow on the same ground for more than two consecutive years if a really high grade fibre is desired.

AGRICULTURAL BULLETINS

So great has been the demand for Bulletins, Pamphlets, Reports and Reports upon the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa as a result of the Patriotism and Production Movement; that it has been found impossible to comply with all the applications as promptly as could be desired. Of some of the Bulletins the supply has been exhausted and no time has been afforded for reprinting, the tenors have a ring.

WOMAN'S PROBLEM

Stripped Herself of Her Little Artifices to Save a Young Girl.

By FRANK FILSON.

"Come here, Gi; don't look at me like that. I warn e dragon!"

Elsie went forward and looked at Miss Ingleby with an expression of so much admiration and tender adoration that the elder woman flushed her white cheeks and her eyes twinkled ecstatically as they did in the posters with which almost every boarding house in the United States had been decorated at one time or another.

She went forward defiantly, but a moment later somehow she found that she was crying upon Miss Ingleby's shoulder, while the singer caressed her and patted her hair gently.

"So I hate sinking her head away from her and she wants him back!" whispered Miss Ingleby. "Isn't that so, Gerda?"

Elsie raised her head. "I shouldn't mind—for my own sake—if it weren't Tom," she sobbed. "But I know you are only amusing yourself with him, because Tom is much younger than you."

"How old are you, child?" inquired Miss Ingleby.

"Twenty," said Elsie defiantly.

"And Tom?"

"Tom is twenty-five. And you must be nearly thirty," said Elsie. "So I know you don't want to marry Tom. And we were to be married at Christmas, and now—now he won't speak to me."

The match between Elsie Lennon and Tom Bates was approved by all Kentville, for Tom was a rising young business man of the town and Elsie's father, old Major Lennon, who kept the summer hotel, had been one of the first settlers. And they had been sweethearts for years.

Since the singer had come to spend a couple of weeks' vacation, however, he had had no eyes for poor little Elsie. He seemed fascinated by the older woman's bright eyes and witty talk, her mature ways and air of the world.

"Never you mind; you shall have your Tom again," whispered Miss Ingleby encouragingly.

But it seemed a harder problem then Miss Ingleby had expected. She had not meant to lead Tom astray. But a woman of the world often forgets that the light exchange of repartee and badinage may be the cut and thrust of mortal earnest to an inexperienced young man.

It was Tom who furnished her with her opportunity that evening when they sat together on the piazza.

"Miss Ingleby," he said, "I want to tell you something. You are going away on Thursday—but I don't want you to go out of my life. You have made me love you—"

"Love you!" she exclaimed. "Why, you are nothing but a boy!"

"I am twenty-five," he answered sullenly. "I—I mean you may be a year or two older than I am. But where love exists, age does not count. I—"

Mr. Bates, listen to me," said the singer. "Do you think it the part of an honorable man to make love to one woman when you are engaged to another?"

"No, I don't," he cried. "But how can one help whom one loves? I am fond of Miss Lennon, but since I have known you that other love of mine has seemed tame and weak. I was only a boy when I became engaged—and you have made me a man."

"You nothing. I can say distinctly," said Miss Ingleby despairingly.

"Nothing," he answered. "When I look at you you seem the incarnation of all beauty and all truth to me; I don't care for honor or duty; I want you."

"To-morrow morning I will give you my answer," she answered.

That was Tuesday evening. Tom Bates lived in a fever of happiness during the following day. He could scarcely attend to the details of his business, the whole being swept away with a consuming passion for the beautiful singer. What though a few years in age separted them—two, or three, or five at most? He had known of cases of greater disparity in which happy marriage had resulted. He did not think of that at all.

And she had been a silent witness of that last interview. From her little room in the wing of the house she had seen Tom seize Miss Ingleby's hand and cover it with kisses; she could not tear herself away, even though her sight scorched her heart, as though a burning hand were laid there.

She dressed the evening meal. There were but three other guests at that season: her father and herself sat at a table facing Miss Ingleby, and Tom, who had boarded at the hotel ever since their engagement. Surely Tom would spare her his presence that night. But his fatefulness proved too strong for him. He entered and bowed coldly to her, nodded to the old major, who, absorbed in his soup, saw nothing of the little tragedy, and then bent his head lingeringly to Miss Ingleby. And Elsie could not tear herself away, though she knew that each glance between them was like an arrow in her heart.

The door opened and a woman came in, a gray-haired woman, with wistful eyes under her eyes and mouth, and pallid cheeks. She was dressed in a plain black suit of antiquated cut, she was [illegible]-looking body of forty-odd years. The major looked up and stared hard.

"Good lor' is that, Elsie?" he whispered, as she seated herself at Tom's table.

"Miss Ingleby!" stammered the girl in amazement.

The rest of the meal was passed in silence. Presently Elsie's eye took in every detail of the incident. She saw the expression of amazement that crept into Tom's eyes, saw him attempt to speak, choke, and at last rise and hurry from the room. And Miss Ingleby, brave Miss Ingleby who had stripped herself naked of her little artifices to save another woman, she there unconcerned, the cynosure of all eyes, making a conversation that was nothing but the last course was eating. Then she went to her room.

There Elsie found her afterward. She understood that the elder woman had made sacrifice into a light that Kentville, for Tom was a rising young business man of the town and Elsie's father, old Major Lennon, who kept the summer hotel, had been one of the first settlers. And they had been sweethearts for years.

Since the singer had come to spend a couple of weeks' vacation, however, he had had no eyes for poor little Elsie. He seemed fascinated by the older woman's bright eyes and witty

PEACH BLOSSOM GIRL

A Story of Everyday Life With a Moral That Is Obvious.

By H. M. EGBERT.

"The phenomenon of conversion," said the evangelist to the psychologist, "may be, as you say, the culmination of a series of obscure mental impressions, but the condition itself is the result of a moment. Something which was not in the sinner's heart enters there and drives out something that was there before."

It knew a man—never mind who or what he was. He was uneducated, the sort of Average American countryman who is the staple human product of this nation. With good fortune he might have become anything. With bad fortune he might have sunk to any depth. His will was weak, his senses stronger than his character. At the age of thirty he was a tramp, plodding along a country road in California. Forwarded, unshaven, with his self-respect gone, he would have won from a barking dog or cringed for a meal to any housewife.

"And then the moment came. It was early spring and the orchards were aglow with peach blossoms. As he passed outside a long line of blossom-bearing trees he saw a girl standing on the other side of the fence, her arms full of spraying blooms. She was about sixteen, beautiful, innocent, and good. A simple-hearted country girl, in short, born into just such circumstances as himself.

"The sight of her brought back memories that had been submerged for years. The ragged, outcast man was an honest peasant. Envy, longing, sympathy, for friendship. He stopped and spoke to her, and she was the first human being who had treated him as an equal in nearly a year.

"He learned something of her circumstances. Her parents had been compelled to mortgage their farm; they were heavily in debt; they feared the loss of their home. And she—her dearest wish to obtain an education could not be fulfilled. If her father were rich, she said, it might be, but he did not believe in educating women. He wanted her to stay on the farm and help maintain it, with the prospect of marriage to some farmer's son.

"The ragged man could see that this was the type of girl whom education would develop the highest success. He was quick-witted, earnest, and with a superb simplicity and radiating goodness. Of course he did not think it in these words. But he learned her name and that of the postoffice, thanked her for a drink of water that she gave him, and, as he heard her mother's harsh call from the house, went on his way.

"At that moment he was converted. He lost his desire for vileness, and resolved that, since his own life had been spoiled in the sight of his maker, he would give him that of another.

"He jumped a freight train and made his way by stages westward. He obtained a menial position, and every penny that he could hoard he put away in a bank. When he had a hundred dollars he sent it anonymously to the girl—for your education," he wrote on the envelope. Then he began saving again.

"Gradually the memory of this girl took possession of his life. As the months changed into years he pictured her, first completing her course at high school, then going to college. He even ventured once to suggest the name of the college she was to enter—a famous one in Georgia. Seven years later he was a man of standing and means, and he had spent two thousand dollars on the peach-blossom girl.

"What was she to become? No stenographer or clerical assistant in any business, of that he was resolved. Why, she should go to Paris, of course, and achieve triumphs there. He knew nothing of Paris, except its name as the capital of France. But that would demand a heavier expenditure. He set aside his whole accumulation of money—seven thousand dollars—and went to her town. This time he wore his first detailed instructions. She was to have an annual income of twelve hundred dollars and to follow any career she fancied after she returned.

"She had become like a daughter to him in his imagination, but when ten years had passed he suddenly found himself growing lonely and very lonely. He dared to begin to imagine dearer things than that. And at last the day came when he turned his dreams into actual plans. He would return, and humbly ask her to be his wife.

"It was not until he actually descended from the train at the obscure little Georgia village that the futility of his dreams struggled for control upon him. He had heard nothing from her during ten years. It might be that his benefaction was a crude and ignorant man; he had even retrograded in knowledge and manners, living in his western town. How could he ask her to link her life with his?

"And by the time when he saw the peach orchard looming up in front of him all his resolutions had shrunk to pitiful bits. He would ask for a glass of water and inquire after her, learn how she was and what life had brought her, and go his way again.

"When he heard the harsh voice of the mother at the door, he told me afterward, he seemed to be swooning, "he was conscious of an absurd desire to run away, just as when he had passed by the [illegible] years before. But the woman, seeing that his clothes dressed like a set of means, invited him in to rest, and she gossiped readily about her circumstances, and was fond to commend of her husband. He had acquired a good deal property, she said, and had not had squandered it all in speculation. Ten years before he had been on the verge of bankruptcy, and though things had brightened he was still in the same operation. But she added that they could both out and move into a better lot it was hard to find purchasers for peach orchard land in that section of the state.

"How much do you want to sell for?" he inquired.

"The woman hesitated. 'Four thousand,' she said at last.

"He had been right, that sum. With the farm he could live among the memories that had controlled his life; he could settle down. 'I will buy it at that figure,' he answered. All this time he had not formed the heart to ask about the woman's daughter, but now she voluntarily spoke to her.

"There's one trouble I've got,' she grumbled, 'and that's Jessie. She declares she won't go to a city. She hates city life and says if I go she's going to hire out somewhere.'

"Hire out!" exclaimed the visitor.

"Yes,' grumbled the woman. 'She ain't a bad girl, but somehow she never quite saw her duty toward her father and me after Jim refused to give her an education. She wanted to go to high school, and Jim hadn't the money.'

"At that moment the farmer stepped into the room carrying a suspicious look at the visitor. The woman introduced him. 'This gentleman talks of buying the farm,' she announced.

"The farmer's visage cleared. 'Maybe you'd like to come and talk it over outside,' he said, and my friend followed him. He followed him down to the peach trees and then he turned about and put his hand on his shoulder. A wild, uncontrollable rage was seething in his heart. This man had defrauded two lives, his daughter's and his own. He had squandered the money with which the man had hoped to redeem this lying life from ignorance and servitude; ten years of work had gone for nothing, flung away in a moment of drunken extravagance, of which even his wife was ignorant.

"The habits of ten years fell away from him, and the old devil came back. He would murder the man surely as he himself must die for it.

"The farmer, looking into his face, and misreading the expression, and being a coward, like every thief, trembled. He looked right and left for some weapon, and then my friend's hand was like steel upon his shoulders.

"And then, coming through the trees, my friend saw the peach-blossom girl, and his hand fell from the man's shoulder and the old sense of peace came back to him. Except for a certain maturity of face and figure she was the same girl that he had seen sixteen, and the same serene innocence looked out of her eyes, and she was dressed in white, as he had seen might wear her robes. And in her hand were certain branches of peach-blossomy boughs."

"Well," said the psychologist, "I can see the end." They were married and settled down on the farm and spent a life of idyllic happiness."

"That's obvious," answered the evangelist. "But now that you have the story, you have left out the moral. Suppose that the money had reached her—would it have benefited either of them so much as that which actually occurred? He had come back, an ignorant man, not daring to ask what it had cost to buy dreamland for a young lady. And the years of toil and discipline had not gone for nothing. So had the conversion in the secrets of the soul, and whatever results it brings proceed from that. This time he was to have only good to follow it." He hesitated a moment. "If ever you gentlemen are passing down my way," he said, 'you must come and visit my peach orchard."

"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY

BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

Exclusive rights controlled by British and Colonial Press, Limited, Toronto.

BARONESS VON SUTTNER

...for the enthusiasm of the people passed its bumpers. But the way afterward was shocked; our book was not finished—in short, we remained. All of our acquaintance who could get away had fled, and, excepting a few literary men, we had no visitors. A young writer, the later famous Guy de Maupassant, once expressed my own feelings so p'rfectly that I entered his words in our journal:

War—when I think of this word I shudder as if one talked of the inquisition, or of a distant, horrible, unnatural thing. War—to kill one another, cut each other down! And we have lived—in our times, with our culture, with our extensive knowledge in the higher planes of development which we flatter ourselves to have attained—we still have schools to teach men how to kill, to kill in the most scientific manner and as many as possible.

It is wonderful that the people do not rise against this thing, that the whole of society does not revolt at the mere mention of war. He who rules is in duty bound to avoid war, as the captain of a ship is bound to avoid shipwreck. When a captain loses his ship he is required to answer for it. In case it is discovered that he could have...

...been remiss in duty. Why should not every government be called to account when it declares war? If the people understood how to refuse to allow themselves to be killed without just cause, war would cease.

Ernest Renan, also, let us hear from him:

Is it not heart-breaking to think that all that we term of science have sought to accomplish during the past fifty years is destroyed at a blow; the sympathy between peoples, the mutual understanding, the fruitful, united work? How such a war destroys the love of truth! What lies, what defamation of nation will from now on, for the next fifty years, be believed by each of the other, and divide them as an insurmountable line! How it will retard the progress of Europe! We cannot build up in a hundred years what these men can storm down in one day.

I also had the opportunity of reading a letter which Gustave Flaubert wrote during those first July days to Georges Sand. Here it is:

I am in despair at the stupidity of my countrymen. The incorrigible barbarism fills me with the deepest grief. This enthusiasm inspired by not one reasonable idea fanned by long to die that I may not witness it. Our good Frenchmen will fight; first, because they believe themselves cheated out by Prussia; secondly, because the natural condition of man is that of barbarism; thirdly, because war possesses a mystical element which carries mankind away. And we returned to a war of races! I am afraid so. The horrible battles which are prepare for have not a single pretext to excuse them. It is simply the pleasure of fighting for fighting itself. I regret the bridges and tunnels that will be blown to pieces, all this superb work of man which will be destroyed. I notice that a member of the Chamber proposed the plundering of the Grand Duchy of Baden. Ah, I were with the Bedouins!

"Oh!" I cried, as I read this letter, "if we had only been born five hundred years later—that would be better than the Bedouins."

"Mankind will not take so long to become reasonable," replied Frederick confidently.

It was again the era of proclamations and army orders.

Always the same old song, and always the same enthusiasm and applause of the populace! There was the same rejoicing over prospective victories as if they had been already won.

We defend the honor and soil of our native land. We will be victorious. Nothing is too great for the heroic endurance of the soldiers of Africa, the Crimea, China, Italy, and Mexico. Once more they will show what a French army inspired by a love of country is capable of accomplishing. Whichever way we turn outside our borders we find the marks of the valor of our fathers. We will prove ourselves worthy of them. Upon our success hangs the fate of freedom and civilization. Soldiers, do your duty, and the God of battles will be with you.

Oh, of course, it would not do to leave out "the God of battles." That the leaders of vanquished armies have a hundred times promised the same does not prevent the claim of special protection being set up at every fresh campaign in order to awaken the same confidence. Anything shorter than the memory of a people or anything feebler than their logic!

To-day, before I leave to join the army, to fight with it for the honor and preservation of all dearest to us, I proclaim a general amnesty for all political offences. My people know that we were not guilty of enmity and breach of faith. But being attacked we are resolved, as were our fathers, in firm reliance upon God, to endure the struggle for the rescue of our country.

Defiance, defiance, that is the only dignified sort of death; therefore both sides cry: "I defend myself." Is that not a contradiction? Not quite—for over each a third power rules—the magic of the old "Sic vis!" Whatever spirit. if they would only defend themselves against that!

"O Monsieur, O Madame, what news!" With these words Frederick's butler on the eve of battle was ushered into our sitting-room. It was the day of the battle of Worth.

A despatch had arrived. The Prussians are as good as absolutely annihilated. The army is destroyed, with tri-colored flags, it will be illuminated to-night."

On the 7th of August there was a rumor of disaster. The Emperor has turned from St. Cloud to the seat of war. The enemy had crossed the frontier and was marching inland.

The provincial Minister of War published an order calling upon all able-bodied citizens between thirty and forty years of age to enrol themselves in [the National Guard. A] ministry for defence of the interior was organized. The appropriation was increased from five hundred to a thousand million francs. If one wanted to change a banknote he was obliged to wait a hour ten per cent. There was not sufficient gold to keep the notes of the Bank of France at par.

The aspect of Paris and its inhabitants underwent an astonishing change. In the place of the proud, boastful, swaggering humor, dismay and terrible anger appeared. The impression that a horde of vandals was ready to devour the land was widespread.

The most astonishing stories were told of the ferocity of the invaders. "The Uhlans, the Uhlans!" the words had a sort of demoniacal, demoniac sound, as if they had talked about the armies of Satan. In the imagination of the people these troops resembled monsters. Whenever a particularly bold stroke was reported, it was at once ascribed to the Uhlans. They were said to be recruited to serve for booty and robbery, and the most incredible recitals of terror were stories of occasional triumphs. To lie about such a time is naturally the order day of the sensationalist, for, of course, the curiosity of the public must be kept up. The law of veracity—like many other laws of morality—loses its force in times of war. Frederick read to me the following:

Up to the 16th of August the German army, one hundred and forty-four thousand men, the remainder are [on the march of invasion. The] reserves from Germany, the "landwehr" and "landsturm," are arriving; old men with white, whiskered faces and pockets, carrying on one side a huge cartridge-box, on the other a large flask of brandy, with a long clay pipe in the mouth, are staggering under the weight of the knapsacks, coffee mills, and packages of elderberry tea, which they are groaning, as they are crossing from the right to the left bank of the Rhine, carving those who have torn their hearts from the arms of the grandchildren to thrust them into the clutches of death. The regrets we get from the German press of the victorious battles are all the usual Prussian lies.

On the 20th of August Count Pallhao informed the Chamber that three hundred and forty thousand men, Bazaine, had been thrown into the quarries of Jaumont." It is true no one had the remotest idea where these quarries were, but we have it happened that the three army corps were kept there. From tongue to tongue the fearful tidings spread, and everybody acted as if they had been born in the region of Jaumont, and, of course, knew all about the quarries. At the same time there was a second report that the King of Prussia had become insane over the condition of his army.

All sorts of atrocities were reported; the excitement among the population increased hourly. The engagements at Gravelotte near Metz may be ascribed as if the Bavarians had been guilty of most inhuman barbarity.

"Do you believe this?" I said to Frederick.

"They are possible. Whether a man is Bavarian or Turk, German, French, or Indian, makes no particular difference; when he takes his life in his hands and fights to destroy others he awakens and strongest within him is the beast."

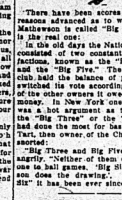
WHY MATTY IS "Big SIX"



There have been scores of alleged reasons advanced as to why Christy Mathewson is called "Big Six." Here is the real one:

In the old days the National league consisted of two constantly warring factions, known as the "Big Three" and the "Big Five." The St. Louis club held the balance of power, and switched its vote according to which of the other owners it owed the most money. In New York one day there was a heated argument as to whether the "Big Three" or the "Big Five" had done the most for baseball. Jim Tart, then owner of the Chicago club, snorted:

"Big Three and Big Five," he said angrily, "Neither of them draws anyone to ball games. Big Six' Mathewson does the drawing." And "Big Six" it has been ever since.

No Fingers Broken in the Outfield if Players Are Careful

A "baseball finger" is no longer the hall mark of the profession. Viewing the game for the first time, seeing the ball hurled about by a smoothly working infield; watching the players post themselves in front of a hard-hit ball, grasp it with gloved hand and with scarcely perceptible hesitation "shoot" it to another infielder, the novice spectator wonders how many fingers each player breaks in a season.

As a matter of fact, the number of men who suffer from broken digital bones in the course of a season is remarkably small. It is the exception to the rule when an infielder's hands are "banged up a bit." Chiefly because of foul tips, but the infielders are now expert to get their fingers in the path of the ball.

It is a cross road to broken bones to try and catch a thrown or batted ball with fingers extended like grappling hooks toward the ball. There are a few cardinal principles for catching a ball.

Watch the shortstop grab a red hot ground ball. It comes to him on the hop and the hands are to be taken to on the second bound. for he must play the ball and let it play him. He gets the ball between his feet, or at one side, clapping it with gloved hand and throwing it quickly. The stop-and-throw motion is one sweeping motion of arms and body.

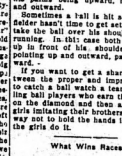
Watch the player catch a ball breast high. Note his hands: fingers straight up, palms outward. See him take the ball near his knee, fingers pointing earthward, palms often toward the outfielder.

Or take note of a hard hit line drive that the fielder spears with one hand; the ball is never to be held by less so the ball strikes in the palm of his glove. If it is one side, he may take it running, with hand extended. The outfielder with "baseball sense" is usually so placed when a ball is batted that he gets the ball in front, breast high, which case his fingers are turned upward, the fingers pointing toward the shoulder, or vaise high, his palms being upward, fingers up and outward.

Sometimes a ball is hit so fast the fielder hasn't time to get set and must take the ball over his shoulder while running. In that case both hands go up in front of his shoulder, fingers pointing up and outward, palms backward.

If you want to get a sharp line between the proper and improper way to catch a ball watch a team of baseball players who earn their living on the diamond and then a group of girls imitating their brothers—and the way you hold the hands is the way the girls do it.

What Wins Races



Pop Geers, the veteran trotting horse driver, is one of the most tactiturn of men. He always seems to be trying to save up fifty million words before he dies. One day a young reporter decided to interview Geers and get a big feature story from him on the art of driving horses.

"Mr. Geers," he said, "how is it you win races?"

"I suppose," Geers drawled after a moment, slowly removed it from his teeth and said:

"Fast horses."

Militarism is now engaged in making a record that is deeply embedded in the consciousness of the world, and the scar will remain for a long time.

ALASKAN DEVELOPMENT

to Railways May be Linked up With Lines in British Columbia

The development of Alaska, which is now occupying the attention of the United States Government, will benefit British Columbia very considerably, experts say. The Pacific Coast Province is looking forward to the time when the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific will be linked up to the system of Alaskan railways, about to be built by the United States, thus providing a new northern avenue of commerce for Canada. From Prince Rupert the Alaskan boundary can be reached by a steamship trip of forty miles and the traveller returning from the land of the Northern Lights can be well on his way to Chicago over the new Transcontinental route before he would reach Seattle by the older method of travelling down the coast by steamship. Governor Strong of Alaska, in his annual report, just published, says that "everything done in Finland in population, wealth, and material development is possible in Alaska on a much larger scale." With a climate very like that of Finland, and with one-fourth A'aska's area Finland supports two million seven hundred and fifty thousand people, she has over three million head of live stock; she produces annually some nine hundred thousand tons of grain and legumes. This development is in part a result of good roads, canals and railway systems, aggregating two thousand five hundred miles of line. The new railways and wagon roads building in British Columbia and the Yukon will similarly Alaska's severe handicap in transportation matters, and as Alaska's fishing, mining and farming opportunities are much greater than those of Finland, British Columbia's northern neighbor has obviously a bright future.

MAKING A WILL

Making a will is a simple thing to do but, like most simple things, it should be done properly to safeguard the important matters of the future. In Toronto the danger of using a printed form in making a will was illustrated in a case in which Mr. Justice Middleton declared an intestacy. He had been asked to interpret what purported to be the will of a deceased lady. The will was made on what apparently was a adaptation of a Scotch will form. "In the case in hand it may be that the testatrix intended to give everything to her mother," remarked Mr. Justice Middleton, "but she has not said so."

In the blank where the name of the beneficiary and the property to be conveyed should be placed, all that was written was "Everything I have, clothes, money, etc." No beneficiary was named. The only name which appeared in the will, besides the signature of the testatrix, was the deceased woman's mother, who was named as executrix. Judge Middleton held that there was an intestacy as to the estate.

There are apparently several reasons for the general scrason in security prices, of which the undeniable improvement in industrial conditions as reported from all sections of Canada and the United States is by no means the least important. These reports included advice of advances in iron, steel and copper products; that various steel producers are planning to enlarge their plants and an improvement in railway earnings. A second cause of improvement was the reasonable ease of money which has been commented on in former issues of this letter, but, perhaps over all, has been the discounting of an early peace.

BRAZILIAN TRACTION.—The shares of the Brazilian Traction Company have been distinctly stronger during the week and at the time of writing are 33 bid with no stock offering. The incredulity regarding the reports of a cut in dividends, which was expressed in my letter of last week, has received support in the published statement of Mr. D. B. Hanna, one of the Directors of the Company, who stated that there was no reason for uneasiness on the part of the shareholders. The company will probably need more money for the entire completion of its system, but, as Mr. Hanna points out, such a situation is not unusual, and money can be raised if necessary by a bond issue, though this need not, of necessity, be done immediately.

Mr. Hanna states that the company is more than earning its dividend and though the full financial statement has not yet been issued, I judge from preliminary figures that earnings will be in the neighbourhood of 8 per cent.

My telegraphic list will give you the earliest possible information. These telegrams have already proven profitable to many of my clients. I will wish your name to be added to this list please advise me.

THE SUMMER HOLIDAYS

People fortunate enough to be sure of summer vacations have to lay their plans early. This year there are reasons for laying them earlier, than ever.

After the early part of May in past years, thousands were leaving the Canadian shores for Europe. By the end of June thousands of school teachers, students and sightseers have also looked to Europe for their summer vacation. Where are all these people going this summer? Owing to the war, not to Europe, and this great army of summer tourists are looking for new fields to explore and new playgrounds to visit. Canada offers just the ideal places, with variety that will suit the most fastidious. Present indications give promise that these resorts are going to have the biggest season in their history, as our cousins from the other side of the International border are looking this way for their objective point this summer. Now is the time therefore for Canadians to make their plans and secure their accommodation in the charming districts that include the following:

Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays, The Magnetawan River, Algonquin Park, Timagami and the 30,000 Islands of the Georgian Bay.

Drop a postal card to C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Union Station, Toronto, for handsome descriptive literature of any of these districts.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Not Confined to Cattle and Is Very Contagious—Some of the Causes

The foot and mouth disease in cattle is highly contagious and infectious, due to a specific virus and characterized by vesicular eruptions in the mouth, between the clouts, around the coronets and often in other regions, says a writer in The Farmer's Advocate. In some cases the mouth only is affected, while in others the eruptions appear only in the feet. In milch cows the udder and teats are often involved. In such cases the milk is unfit for use. While cattle are more susceptible than other classes of stock, others are not immune, as sheep, pigs, dogs, poultry and even horses are sometimes attacked, and even the human being is not exempt.

Like all other contagious diseases it can be caused only by the introduction of the virus or contagion into the system of healthy animals. In diseased animals the virus exists in great numbers in the saliva, the discharges from the eyes and nostrils, and in the vesicular fluid which is highly charged the excretions are a source of great danger. Thus food or litter of any kind, as hay, grain, roots, grass or straw which has been contaminated with the saliva of diseased animals, becomes a carrier of the virus, and requires only to be introduced into other animals in order to propogate the disease. It is also readily conveyed from diseased to healthy animals by the hands or clothing of attendants, by rugs, blankets, pails or other cable utensils. It is claimed that the disease can, and has been spread by diseased cattle wearing harness and defecating in streams, which subsequently conveyed through healthy districts. There is no doubt that the disease often follows the course of a stream.

ONE-LEGGED SWIMMER

Cambridge secured an extraordinary swimmer in the person of J. F. Heslease, an Australian freshman, who won the fifty-yard "dashes" races in a contest with the Richmond Swimming Club. His right leg has been amputated, but he possesses remarkable speed. His early education was obtained at Sydney High School, Australia, and at the age of sixteen he won the High School championship and finished second in the Three-quarter Mile New South Wales Championship. Since then he spent three years at a university in California, where he broke the Pacific Coast record for the quarter mile in five minutes forty-five seconds. In Germany where he pursued his studies for eighteen months, he won the 600 meters race at Magdeburg in eight minutes fifty-one seconds. He is the present holder of the American Championship of 800 metres, which he won in seven minutes thirty-five seconds.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. An application for entry must be made in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after date of entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivation of fifty acres extra.

A homestead may be pre-empted after six months residence and cultivation of fifty acres, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, stony or sandy land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

Temptation Too Strong for the Express Driver

LINDSAY, April 5.—(Special.)—Howard Coneybeare, the Canadian Express driver who is alleged to have decamped from Lindsay some two weeks ago with a package of $3,000 entrusted to him for delivery to the Home Bank of this town, was arrested in Edmonton, Alta., on Good Friday night by the city police. When searched, it is said, he had $2,500 in his possession in Home Bank bills. He had been spending money freely, and this led to his arrest. Provincial Inspector Boyd of the Provincial Police left Toronto on Saturday night to bring the prisoner back to Lindsay. Since Coneybeare's departure the wrapper which contained the original money was found, it is said, in the rear of Coneybeare's home, William Street, Lindsay.

Coneybeare's record up to the time of his departure was exemplary. His father enlisted with the third contingent, is well known and respected.

Coneybeare had been entrusted with important packages of money frequently for the bank, and the charitable construction placed on the supposed act in view of his previous good record is that the temptation at this time overcame him. He is about 21 years of age.

Casualties Among Canadian Forces

OTTAWA, April 5.—(Special.)—The casualty list issued last night by the Militia Department is as follows:

PRINCESS PATRICIAS.

Died of wounds—(Formerly reported wounded), March 25, Pte. Joseph Lorette (formerly 12th Battalion). Next of kin, Miss B. Dalton, Sackville, N.B.

Hastings, April 5.—(Special.)—Lance-Corporal Ward, a nephew of Rev. Father Brethertom of this place, has died after being seriously wounded by a shell at the front. He joined the 10th Liverpool Scottish early in September, and was drafted to Belgium. He volunteered as a stretcher-bearer, but was promoted to the rank of Lance-Corporal for bravery during a hot attack.

Cobourg, April 5.—(Special.)—It is learned here that Capt. Dorsee, who was in a hospital at Boulogne, has recovered, and has again gone to the front. Capt. Dorsee is a senior officer of the 40th Northumberland Regiment.

Ottawa, April 5.—Today's casualties in Third Field Artillery Brigade—Death, Gunner George West, Kingston, motor car accident.

Claim Trawlers Tow Submarines

NEW YORK, April 3.—Rear Admiral Henri, Bucharat of the French navy, who retired from service through ill health just before the war, arrived today on the steamship Chicago from Bordeaux, to make a tour of the United States. In an interview he scouted the idea of the German navy having submarines that could steam eighteen knots on the surface and the threat to destroy all the French and English commerce on the high seas.

"When this war commenced," he said "the Germans had about 37 submarines. With those which have been recently constructed and substituted for those that have been destroyed, they may have forty-five in use at the present time.

"The reason the submarines have been able to go as far as Cape Finisterre is because they are towed by steam or motor fishing trawlers down the channels. The trawlers are sighted and signalled by cruisers and destroyers belonging to the Allies, but the officers do not suspect that the line astern is attached to a submarine instead of a big fishing net. This is a grave question that will have to be seriously taken up by the French and British officials in order to stop the submarine raids.

"The Germans have bases for their submarines at Antwerp and Brugge, and also one off the coast of Norway, near Bergen. The newest submarine they have constructed at Antwerp can not average more than 14 knots on the surface and nine to ten knots under water."

The admiral said that France had about 90 submarines and the English nearly 110 or more, but they could not use them because the German had an ships afloat to be attacked. Admiral Buchard was naval attache at Berlin for five years.

Chicago-Belleville News: "Colonel Bingham, commanding officer of the Irish Brigade, with General Lowis Botha's army in South Africa, is a native of Belleville. His father, at one time, was proprietor of the old Hastings House on Front Street. Did you ever hear the like?"

CANADA'S COAL MINES

Loss of Workmen in European War May Start Export From Here

Will the great war be the means of bringing Canada to the front as a producer and exporter of coal? The coal resources of Canada are estimated at something over 1,350 billion tons of easily workable coal, with an additional 17 billion tons at depths greater than 4,000 feet, which could be used as a last reserve. The warring nations of Europe before the war produced annually some 765 million tons of coal of which Great Britain is credited with 322 million tons.

This is one of the few industries which women could take the place of men, and devastated Europe must soon turn somewhere to replenish her diminishing coal supply. With her enormous coal reserves, Canada has been importing nearly one-half of the total coal consumed within her borders. This is partly due to the lack of coal in the eastern provinces of Ontario and Quebec, which are at present the largest coal consumers, and which are much closer to the huge coal fields of Pennsylvania than in the eastern or western coal mines of Canada.

The total production of coal in Canada last year was 15,012,176 tons, and the number of men employed to mine this coal was about 28,000, of which 12,726 in the eastern provinces produced 3,840,000 tons. If Canada could export an appreciable amount of coal to Europe it would have to come from the Maritime Provinces, which are known to have a total reserve of 10,000,000,000 tons.

By far the largest coal fields in Canada are in Alberta, where the estimated reserve is over 1,000,000,000,000 tons. The loss in Belgium would make the article very expensive for the European consumer, although last year the output of the Alberta mines increased by nearly 21 per cent. over the previous year. Last year the mines of Alberta produced 2,300,000 tons, valued at $5,000,000, and employed 4,650 men.

If Canada can develop her coal industry extensively this looks like her great opportunity. The coal resources of the Dominion are second to those of no country in the world, but the distribution of population has up to the present prevented full advantage being taken of them. If Canada wants the business it is looking at her door, for the United States, at present the world's largest producer of coal, needs every ton for home consumption.

Feeding the Huns

The amount of bread eaten in a week by the German soldiers in the field would make a loaf 332 feet high and weighing 60,120,000 pounds. Meat eaten in the same time would make a side of bacon 184 feet long and weighing 16,020,000 pounds.

The figures given are for the standard ration, which is probably a very different ration from that actually being consumed along the great battle formation, where there is a great flexibility as to the food to be used.

Grappling For Entanglements

One soldier from the front tells of an ingenious device the French have for tearing down the German barbed wire entanglements. It is an appliance similar to a rocket apparatus, which throws a grappling iron attached to a rope over the entanglements, which are then dragged down and hauled into the trenches.

Grave Diggers With Army

In all the wars there is only one army—the German—that carries its war preparations to such a state of completeness as to have a separate corps of grave diggers, who accompany the army in the field for this grim task alone. They were formed for the Franco-German war of 1870, and their appearance was a source of amusement to the older generation of soldiers in Europe, who could not understand such "specialization."

The German Crown Prince's hand writing is of the slapdash order, and very illegible.

Grain Growers' Guide: "The Liberals claimed that it was unpatriotic for the Government to increase the tariff on British imports, but this argument comes with poor grace from the Liberal party, because in 1907 it arbitrarily increased the duty on a large portion of British imports without even the excuse of the war or falling revenue. Further, The Guide complains that the Liberal leaders appear to have dropped "Reciprocity" from their programme. It predicts that when the election campaign opens they will as usual preach Protection in the East and Free Trade in the West. For this reason, The Guide advocates the return of independents to Parliament."

Vol. 48 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, APRIL 6, 1915. No. 275

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY OF THE GREAT WAR

Mr. S. N. Dancey Recites Actual and Personal Experiences on the Battlefield—An Appreciative Audience Intensly Interested

Whilst the audience which assembled at Griffin's Opera House last night for the purpose of seeing and hearing an illustrated lecture, by Mr. S. N. Dancey was not large, it was a select one. The lecturer, a war correspondent, has returned from the front, having spent six months on the firing line, two and a half months of which were spent with the German armies, under protection of American consular. He was the only Canadian correspondent who ever succeeded in getting behind the German lines and into the heart of Germany. Mr. Dancey witnessed personally 14 battles and followed the retreat of the Allies from Mons to the gates of Paris. He also witnessed the heroic resistance of the Belgians to stem the onward march of the Germans.

Mayor Panter occupied the chair, and in a few well chosen remarks introduced the lecturer. His Worship stated that Mr. Dancey was not only a Canadian but a native of this community.

Before displaying the views, Mr. Dancey gave an address, at the beginning of which he expressed his pleasure at being able to address a Belleville audience. In speaking of the war he said Great Britain was at war because she was in honor bound to do so. The success of the Allies was assured. Even some German officers had admitted this fact. He spoke of remaining Germans in Belgium and France. In referring to Belgium the speaker paid a great tribute to the pluck and determination of the soldiers of that country. What was his (the speaker's) message tonight? It was that Britain was going to win; that she must win. (Applause.) The German army could not succeed. For years Germany had prayed for the day, had looked for the day, and she will also rue the day. Italy had refused to join with Germany in this struggle, and as a matter of fact would, he felt confident, be in the war with the Allies. Kitchener's new army was a great army, and the best that ever went to war. Today she has over amis 5,000,000 men, and we have every confidence in them. The British artillery is superior to that of the German, as has been proved. We have the guns and the expert gunners to command them. The Belgian army had been reduced, but it has done its duty nobly. That country has been devastated by the Germans, but it will in time come back to its own. The lecturer referred to the atrocities committed by the Germans on the Belgian people, which had not been exaggerated. The proudest man today is the man who wears the khaki. Every Britisher should be proud to days. Britain has ever stood superior to Germany. Germany said that Great Britain was bankrupt, but such was not the case. The British nations is in every way financially able to carry on this war. She stands ready today to finance Italy and other countries if they needed assistance. Britain could carry on this war for twenty years if it was necessary to do so. In regard to money, food, or ammunition, Germany cannot last longer than September at the longest. The spirit of Germany will not prevail, as it is not the ordinary country which it is claimed to be. Canada, he claimed, had not made the sacrifice it should have made in this great crisis. Let us prove to the mother land that when she is at war we are at war. The victory will come and we will gain in that great and glorious day. (Applause).

The pictures were then displayed, and each was referred to by Mr. Dancey. They were scenes of actual warfare and places where battles have taken place.

At the close a vote of thanks moved by Judge Fralick and seconded by Rev. A. R. Sanderson, was tendered to the lecturer, and the singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

SHOT HIS OWN WIFE FOR MILITARY GLORY! FACES TRIAL

Captain's Wife Refused to Leave Camp, He Was Threatened With Dismissal—Shot Her Dead Not to be Thus Disgraced—Woman's Obstinancy Led to Her Death, His Disgrace and Perhaps His Death

PARIS, April 5.—Captain Herall, an officer in the French cavalry will be tried by court martial Saturday for killing his wife at Compiegne because, she persisted in following the army to be near him, in direct violation of orders issued by the military authorities. For some time after the crime Herall was a mental and physical wreck. It was feared that he would not survive, but he recently recovered and was turned over to the military police by the hospital authorities. He will be defended by Henri Robert.

After Captain Herall was sent to the front, his wife, to whom he was deeply attached, learned that she was stationed at Compiegne, and followed him there. This was at a time when the Generalissimo Chief issued a circular prohibiting all officers and soldiers from receiving their wives during the campaign. His superior officers remonstrated with Captain Herall and tried to induce his wife to leave, but she continued to postpone her departure. A second warning was given the captain with no better results. When a third warning came he was told he would be cashiered unless Mme. Herall left at once. This she refused to do and the cavalry officer, fearing dishonor and degradation, shot the woman he loved.

Need of Change In Divorce Law

House Sends Report in One Case Back to Committee After Plain Speaking

OTTAWA, April 5.—The Alexander divorce case was referred back to the Private Bill Committee this morning. The Prime Minister said that this case showed clearly the need of some improvement in the methods for dealing with divorce cases. The Senate committee after hearing the evidence had recommended the divorce asked for by C. L. Alexander, Saskatoon, against his wife, Agnes M. Alexander. The Private Bill Committee of the House of Commons, however, had reversed the decision. Mr. Geo. McCraney (Saskatoon) moved this morning that the case be sent back to the committee for reconsideration. Sir Robert Borden said he had read the evidence very carefully. If the evidence was to be believed the divorce certainly should be granted. The Senate committee had heard all of the witnesses and should be better able to judge as to their credibility than the Private Bills Committee of the Commons which did not hear the witnesses. It should not be possible, Sir Robert thought, for a committee that had not heard the witnesses to overrule one that had, on the question of credibility.

The case was referred back.

Receiver for Ocean Merger

International Mercantile Marine Defaults on Big Bond Issue

NEW YORK, April 5.—The International Mercantile Marine Company, organized by J. P. Morgan & Company and controlling a great fleet of steamships plying between the United States and Europe, was placed in the hands of a receiver today by the Federal Court. The receiver named was P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the company.

Action against the company was taken by the New York Trust Company, trustees of its $52,744,000 four and half per cent. collateral trust bonds, interest on which the latter defaulted. The proceedings are understood to be friendly.

The mammoth fleet that flies the flag of the International Mercantile Marine Company was brought together by the shipping of Morgan and Pirrier capitalists under the leadership of the late J. P. Morgan. The corporation, in its present form, was chartered by the State of New Jersey in 1902 and succeeded the International Navigation Company which had then been in existence for nine years.

One hundred and nineteen steamships, flying the flags of three nations of the British Empire, Belgium and Belgium—were operated by the company according to the latest available figures. This navy comprises a total of tons of 1,071,655 tons, and there were then building eighteen more ships with 259,000 tons among them. Most of these ships have since been completed. The company owned the White Star liner Titanic, which sank with the loss of more than 1,500 lives in the Atlantic three years ago, and his sister ship the Olympic, one of the largest vessels in the world.

More than $100,000,000 of the company's authorized capital stock of $120,000,000 is owned by J. P. Morgan & Company are large stockholders. Mr. Morgan is a director of the company.

The company's funded debt is approximately $70,000,000, and is made up of two issues of bonds, the last one on which interest has been defaulted, and an issue of $17,882,000 first mortgage five per cent. bonds of the International Navigation Company.

The interest on the $52,744,000 bond issue was due October last, but a saving clause in the bonds gave the company six months' grace in which to make the payment. This time of grace expired April 1st.

W. W. Miller, of counsel for the bond-holders' committee issued a statement in which he said: "I understood that in any event the receivership will only relate to the properties directly owned by the International Mercantile Marine Company, such as the American line and the Red Star line. It will in no way affect the so-called English subsidiary companies such as the White Star line, the Atlantic Transport line and the Leyland line or the Leyland line. If a receivership is appointed, it will not in any way disturb or interfere with, or disturb the operation of the company or its subsidiary companies."

Concluding Scene In Big Fight

Johnson Had Apparently Gone the Limit of Endurance, When Willard Finished His Career

Following are the three final rounds in yesterday's championship fight between Johnson and Willard, which the intelligencer failed to obtain before going to press:

Round 24—Johnson landed his left to the body. Willard drove his left to the body. They clinched, and Johnson landed another left to the body and then blocked a left jab by Willard. They clinched, both apparently fighting for time. Willard landed left to the face but the blow lacked steam. Johnson drove a left to the body and a right to the face. Willard landed two lefts to the face. Round even.

Round 25—Willard landed a terrific right to Johnson's body. His first good punch. Willard forced the fighting and landed a right to the body. Johnson showed he was tired. Willard landed a right to the jaw and followed with a left to the face, and another left to Johnson's face. Willard's round.

Neither Gloom Nor Gaiety For London's Easter

LONDON, April 5.—With no gaiety but with a reverential spirit London spent its Easter Day. A neutral, who sauntered about the city to see how Londoners in war time put in the day, noted huge throngs in the parks and along the thoroughfares, but London did not allow itself to forget that the country is engaged in a bitter warfare.

No one seeing the spectacle of London's Easter Day would say that the Londoner takes the war too lightly nor yet that London put on a gloomy face. That is not London's way.

After a week of dull cloudy weather Easter Sunday dawned with radiant skies. The dreary drizzle that marked the week-end gave way to warm sunshine. Early in the day Londoners began attired themselves, some taking trains for the country or seaside, but a great majority staying in town. It must be mentioned, however, that the cancelling of the usual Eastertide excursion facilities by the Government executive committee, which controls the railways, kept many thousands in London who otherwise would have left to spend themselves of the cheapened fares to spend the day by the sea or in the country. The railway companies' motors at most of the popular resorts found their establishments filled with people who would afford to pay ordinary railway fares.

London's streets were alive before the shops or stock, people riding on busses, others going afoot in astonishing numbers to the churches, all of which were filled. Westminster Abbey was jammed to the point many were turned away. Eloquent patriotic sermons lauding England's sons for war sacrifices were preached to every pulpit. It was noticeable that though in thousands of families sons have been killed, no mourning was seen in the streets nor for that matter, on the streets. Londoners afflicted families all bravely refrain from wearing it.

After the church services the parks were thronged with Easter promenaders, the favorite one being Birdcage Walk, in St. James Park, and Rotten Row, in Hyde Park. Soldiers in khaki were in evidence everywhere, nearly all of them men of Kitchener's army who have not yet seen active service, but who are impatiently waiting for the call. In the meantime, during their spell of relief from military duties, they are in demand by women relatives and sweethearts who march alongside them with proud smiling faces.

At the Horseguards' Parade at Whitehall, the Coldstream Guards band played in the morning as the crowds flocked from Westminster. In the afternoon the Royal Guards' band played in Hyde Park, while 50,000 sat on the benches and another 50,000 walked the pathways.

No effort was made by the women wearing silks and furs to make a still wearing their winter furs, but there were new hats in profusion, the prevailing style being large drooping blue and purple colors predominating. Maggie hats were quite in vogue.

The King and Queen, with Princess Mary and Princess Victoria, Easter at Windsor Castle, where hundreds journeyed by rail later to ramble through the picturesque Long Walk. Nearly all of the war lords were out in the country, but the Foreign Office kept open with a fair-sized staff hard at work.

Just Dropped In On the Children

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. McMaster, of Trenton, Surprise Their Offsprings in the West

The following, taken from the Ellensdale (North Dakota) Leader, of April 1, will prove of interest to many people of this section, and particularly of Trenton:

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. McMaster arrived in the city Saturday morning from their home at Trenton, Ontario. It was the intention of Mr. and Mrs. McMaster to drop in unexpectedly upon their home at Trenton, Ontario. They took H. C. McMaster of this place into their confidence, and he phoned in his brothers, Harry at Aberdeen, Will at Forbes and Gerald at Edgeley, asking them to spend Sunday with him here. The first surprise was sprung on Harry and his family at Aberdeen, when the old folks walked into their home Friday evening. Saturday morning they all came to Ellendale, and that evening a grand time was had with the four sons and their families present.

Neither Gloom Nor Gaiety For London's Easter

LONDON, April 5.—With no gaiety but with a reverential spirit London spent its Easter Day. A neutral, who sauntered about the city to see how Londoners in war time put in the day, noted huge throngs in the parks and along the thoroughfares, but London did not allow itself to forget that the country is engaged in a bitter warfare.

No one seeing the spectacle of London's Easter Day would say that the Londoner takes the war too lightly nor yet that London put on a gloomy face. That is not London's way.

After a week of dull cloudy weather Easter Sunday dawned with radiant skies. The dreary drizzle that marked the week-end gave way to warm sunshine. Early in the day Londoners began attired themselves, some taking trains for the country or seaside, but a great majority staying in town. It must be mentioned, however, that the cancelling of the usual Eastertide excursion facilities by the Government executive committee, which controls the railways, kept many thousands in London who otherwise would have left to spend themselves of the cheapened fares to spend the day by the sea or in the country. The railway companies' motors at most of the popular resorts found their establishments filled with people who would afford to pay ordinary railway fares.

London's streets were alive before the shops or stock, people riding on busses, others going afoot in astonishing numbers to the churches, all of which were filled. DEATH FROM MENINGITIS TWO MORE STRICKEN

Dread Disease Still Haunts Toronto Soldiers—Death Was Not at Camp, no Fresh Cases in Camp for Several Weeks

TORONTO, April 6.—(Special.)—After military-medical opinions on the dreaded subject of cerebro-spinal meningitis had reached a salutatory height, there is now a death to report in the third contingent and two more cases of illness of men in the second contingent. Percy Steery, aged nineteen, 24 Peachtree street, who had enlisted with the third contingent, and who was admitted to the General Hospital three weeks ago suffering from spinal meningitis, died last night. Steery's mother lives in Jamaica.

An unexpected development which occurred on Easter Sunday morning produced a somewhat staggering case of the old disease. This case had its origin outside the camp, and the medical men were reassured, but only until yesterday morning. Then a fresh case made its appearance. The victim is Private A. G. Malcolm of No. 2 Field Ambulance, and he comes from brougham, Ont. The unfortunate man was away on Easter leave and was taken ill at home on Saturday. He had not been removed from his home, and while being treated there, every hope is entertained for his recovery. This makes the second extra-camp case in three days. No fresh cases have occurred in camp for at least four weeks.

Threatened Outbreak at Belleville

On account of the threatened outbreak at Belleville, Lieut.-Col. Palmer with Privates Higgs and Fraser of the 2nd Casualty Clearing Station, who are on loan to No. 2 Division, have gone to Belleville to do the bacteriology work in connection with the threatened outbreak of meningitis.

The Headquarters Staff from Exhibition Camp leaves for Georgetown to inspect the quota of the 220th Regiment for the 20th Battalion on Wednesday afternoon.

Instead of field work for this week, night work will be held on a fairly extensive scale. The main drill practice, such work as is necessary in France, and will work out field operations such as are supposed to prevail at the front.

TRANSPORTING TROOPS

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 6.—A Geneva despatch says traffic with Germany has been delayed since Friday, the German railways being occupied transporting troops from Flanders to Austria via Munich. It is also said large bodies of Austrian troops have been withdrawn from the Italian frontier.

DROPPED DEAD IN OFFICE

(Canadian Press Special)

OTTAWA, April 6.—George Dunnet, city passenger agent; of the Canadian Pacific Railway, dropped dead this morning in the office of F. C. Blaine, chief clerk of the immigration department, while conversing with one of the officials.

FEARS FOR STEAMER'S SAFETY

(Canadian Press Special)

NAPLES, April 6.—It is feared here that the steamer Pisa which left here six weeks ago to load coal at Cardiff has been sunk by a German submarine. The Pisa and Luigi Parodi belonged to the same firm. The press is urging the government to protest to Germany demanding that vessels be respected and reparation made for them already sunk.

VOTED ON LOCAL OPTION

(Canadian Press Special)

DETROIT, April 6.—Voting on local option yesterday added nine counties to Michigan's dry area and giving the State at least forty-three counties without saloons. Three hundred and twenty-seven saloons were forced out of business.

TRAWLER TORPEDOED

(Canadian Press Special)

BLYTH, England, April 6.—The trawler Agatha was sunk by a German submarine off Longstone. The crew were rescued by a Swedish steamer.

ALLIES MAINTAIN POSSESSION OF THE POSITIONS CAPTURED

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 6.—A statement from the War Office this afternoon says rain and mist continues over the whole front.

To the southwest of Vauquois we gained a footing in one of the enemy's works. In the wood of Ailly, southeast of St. Mihiel, our gain of three successive lines of trenches, already announced, was made up by the capture of prisoners, a machine gun and a bomb-thrower. We made progress in the wood of Brule, eastward of the wood of Ailly. We have maintained possession of position captured to the northeast of Reniéville already announced.

MILITARY PREPARATIONS ARE BEING PUSHED WITH VIGOR

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 6.—A despatch from Rome says military preparations are being pushed with vigor. A significant incident is the presentation of a battle flag to the battleship Cavour by the Duke and Duchess of Genoa, accompanied by religious ceremony and patriotic demonstration. Nevertheless, negotiations are being continued, and there is yet hope of avoiding war.

A report of a decisive victory in the Carpathians is doubted in Berlin, where it is believed that the farther the Russians advance, the more difficult their offensive movement becomes.

Cases Not In Belleville

Delegate to Temperance Convention did Not Refer to That City

Under the caption of "License Inspectors Lax," we find the following in The Toronto Telegram of March 5th, 1915, which contains a purpose all its own:

"A Belleville delegate declared that he had secured seventeen local municipal hotelkeepers in that city, and that the local inspector had refused to act on information laid against them."

Again, a Belleville correspondent, writing to The Toronto Telegram of March 6, 1915, says:

"My attention has to-day been called to a report of the late Temperance convention held in Toronto on March 3, 4 and 5, given in the sporting edition of March 5. The report says:

"A Belleville delegate declared he had secured 17 cases against hotel keepers in that town and the local inspector had refused to act on information." This part of your report is anything but correct. What I did say was, on one occasion I handed a local inspector some 17 cases of illegal selling and that upon his refusing to take any action in the matter, I had wired the Provincial Inspector, and that the parties duly fined, showing that where local men were in some cases prevented from taking action the Provincial Inspector was free to do so. I suppose the fact that I (as required by the convention) on standing to speak, announced myself as a delegate from Belleville accounts for your reporter taking it for granted that the case I cited occurred in Belleville, which is not the case."

We omit to deliberately in error, or attempting to trump up a case against the Belleville inspector. We are glad to know the matter has been set right and that our conscientious inspector is free of the charge.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. Some matters of importance will be attended to.

FIREMEN'S BALL BIG SUCCESS

Although the weather last evening was of an inclement nature, a large number attended the Thirteenth annual Ball, given by Challenge Lodge No. 66 B. of L. F. & E. in the Academy of Music. Front Street was closed to traffic for a few couples present, and the affair was a big success in every way. The ball was especially decorated for the occasion, with flags and bunting, while the headlight of Engine No. 66 reposed in the front of the room. Its light being used for a number of the dances and was a decided novelty. At midnight a daisy luncheon was served by the committee in charge. The fifth orphestra provided the music. Following are the members of the committee, to whom the great success of the evening is due: G. Naylor, chairman; R. W. Hobbs, Sec.-Treas.; Geo. Darrad, jr., W. Kerr, F. H. Norton, P. R. Welch, F. A. Pinkston, N. Williamson, W. Adams, R. Spafford.

Five Toronto Casualties

Five Toronto casualties were reported in the list received from Ottawa yesterday and in a message from Col. J. A. Currie of the 48th Highlanders. Pte. Robert Gilmore, killed; Piper J. W. Thompson, died suddenly; Pte. J. Burns, missing; Pte. R. G. MacLean, dangerously ill, and Sergt. Rose, accidentally wounded.

Pte. Robert Gilmore, reported killed, lived at 208 Spadina avenue before enlisting in one of the Toronto regiments He was in the 3rd Battalion.

Piper J. W. Thompson, who died suddenly, was about 20 years old and born in Toronto. His father, mother and three brothers reside on Cameron street. He had been secretary of one of the Toronto Orange lodges. Previous to enlistment he was employed as a cooper with the British-American Oil Co. His father and a brother, James, have been members of the Highlanders' Pipe Band for many years. In his last letter home he said: "I am in the pink of condition."

Quartermaster-Sergt. Hugh Rose, stated to be accidentally wounded, went from Toronto last August with the 48th Highlanders as a private. At Valcartier he was made corporal and at Salisbury Plain was promoted to sergeant. Only a short time ago he was appointed quartermaster-sergeant. Rose was 30 years old, and a number of years ago served a short term with the Highlanders as bugler. Previous to the outbreak of war he was employed in the advertising department of The Canadian Courier. He lived with his mother and two brothers, James and Andrew, at 170 University avenue. Two sisters also live in Toronto.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The ladies of the Auxiliary have postponed their monthly meeting for one week, owing to the addresses being delivered by Dr. Robertson to the Canadian Club on Thursday afternoon and evening.

The 21st Battalion is purchasing two tons of tobacco to take overseas, one ton of cutting tobacco, and one ton of smoking. All the tobacco is Canadian made, and has been bought out of the regimental funds.

Queen's and McGill Colleges hope to be able to complete their arrangements for a joint company for the 38th Regiment within a day or two. It looks as though the matter will go through, and Queen's College will have no difficulty in getting a fine lot of men for their contribution.

WEDDING BELLS.

HUTCHINSON—PECK.

A very pretty wedding was quietly solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Peck, 267 Ann Street, on Saturday, April 3rd at high noon, when their eldest daughter, Ethel Hazel, was united in marriage to Mr. Oscar E. Hutchinson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. I. Hutchinson, of Glanworth. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Chas. Geo. Smith, minister of the Baptist Church. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a pretty dress of white voile, dotters satin and lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Little Miss Eileen MacLaurin, prettily gowned in white lingerie, was the ring-bearer, Miss Ethel Nurse played the wedding march. After the ceremony the guests were served to a dainty luncheon. The table were decorated in yellow ribbons with daffodils and runners of smilax. The happy couple left on the afternoon "Flyer" for Toronto, where they will make their future home.

Mr. Dancey Speaks At High School

Mr. Dancey's lecture in the High School was well attended yesterday afternoon, the audience evincing great interest in the speaker and his subject.

Mrs. Wills opened the meeting in a few words, but before Mr. Dancey went to the platform, all joined in singing "O Canada."

The speaker briefly introduced his subject and from the very first held his audience enthralled.

"It was by chance," he said, "that I got a mission that took me into Germany. I am convinced in my own heart that the Allies are destined to win. I have followed the war, battle by battle from last July and feel certain that the power of Prussian militarism is broken. There was something in military circles, that as soon as our army reached the German boundary, it would remain there, starve the German out. My own experience tells me that the condition of that country can not hold out against a close blockade. Going through Germany a few weeks ago I saw the effect of this war on every threshold. They cannot understand that notwithstanding Berlin reports of victory, every available man is being forced to the front. They do not know why London and Paris are not arriving. I have seen recruits throw themselves off trains. I have seen hundreds of men weeping. I have seen them forced into trenches. I was always proud of being a Canadian and Britisher, but never so much as at the Battle of Mons. The British army was composed of their orders, and I know of several cases where the orders didn't reach them that bodies of British stood their ground and fought and died to a man, that for every man that the British lost the Germans lost 5. You can be more respected all over the world than the Britisher. We have a right to be proud of our British citizenship, and more right to be proud of our army in the field. People have asked me if what the papers said of the atrocities are true. I say, truthfully, and from personal experience, not one half is published. I have seen children in arms with limbs cut off. I have seen hospitals and noncombatants fired upon. I have seen carloads of prisoners of each sex and every age subjected to unspeakable conditions. I could prove that Germany has been preparing for war for 25 years. They were never deterred from conquest the world. But there is one people anyway, that will never tolerate that, they are not the people.

"A few words about Red Cross work. I saw at Mons, Marne, Antwerp, Liege and dozens of other places the wonderful work of that society. Some of the most heroic deeds ever done have been done by those angels of mercy. When the last great battle comes in the near future, the British will be the ones to determine the result."

"Owing to sanitary conditions, nursing and improved surgery, only 2% of wounded die now. Notwithstanding the horrors of this war, and brutality and savagery shown by the Germans, the spirit of charity evinced proves that christianity and civilization have not been in vain. There are veterinary hospitals in France also, and besides saving hundreds of thousands of horses it means the development of sympathy. The dogs also are of great value on the battle-field. When all the gunners have been killed, I have seen the dog teams wheel around and bring in the guns. I have seen them carry messages through the thickest part of the enemy's lines, shot at by machine guns and rifles, and I know of instances where dogs have surprised night attacks and prevented annihilation. So it is only justice to have hospitals and attendants for these faithful animals.

"Napoleon said that, 'Disease is a more cruel enemy than the enemy itself,' and he should know. I have seen Germans bayonet their own wounded and British wounded. I asked them why they did that and they replied because they would sooner be killed without death be captured, and put to a horrible death by the British. That fear, however, is gone now, and they surrender in thousands. I have seen the Germans drive in Red Cross uniforms and advance under the pretext of getting wounded, and when up close, fire.

"But while brutal to the enemy, they are to their own troops also. They collect the war to be finished in two months, by the use of the great Krupp guns, but every victory so far has been won by the bayonet. Great as has been the Canadian sacrifice, it has still got to be greater. The Red Cross workers have a dangerous path before them, but it must be trodden and at the end is honor. Let it be known to all the world that women and cripples can do a lot towards winning this war."

Mrs. C. J. Bowen, in a few appropriate words, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Dancey and Mrs. Graham, seconder the motion. The singing of "God Save the King" brought the meeting to a close.

General Otter evidently did not want to enter into any controversy when he blamed the weather for the bad boots supplied the Canadian soldiers.

Is Tea or Coffee After Your Job?

The average cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, a poisonous drug that handicaps the efficiency and chances for promotion of many bright men and women.

"Down at the Junction," writes a railroad man, "where I was employed as Telegraph Operator and Towerman for a busy railroad, where every second counts and where I hold the lives of the entire train crew and passengers in my hand, I found coffee was making me dull and exceedingly nervous.

"My wife told me about Postum. I tried it and liked it. I never drink anything else now and have a tin of Instant Postum in my pail. I feel fine, my brain is quick and active and there's no delay at the Junction while I'm on duty. I really think coffee would have put me out of a job if I hadn't quit it for Postum."

CONDITIONS AT BELLEVILLE ARE FULLY INVESTIGATED

Representative Sent to Inquire into Affairs of 39th Battalion—The Quarters are Pronounced Sanitary by Eminent Medical Authorities, While Complaints About Food Have Been Removed on Account of Improvement in Cooking

(Peterborough Review, April 5)

With a view of getting first-hand accurate information in regard to the situation at the mobilization camp of the 39th Battalion in Belleville, about which so many varied and alarming reports have been circulated in Peterborough, a representative of The Examiner went down to Belleville on Saturday night and spent yesterday in a thorough investigation. His findings may be summed up briefly as follows:

1.—HEALTH.—There have been four cases of spinal meningitis, with one fatality up to yesterday. Three of the cases developed on Monday last and the fourth on the following day and there have been no fresh cases since. The disease can in no way be attributed to the barracks at Belleville, as it has undoubtedly been carried in. The chain of infection would seem to point back to the epidemic at Toronto, through some of the men who recruited in Toronto for the Lindsay detachment.

2.—PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES.—The meningitis victims were at once removed from the barracks into hospital and the men sleeping near them have been isolated. Dr. A. B. Odell, bacteriologist of Toronto, and a corps of assistants will examine every member of the battalion and the "carriers," that is, the men who may have the germs in the throat and nose, and while not susceptible themselves may be a source of danger to those who are. So segregated.

3.—GENERAL HEALTH.—The general health of the battalion seems to be excellent. The sick parade on Saturday and again yesterday was less than 1 per cent. of the strength—a remarkably good showing. Only three Peterborough boys are on the sick list, one with pneumonia, another with la grippe and the third with a sore foot.

4.—THE QUARTERS.—While it is impressive that no more suitable quarters could have been found in the Third Divisional Area than the armoury factory in which the battalion is stationed, yet the building has been declared perfectly sanitary, not only by the medical officer of the battalion, but also by Dr. Clinton, Inspector of the Provincial Board of Health, and by Lt.-Col. Duff of Kingston, the principal medical officer of the 3rd Divisional Area. Some of the men pointed out the conditions that they thought might be unsanitary, but in this regard their opinion is negatived by the pressure of expert judgment. In regards to the complaints that the building is a fire-trap, with the precautions taken there does not appear to be any particular danger. There are rope fire escapes from the windows, and sliding poles at each end of the building, while external stairs are to be built at the expense of the regiment.

5.—THE FOOD.—In regard to the food there has never been any question as to its quality, but undoubtedly there was cause for complaint for a few days as to the manner in which it was cooked. During the past couple of days conditions in this respect have materially improved, and there were no complaints yesterday. The supplies purchased are of the best, and with the improvement in the kitchen there should not be much complaint from now on.

6.—CLEANLINESS.—There is every evidence that all means possible are being taken to keep the building in a clean, healthy condition. Dishes are carefully washed, the tables scoured and the floors kept clean, while disinfectants and deodorants are copiously used. The lavatories and washrooms were in splendid shape yesterday.

7.—DISCIPLINE.—The men were apparently well in hand yesterday after the outbreak on Friday night. The Examiner's contention that the recruiting methods adopted in Lindsay were not conducive to discipline was well founded, as yesterday's visit proved conclusively. The Lindsay men were in great measure responsible for Friday's disturbance, and the offenders, who were locked in the armouries, were in the great majority, members of the Lindsay company. For obvious reasons, the opinions of leading officers cannot be quoted here, but if the Lindsay Post wants any information as to how the men sent from there to Belleville are regarded by the officers, men and civilians, an hour spent in Belleville would be an eye-opener.

8.—The PETERBOROUGH MEN.—In regard to the 57th detachment at Belleville, the citizens of Peterborough have every reason to feel proud of their representatives. Their conduct throughout has been of the best. Lt.-Col. Preston, officer commanding the battalion, complimented them in unqualified terms to the Examiner yesterday. Friends at home need not worry about the boys, either in regard to their conduct or their good spirits. They were cheery enough yesterday, went through Friday night's excitement with flying colors, and are regarded by everyone in Belleville as soldiers and men.

The Examiner representative was most cordially received and every facility for investigation was placed at his disposal by Lt.-Col. Preston and the officers of his staff. He was not only allowed to visit the barracks there, but was also permitted to go where he like unaccompanied in order that the men might feel free to talk freely when no officer was present. He got a warm welcome from the Peterborough boys, and took every opportunity during the day to get their views of the situation. There have been complaints, of course. The men say the cooking was bad at first, but that great improvement has been noticed in the past couple of days. The quality of the food has been good throughout, and all complaints in regard to the food were based on the cooking. This has been good, and yesterday's meals were excellent.

"It isn't a home, of course," said one private, "but we can't expect home conditions here."

"It all stays this way, we'll have no kick coming," remarked another Peterborough boy.

In regard to the sleeping quarters, the Examiner found objections from some of the men that the air is stuffy through the night and that the proximity of the lavatories to some of the bunks in unsanitary. When, however, such authorities as Dr. Clinton and Lt.-Col. Duff, the principal civil and military men of the district, pronounce the quarters as perfectly sanitary there does not seem to be any legitimate reason for complaints on this score. The medical authorities also found no menace to health in the fact that the lavatories are situated over the kitchen, which was another objection.

In company with Capt. Carron, the M.I.O. of the battalion, the Examiner representative visited the barracks at noon and saw the men at their midday repast. There were no complaints in regard to the food and it was pretty hard to see how any complaints could be made. The menu consisted of roast beef, with plenty of gravy, boiled potatoes, cabbage and carrots, bread and tea. The Examiner man made it a point to visit the tables where the Peterborough boys were, making a frontal attack on these viands and to inquire as to the meal. "This is the best meal we have had since we have been here," the men reported. "Conditions have been improving greatly in the last couple of days."

The Examiner man visited the kitchen, watched the cooks at work and accepted an invitation to try the roast beef. "Good as that at the Quinte, isn't it?" inquired Capt. Carron, the medical officer, and it was, too.

THE HEALTH QUESTION.

In regard to the occurrence of cases of cerebro-spinal meningitis, the authorities have and are taking every precaution possible. The disease, which naturally causes alarm because of the high percentage of fatalities, is not attributable to the Belleville camp. Undoubtedly the germs were brought there by carriers. Three of the cases originated in C. Company, made up of the Lindsay detachment, among which were men recruited from Toronto, some of whom, it is supposed, were discharged from the Exhibition camp. It is quite possible that the disease was carried into Belleville from a source of this kind. Three cases were detected on Monday last, March 30, and a fourth on Tuesday, three of the victims being members of C Company, and the other of A Company. Pte. Davidson of Lorneville, who was a member of the Lindsay company, died on Friday afternoon. Two of the other cases are severe, Pte. Driver, a Toronto man with the Lindsay company and Pte. Nicholson of Lindsay, being critically ill. There have been no fresh cases since then, the men sleeping in the vicinity of the sick soldiers having been isolated, a corps of bacteriologists are co-operating with the military medical men in controlling the situation, and from the nature of the disease the authorities are confident that there is little fear of much greater spread of the disease.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S TROUBLE.

The trouble on Friday night was caused by an element returning to the barracks after the news of the death of Pte. Davidson, of Lorneville, was spread around. Some 58 men, the majority of them from the Lindsay company, refused to return and started for the station. They tried to induce the rest to accompany, but had not success in this respect. The Peterborough boys with two or three exceptions, informed the agitators that they were "not built that way," and went to bed as usual. Later, with the remainder of those in the barracks, they were turned out on arrival of reinforcements, who were corralled and locked up in the Armouries. Just what punishment will be meted out to the offenders has not been decided, but the ring-leaders will not get off lightly. Lt.-Col. Duff and Col. Hemming, of Kingston, paid a visit to the Armouries, and their reassuring speeches assisted materially in quieting down the situation generally.

For the officers of the battalion, the Peterborough men have nothing but good words. Lt.-Col. Preston, the commanding officer, is popular with the men with the utmost respect and affection. "He's a prince," one Peterborough private remarked, and there was a general chorus of "Col. Preston's a good scout." Capt. Carron, A.M.C., who is acting medical officer of the battalion, but whose services have been accepted by the British War Office, and who is going to the front at once, gave The Examiner every assistance in the investigation.

Orders Regulate Army Canteens

Must be "Dry" for Active Service and Run by Regiments

Orders authorizing the establishment of "dry" canteens for the active service battalions now being organized throughout the country have been issued. It is expressly provided that these canteens shall be under the direct supervision of the regimental officers, and that the privileges shall not be sublet.

The text of the order is as follows:—

The establishment of dry canteens for each unit of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and also for each unit of the active militia during the period of training is authorized.

"These canteens to be organized, administered, and carried on under the supervision and direction of the officer commanding the unit, or by a committee appointed by him. They are to be inspected daily by an officer, and once a month by the commanding officer or by an officer appointed by him, at which inspection the books, accounts and vouchers, and also an audited cash statement are to be submitted.

These canteens are to be maintained solely for the use and benefit of the unit and are not, on any account, to be sublet or handed over to any person or persons. They are to be managed by a member of the unit, and no one else is to be employed in connection with the canteen unless he is an enlisted soldier of such unit. Any profits arising from these canteens are to be applied for the use and benefit of the non-commissioned officers and men of such unit.

"Garrison, regimental or corps regulations governing such canteens and also the hours for opening and closing of the same will be published in regimental or corps orders for the information of all concerned."

LIFE INSURANCE AND PATRIOTISM

The city of Toronto placed advertisements in a large number of Canadian and United States papers inviting tenders for the insurance of its third contingent for the war. At the expiration of the time for receipt of tenders, March 22nd, not a single tender had been received. This is another indication that the insurance of war risks in the present campaign is not attractive to the insurance companies. Most of the companies, as a matter of patriotism and of liberal treatment of existing policyholders, decided last year not to charge any extra premium on policies covering the lives of those who volunteered for active service at home or abroad in defence of Canada or the British Empire.

A large number of existing policyholders are already at the front and many more are going. The Canadian life insurance companies, therefore, are carrying, without extra premiums, a very much greater risk.

For new insurance, most of our companies have placed a $2,000 limit on war policies, a five per cent. extra premium being charged. Insurance actuaries and managers are practically unanimous in the opinion that this extra premium for the war risk is entirely inadequate. The experience in past wars is of little value to guide the life insurance company in the present war. The large casualties and the more modern methods of warfare, and particularly the heavy losses sustained by individual companies and battalions, in the theatre of war, the life insurance companies must consider seriously. A company might easily insure a group, that would be placed in an exposed position in the firing line, the entire amount at risk at once becoming a claim.

It may be contended by some that for the sake of patriotism, the life insurance companies should break away from actuarial science and liberally insure our soldiers. The fact that they have already allowed existing policyholders to go to the front, immediately involving a much heavier risk to the company without extra premium is, The Monetary Times thinks, a sufficient concession to patriotism. For this and other reasons, the companies cannot encourage any measure founded on a patriotic theory to a point which would imperil the entire surplus of their policyholders as a whole. Life insurance companies have more than the welfare of a corporation to consider. They have also to bear in mind the safety of the life insurance business in Canada and of the investments of many hundreds of thousands of policyholders.

THE "PRUDENT MARINER"

Criticising the Canadian Minister of Finance for neglecting to prepare for the lean years while the country was prosperous, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the course of his recent budget speech, gave utterance to this sentiment, which is reminiscent: "The prudent mariner, when he sees the clouds gathering on the horizon at once prepares his ship to meet the danger."

Three years ago Sir Robert Borden expressed the same thought, when introducing his Naval Aid Bill, but the vision of Sir Wilfrid could not discern the cloud on the horizon then. Indeed it may be said with truth that the Liberal leader alone among the mariners of the Empire, failed to note the storm signals of the past ten years. As far back as 1907 the British Government pointed out the clouds gathering on the horizon" to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but he would not heed. In 1909 and in 1912 the British people decided by a vote of their duty to inform the Canadian people that the clouds of war were overhanging the Empire, but Laurier and the Liberal party refused to hear.

What statesman worthy of the name could afford to be oblivious of Germany's ridiculous talk about the coming downfall of the colossus with the feet of clay? What statesman in the British Empire could dismiss with a jeer the German navy bills of 1906 and 1908? And when to this overwhelming evidence of Germany's war preparations was added the methods of her Foreign Office, the truculent Delcasse incident, the ultimatum to Russia and the boasting afterwards, the Agadir incident and what was more irritating, the thousand and one daily provocations of her diplomacy, coupled with endless talk about the power of the German sword to dispense opposition to the German will, one can only wonder whether Laurier's criminal indifference was born of stupidity or of something worse.

Toronto Star: "One of the advantages that Germany has taken of other nations, for the past twenty-five years, has been in the way of sending agents to every country in the world to scout for trade."

Kingston Standard: "Montreal's debt is enormous, and is growing fast. It need cause no great surprise that this is so when men can make a profit out of purchasing lots to the extent of $120,000 by selling some to the city and still have two-third of them left. One such case at least has been proved in the courts."

The Kaiser has permitted the publication of a telegram he has sent to the Imperial Chancellor of "scrap of paper" fame, saying: "We shall succeed. Our guarantee is, firstly, God's grace!" Webster's Dictionary defines God's grace as "the mercy of God as manifested from His justice." Imagine the deliberate perversion of the world's greatest war, the ravager of Belgium, the head of a nation plotting and practising murdering navy, claiming that God is on their side. Verily, and that for many "shall" have it, "by God's grace!"

JESUS DIED A HUMAN RAISED A SPIRIT BEING

"PUT TO DEATH IN THE FLESH BUT MADE ALIVE IN THE SPIRIT"

The Resurrection of Christ—Bible Clear and Harmonious on this Subject—Theory of Body Resurrection Unreasonable—"Flesh and Blood Cannot Inherit the Kingdom of God"—Natural Men Cannot Appreciate Spiritual Things

NEW YORK CITY, April 4.—New York City Temple where the Bible in motion pictures is exhibited twice daily and Sunday afternoons was used today in the morning and evening by Pastor Russell in addressing his forwarding New York congregation. His dramatization of Earth's History will be presented this week at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco, beginning Monday. We report the Pastor's Easter discourse from the text "With what body do they come?" (1 Corinthians 15:35) He said in part:

In our context St. Paul shows that without God's purpose of a resurrection those who have fallen asleep in death would have perished as do brute beasts. Then he assures us that 'Christ has risen from the dead and become the First-fruits of them that slept." Christ's awakening was merely of a temporary nature, and they soon relapsed into the dead state. They will not have a full resurrection—anastasis—a raising up to perfection of life such as Jesus' redemptive work guarantees to us and to all his race, who are willing to accept it under the terms of the New Covenant—Jeremiah 31:31-34.

The Scriptures clearly teach that not the body but the soul, is promised a resurrection—that it was our Lord's soul that went to Sheol Hades, the death state; and that God raised Him out of death on the third day. All Christendom has been plunged into difficulties by the unscriptural theory that the body is to be resurrected. We have now note a few of the difficulties into which this error has plunged us as believers in the Scriptures, particularly in connection with our Redeemer's resurrection.

What Say the Scriptures?

Christian minds the ordinary thought respecting our Lord's death and resurrection is that when Jesus seemed to die He did not die; that He, the holy One, could not die; that, instead, He went to Heaven; and then came back on the third day to get the body which had been crucified; that forty days later He took it to Heaven; that he had had that body ever since; and that in all eternity He will have it married with the print of the nails in His hands and His feet, with the scarcs of the thorns upon His brow, a spear wound in His side.

What a ghastly thought! How strange that we should ever have been misled into so impossible and unscriptural a theory. Some endeavor to gloss the matter by suggesting that our Lord's body is glorified—that it shines—the shining presumably making the wounds all the more conspicuous.

Our Methodist friends have thus stated the matter: "He ascended up on High, taking His fleshly body with Him, and all that appertained thereto, and set down at the right hand of God." This medieval statement correctly admits that the fleshly body was not the Lord's glorified body but declares that He, the soul, took, took it with Him as luggage. The clause, "and all that appertained thereto," presumably would refer to our Lord's sandals, walking stick and such clothing as the soldiers did not divide amongst themselves at the time of the crucifixion—if, indeed, He has any others! But our dear Methodist friends wish to be sure that nothing was left behind.

All this is of a piece with the theory that when the saints die they go to heaven, shut come back later to get their bodies and all that appertained thereto—the inconveniences that they have been rid of for centuries! How many trunkloads of things appertaining thereto may be taken by some, and how mixed an assortment by others, is not stated. Neither are particulars given respecting those whose clothing will in the meantime worn out. But we have had enough of this, if it has helped us to see the absurdity of theories received from the Dark Ages—if it has awakened us to thought and to Bible investigation on this interesting and important subject.

The Bible presentation is to every way reasonable, consistent and harmonious. St. Paul points out that "there is a natural body and there is a spirit body." He neither means nor says that the spirit body is a human body glorified. Quite to the contrary, he declares that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God"—so neither our body glorified. A human being is so totally different from a spirit being that, as St. John says, "it doth not yet appear what we shall be." In our resurrection change and the Scriptures do not even attempt to give an explanation of how it will be.

The Bible merely declares that as we now bear the image of the earthly, having New York congregation, His so shall we shall by the resurrection change be given a share in the nature and the likeness of the Second Adam, our glorious Lord. We shall be like Him and see Him as He is. But, be it noted, we must be changed from flesh and blood conditions to spirit conditions by resurrection power, in order to see Him as He is. Surely this fact proves that our Lord Jesus is no longer flesh, as once He was—"in the days of His flesh."—Hebrews 5:7

Heavenly Bodies v. Earthly Bodies.

St. Paul calls attention to the difference between celestial bodies—heavenly or terrestrial or earthly bodies, and declares that they have different glories. He tells us that the first Adam was made a living soul, a human being; but that our Redeemer, who humbled Himself and became obedient unto death—the suffering of death" (Hebrews 2:9)—thereby became the Second Adam, the quickening spirit. Hence the difference between the Second Adam and the first Adam is clearly set forth; one was earthly and the other is Heavenly.

St. Paul illustrates by asking if we know of many kinds of organisms on the earthly or fleshly plane—one flesh of men, another flesh of animals, another of birds and another of fishes. But how clear different the organisms, they are of one kind. On the heavenly plane the spirit plane, there are varieties of organisms, but all are spirit.

Our Heavenly Father is the Head or Chief—Creator, a Spirit. Cherubim, seraphim, and the still higher orders of angels are all spirit beings. Christ Jesus, our Redeemer, after finishing the work of sacrificing appointed Him, was resurrected to the spirit plane—to be above angels, principalities and powers—next to the Father. (Ephesians 1:20-23.) Thus we read: "He was put to death in the flesh, but quickened (made alive) in the spirit."—1 Peter 3:18.

The more we examine the subject the more foolish and unreasonable the views handed down from the Dark ages appear. The Scriptures clearly set forth that our Lord's change, prior to becoming a man, was a spirit, being—"the only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." His change in the spirit plane to become a man is Scripturally described as a great humiliation. How unreasonable to suppose that the Heavenly Father would appropriate to all eternity that humiliation, after it had served its purpose! Surely not!

The Bible clearly says that Jesus "made Himself to the human nature"—a little slower than the angels." A man was made flesh and dwelt for a time on the Redeemer must be on the same plane of being as the one whom He would redeem. Hence the Scriptures clearly specified—"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a man's life for a man's life." Only the death of an angel or of our Lord in His spirit condition could not have effected the ransom-price release of the condemned race. Thus stands the record: "A body hast Thou prepared Me"—"for the sufering of death."—Hebrews 10:5, 2:9.

No one can estimate this sacrifice exclusively to our Lord's experiences during the years in which "He who was rich became poor for our sakes, that we through his poverty might be made rich." Surely it is unsupposable that the Father would arrange a Plan by which our Redeemer would engage in accomplishing man's redemption at a cost Him an eternity of poverty humiliation, degradation, a little lower than the angels"; while the Church would be made rich and would get a position state "far above angels"—be made "partakers of the Divine nature."—2 Peter 1:4.

"God Highly Exalted Him."

The very same Apostle who tells of our Lord's humiliation carries the matter to its climax, declaring that His faithfulness, as the Man Christ Jesus even unto the death of the cross, Then God highly exalted Him and gave Him Father's faithfulness in not leaving His Son on a lower plane; "Wherefore God highly exalted Him and gave Him a name above every name."—Philippians 2:8-11.

This is in harmony with our Lord's words in His prayer to the Father, letting the promise of a higher glory as a reward for His faithfulness, He prayed, "Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self, with the glory I had before the world was." (John 17:5.) In humility He asked no reward, but was quite content to serve the Father's plan and then to return to His former glorious estate. The Heavenly Father replied, "I have glorified Thee, and I will glorify Thee again." of further the implication of a still higher glory than that which He enjoyed before He was made flesh.

The Unconsecrated Cannot Understand

In the consideration of spiritual problems two lines of difficulties present themselves. When a naturally minded man undertakes to reason the subjects out he finds them impossible of comprehension. St. Paul explains this difficulty saying "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." (1 Corinthians 2:14.) He proceeds to tell us that all men are natural men except such as have been begotten again by the Holy Spirit. In their reconsecration all natural men will receive earthly or human bodies, while all spiritual ones, New Creatures in Christ, will receive spirit bodies, as St. Paul explains in our context (Verses 36-50.)

Not all of my hearers can appreciate this—only those begotten again by the Holy Spirit. Others I ask to consider what I say and to hold it, if they please until such time as, in accordance with the promise they may be begotten of the Holy Spirit, and thus be enabled to understand spiritual things.

Another class who have difficulty are spirit begotten, but have been entangled in their reasoning by the declaration of the creeds respecting the resurrection of the body. It is difficult to unlearn error. When visiting foreign lands and learning of the foul superstition has upon the heathen, I concluded that we Christians experience just as much difficulty in unlearning our errors as do the heathen in getting free from theirs.

He Appeared and Disappeared

During the forty days following our Lord's resurrection, His appearances to His disciples were but for a few moments each time, and in many different ways—once as a gardener, another time as a traveler, a third time as a stranger on the shore, etc. If all our Lord's resurrection appearances would probably not have exceeded four hours out of the forty days. We were not with the natural students when we overlooked these things, and forget to ask ourselves why these things were so.

Now we see more distinctly why our Lord did as He did. His disciples were natural men and could not appreciate spiritual things. Had He appeared as He could not receive the gaining of the holy Spirit until our Lord's ascension power, and this did not occur for a period one behalf of the Church, to make satisfaction for their sins and to make the basis for their joint-sacrifice with Himself. Had Jesus ascended immediately after His resurrection, the stumbling of the bewildered world have had no assurance of His resurrection. They would have found it impossible to accept and exhibit faith in Him as the risen and glorified Son of God. His disciples were not prepared that He had risen from the dead when they had no proof to this effect.

Even as Jesus had appeared to them as He did to Saul of Tarsus, this would not have been convincing and satisfactory. They might have said, Here is a phenomenon, but how can we positively associate it with the life and death of Jesus? Matters were different with Saul. He studied carefully the matter with thoroughly and to teach him for all time, and others through him, that the Lord is not a man, but a spirit." Besides, the disciples were able to give Saul assurances of what they knew respecting Jesus' resurrection and ascension.

Our Lord adopted the only reasonable way of convincing His disciples that He was no longer dead, and that He was no longer human, but had been glorified and had become a spirit being. For two things were necessary, and they were done at the same time.

KELLEY SHIES UNIFORM WAS GREAT TRAINER

The passing of Joe Kelley from the managership of the Toronto baseball team of the International league is also a sign of the way things will be going in the bigger minor leagues, of experienced ball players as the War ...ering keeps up their tricks. Ex-umpires have decided to curtail expenses and Kelley was regarded to draw more than many a big league player. The claim of the International circuit are faced with having to raise a big war fund for the west attack. Detroit has lost one, sadly into Buffalo and has driven Jack Dunn's Bal-timores to as untried city, Richmond, Va. But what is much worse, the International and the other big minors stand to bank heavily on sales of developed players to the old majors. With the field in action this revenue is gone, and the minor league magnates all over America will have to keep down expenses.

Kelley is not the least famous member of the old Baltimore Orioles which in 1896-8-7 fought and schemed their way to the National league championship. He was then with John McGraw, Wilbert Robinson, Hugh Jennings and Willie Keeler. They made an old-style outfit, with plenty of tricks and cunnings as well as ability, some of the college boy style about them. In those days Kelley was a good all-round ball player, not especialist, but out of his one position in the field. He was one of the best batsmen and graceful runners on the team. He never balked at infield fight and late as 1897 went into the box and showed his pitchers up. When he was a hard hitter and as a manager developed sluggers and batsmen. He always liked men who could never take baseball from the manager, umpire or bleachers.

Kelley, Kelley did not shine at Hot Springs Richard Rudolph came in in 1907 and helped Toronto win the flag in the old Eastern Canada International circuit. Rudolph made good in the Show at last, but it was six years before he went with the Boston Braves and gained world's series' fame. An exception was Jack Dunn whom Kelley developed so well for McGraw, among the hitters who went to the majors from Kelley's old Baltimore club are Boston Red Sox and the "Bullet" Brooklyn Nationals.

Kelley really cared more for winning pennants than developing stars. He knew a ball player when he saw one and many friends used to send the youngsters to him. He worked under his Irish tongue and his keen eye, but his wisdom went out into the bushes to look for the phenoms. It is not hard to see that he has more time as a student of baseball than on his position, if he wants to stick at it. But with the fun of walking from the first base coaching box to the water pail just for a chance to exercise his sarcasm on the umpires or to "put an extra signal to the batsman."

ORIGIN OF "BUNT"

An Irish Player First Used Word In Fit of Anger

Here is an interesting story of the origin of the word "bunt" as used in baseball. It was told by the late Kelly, who played with one of the famous old teams around Boston long before baseball was the national game.

"We had a big, wild lad named Dorgan catching for Taunton," relates the lamality, "of those heavy swingers from the mills who would get out on the long heap and rest all during the noon hour by batting all comers with barn brushes.

"We were playing the Common champions of Boston, and one little fellow on the Commons' team poked the ball down ten feet in front of the kad beat it to first. Dorgan was away mad. 'Tis no hit,' he said to the umpire. 'Tis a bunt.'

"Nowadays we say fly or bunt; in the Gaelic means a stump, and in Ireland, therefore, it is a rabbit's tail. So the 'bunt' really is a hit no longer than a rabbit's tail."

Armless Man Runs Motorboat

George Rutton, the armless billiard player, is a motorboat enthusiast, and boat driver. "Rutton's arms are cut off below the elbows, and to see him thoke a rope make a landing and step his right foot ashore is a spectacle rivaling the best-armed propellanger with the hives. One summer Rutton made a trip from New York to Chicago in a motor boat, and, besides running the boat, he did a lot of fishing and hunting. Not satisfied, he went down the Mississippi to New Orleans. He is an expert expert and can crank better than most persons who have two hands.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery to the 78th Highlanders, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure gave me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, in fact so that my legs swelled to twice their natural size, consequently the pain was excruciating, for me to "get-about-ives". FRENCH'S "RETIREMENT"

An incident in the life of General French in 1892, when he was forty-one years of age, makes strange reading in view of his brilliant achievements during the South African campaign, and the tremendous responsibility which now rests upon his shoulders. In the years mentioned Colonel French (as he then was) was actually retired on half pay.

This retirement on half pay was in accordance with the rules of the army, which allows the middle-aged officer to make way for youth.

For two years Sir John French was actually in despair as to his career. Then his old chief in India, Sir George Leith, one of the most brilliant cavalry trainers, was brought back from India to Dumfries to reorganize forms, and the first thing he insisted upon was a revised cavalry training book; and it was Colonel French who was ultimately called in from his retirement and installed in the Horse Guards for the purpose of writing it.

The result was a masterpiece of lucid explanation and terse precision, and no sooner was the book issued than the authorities were asking who was to carry out the drastic alterations recommended. Many suggestions were made, but it was ultimately decided that one man was more fitted for the task of reorganizing the British cavalry than Colonel French, who had written the drill book and had attracted so much attention. And in that it was that French found the man whom Britain is depending upon at the present time. He was finally called and ensconced at the War Office as Assistant Adjutant-General of Cavalry.

Pigeons are used by the warring nations in much the same fashion as in previous wars, for the carrying of lines of defence and the location of fortifications. system it is yet, we are told, only a very small fragment of what is now the known Universe. For instance, all the bodies known to us as stars are far and away outside and beyond the solar system. The star called "Alpha Centauri" is the nearest to our earth and is yet 25 billion miles distant from us, and the next nearest called "61 Cygni" is more than double that distance, being 57 billion miles away.

Dazzling Distances

"A general idea of the relation of the solar system to the Universe may be gained by reflecting that the average distance between any two neighboring stars is several thousand times the extent of the solar system. The star Rigel in the constellation Orion is computed to be 37 thousand times larger than our sun, and another star called Arcturus is said to be ten times larger than Rigel. Between the orbit of Neptune and the nearest star known to us is immense void in position, sets the mechanism to begin making exposures after a certain interval has elapsed and during the operation then continues at regular intervals until the film is changed and in the camera have been exposed. In the course of ten flights, several hundred photographs can be obtained in a few hours.

Dogs to Draw British Gun

It is announced that the War Office has under consideration a dog gun carriage and ammunition wagon invented by Captain H. Furber, of the 3rd Battalion Welsh Regiment. This carriage is to be lighter than the Belgian dog gun-carriage, and can be drawn either by dogs or by infantry. Each dog could carry 150lb.

DAZZLING WONDER OF SOLAR SYSTEM

Distances Which Are Almost Impossible to Grasp—Something About the Relation of Stellar Bodies

In the course of an address to the "Christian Brotherhood," Mr. W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., Toronto, gave the following interesting facts:

"Scientists inform us that the mean distance of the earth from the sun is 92 million miles, consequently the diameter of the pathway traversed each year by the earth in order to travel round the immense orbit in one year is about 184 million miles, which means that the earth is continuously whirling through space at the amazing rate of 18 miles in each second of our time. Our measurements of time, we know, are derived from the planetary rotations; that is to say, our day is the equivalent in time of the complete rotation of the earth on its axis; our month is the equivalent in time of each revolution of the moon around the earth, and our year of 365¼ days is the equivalent in time of each revolution of the earth around the sun.

The Solar System

"As we proceed with the subject we are informed that what is called 'the solar system' comprises the sun and the planets and other celestial bodies over which the sun holds sway, and comprehends in all an area but little under 5 billion miles in diameter, and that in this system the earth is merely one of eight planets, of which four are larger and three slightly smaller. Enormous as is this solar

NOGI'S ADVICE TO BOYS

Some Game of Wisdom From Famous Japanese General

General Nogi, idol of Japanese soldiery, wrote some time before he died the following gem of wisdom for the pupils of the Peers' School:

Keep your mouth closed. He who has always his mouth open shows that his mind is idle.

Mind what you are looking at. One whose eye is always wandering tells that his mind is also wandering.

Do not forget your father's name, family standing and ancestors. Due respect to your ancestors is important.

A boy should act like a boy. Avoid becoming effeminate.

Never indulge in luxury. There is nothing that makes a fool of a man like luxury.

How many of you wash your face with cold water in the winter? You should not use warm water.

It is a shame to wear torn clothes without mending them. But to wear the torn part patched is nothing to be ashamed of.

Know what is shame; he who does not know what is shame is inferior to dumb animals.

Become a man useful to your country. Whoever cannot be so is better dead.

Salvation Army Leader in Canada a Recruit of General Booth

Commissioner William J. Richards, the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, is full to overflowing with vital energy and personal enthusiasm. This has been the case during the whole of his thirty-four years' career as an officer in the Army. The commissioner is one of the officers of the Salvation Army who was personally called by the founder of the organization, the late General William Booth, and is, therefore, one of the pioneers of the movement. The story goes that the General visited the town in which the then Mr. Richards resided to conduct revival services and heard the young man speak. The General was so favorably impressed that he was asked if he could not enter the training home, and he did so. This was thirty-four years ago, and Commissioner Richards has rendered no many years of unbroken service.

Commissioner Richards was closely associated with the late General's "Darkest England" scheme, having done much to establish what is now known as the men's social work of the Salvation Army.

His usefulness was not confined to this branch of Army service but having earned for himself the reputation of a clever and capable organizer and a brilliant platform speaker he had full command of the operations in Denmark, South Africa and New Zealand. The latter appointment was his charge when appointed by General Bramwell Booth to succeed the late Commissioner Rees in the Canadian territory.

It is interesting to know that four sons of Commissioner and Mrs. Richards have followed in their parents' footsteps so far as connection with the Salvation Army, holding important positions in Ava, South America, the continent of Europe and London, England.

One on Hon. James Duff

The story is told of an incident which occurred during a meeting of the Ontario Legislature some years ago. Just outside the assembly room is a telephone for the convenience of the members. One day Sir Pope called Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, to the telephone. In using the instrument he adopts a high-pitched voice and presently the house was convulsed to hear him say. It disturbed the late Premier, Sir James Whitney, considerably. He stood it as long as he could, and then turned towards the back benches.

"What noise is that?" he thundered.

One of the Ministers sitting near informed him that it was Mr. Duff talking to Glen Grove.

"Well, why on earth doesn't he use the telephone?" was the caustic question in reply.

Why Snow is White

Water being transparent, rays of light pass through it without being reflected by the water itself. When drops of water are finally frozen into snowflakes they are transformed into a crystal substance with a great many reflecting surfaces, from which the rays of light are thrown back just as a mirror reflects a great deal of the light or color thrown against it.

A mass of snow is whiter than a piece of glass, because the former's numberless crystals that are compactly grouped, thereby greatly increasing the reflective power. Like a mirror snow will reflect the color of any light thrown upon it.

While we are enjoying the mild weather for March, let us remember that something might happen before Spring is firmly established.

General Alderson

(By Sir Max Aitken, official eye-witness with the Canadian expeditionary force.)

IN FLANDERS.—It would be extremely impertinent to say much of the general officer commanding the first force, Gen. Alderson, but I must say he enjoys the most complete confidence of the men in his command. He trusts them and they trust him, and it will be strange if their co-operation does not prove fruitful. And an observer, is at once struck by the accurate knowledge which the general has gained of the whole body of regimental officers under his command. His scents to know them as well by hand and sight as if he had commanded the force for six years instead of six months. And this is a circumstance which is critical moments counts for much.

Gen. Alderson's methods—his practical and sanity methods—may not better be illustrated than by some extracts from the speech which he addressed to the troops just before they went into the trenches for the first time.

"All ranks of the Canadian division. We are about to occupy and maintain a line of trenches. We have some things to say to you at this moment which it is well that you should consider. You are taking over good, and on the whole, trenches. I have visited some, myself. They are in fair shape, but complete are good. Let no man start at first, that we already have had several casualties. You must look for them attached to other divisions. Some of these casualties were unavoidable, and that is war. But I suspect that most of them, a few, could have been avoided. I have heard of cases in which men have exposed themselves without any military object, or perhaps only to gratify curiosity. We cannot lose good men like this. We shall want them all, if we advance, as we will and must advance, if the Germans advance. Do not expose yourself, and do not expose others, unless for a purpose which is necessary at the moment you do it.

"Your trenches, remember, will be provided with means of observing the enemy without exposing your heads. To lose your life without military necessity is to deprive the state of good soldiers. Young and brave men enjoy taking risks. But a soldier's life is not to be thrown away lightly in any way, and especially is also stupid, for whatever the advantage gained, if the German army, the individual shall, whose business it is to inspect, sniper, keep straight, and screened from observation behind the lines, they are always ready to pick off your head over the parapet without giving you will hit their mark.

ADVICE TO "SIT TIGHT."

"There is another thing. Troops new to the trenches always shoot at nothing. They hear a noise, or they will not do it. It wastes ammunition and gives away to no one, and says: 'These are the new-old soldiers.' I do not mean troops new to war say that of the Canadian troops. I say it of troops who have never been when you are shelled all you can sit tight. This is easy action, for there is nothing else to do. You get out you will only get it worse. And if you are shelled, remember to go in. And if the Germans go in, we shall counter-attack. Do not forget out; and that will cost us hundreds of men instead of the few whom we shall lose by sitting tight.

"The Germans do not like the bayonet, nor do the Canadians. Counter attacks. If they get up to you, go in with the bayonet. You have the bayonet, to drive it home. That you will do. I am sure of it. Let us show the Germans if you get among them with the bayonet.

"There is one thing more. My old regiment, the Royal Scots, of which has been since the beginning of the war, has never lost a trench. The army says, 'The West Kents never budge.' I am proud of the great record of the Royal Scots, and I think it is a good thing. I should like to think that it belongs to me; and before long the army will say, 'The Canadians never budge.'

"Lads, it can be left there, and there I leave it. The Germans will never turn you out."

WELL ORGANIZED.

The eye-witness says: "I may, before concluding, point out that the most severe military critics both in Canada and in France, are loud in their admiration of the organizing power, which in a non-military country, was developed in so short a time. The equipment in all its various details, which, in so secondation mean efficiency, has completed in a manner which fills the men with any division at the war. This result was only made possible by the keen, self and unremitting power. These qualities were exhibited in Sandy Hook in the days of war by all whose duties lay in the work of improvisation, and if the Minister of Militia and Defence has left undone any work which the energy has created in the town which I cannot name, he would have to fall rested and to be seeking labors.

"I shall hope, without violating any of the rules which are binding upon me, to give a further article which I am permitted to write, information of the doings of the Canadians, which, if a general knowledge of the negative, will not at least be either misleading or inaccurate."

Militarism is now engaged in quelling a crisis which is deeply engraved in the consciousness of the world; and the war will remain for a long time.

Don't Let Your Skin Absorb Dirt

Many women think their complexions are clean when their skin still contains dust and grime in all its pores. To demonstrate how much of a cream or cleanser besides removing soot, takes with it, Nyal's Face Cream, get a jar or 50c jar and their Free Booklet entitled "Beauty Secrets" and proceed to apply it with proper methods of massage. Wash your face thoroughly and then apply the Cream. After properly working it in, wipe off with a clean soft white cloth and see how soiled and dirty are the accumulations of grime that have sunk into the pores. How refreshed, soft, clean and delicately fragrant your complexion will be left free from irritation.

Nyal's Face Cream is greaseless, oxygenated and refreshing, leaving no shine. Nyal's Face Cream Soap is a delightful preliminary cleanser. 118

"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY

BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

[Illustration]

Made is taken. The report re sounded through the city like a shriek of terror.

To me the news of the capture of Toulouse brought relief rather than dismay. Were not our enemies now at the end? But after every defeat each side strains itself to the utmost for a fresh trial of strength; possibly the fortune of war may turn. Usually the advantage is first on one side and on the other; both sides there is certain terror and certain relief.

Prochu felt himself called upon to arouse the courage of the population by a fresh proclamation, calling upon them with the motto of Bretagne, "What God asks for our country is done." That does not sound quite new to me—I must have heard something similar to it in other proclamations. It did not fail of its effect, however; the people were encouraged, and they were told: Paris must be fortified. Paris is fortress! Could scarcely grasp the thought. This city, the "debtor of the whole civilized race, art and life-loving world; the radiating point of splendor, of fashion, of the most delicate pleasures, fortify itself! that to-must be the aim of the enemy's efforts, the target of bombardment, and run the risk of destruction through fire and hunger! And these people proceeded to the work with gallery of heart, with the zest of pleasure, with self-sacrifice, as if they were birthing to completion the noblest, most useful work in the world. Ramparts to be manned by infantry were built with enormous earthworks were thrown up before the gates, trees were covered, and surmounted by parapets, powder magazines were built, and a flotilla of balloons, carrying cannon, was put upon the Seine. What a fever of activity, what an expenditure of strength and force; what enormous cost of labor and money! If all had only been directed to peaceful ends, devoted to works of true utility—but the purpose of destruction, which had no object except that of strategic checkmate, was honored and rewarded.

To be prepared for a long siege the city was amply provisioned. But it is the experience of all wars that the calculation has existed which has been improvidently exhausted in a single matter of time. Yet fortifications are still erected, they are still provisioned, notwithstanding the mathematical impossibility of maintaining them, in the long run, against starvation.

The precautions were made on an enormous scale. Mills were erected and stockyards filled; yet the hour must come when the cattle would be no ground and the flesh all eaten. But so far, ahead as this no one thought. Long before the last enemy would be driven from the country. The exile must be able to return and be enrolled in the National Guard, and all sounded like joy and hope and inspires even tender hearts—"all for our country,"—but it is one and the same thing.

"You are of Prussian descent," I said to Frederick one day, "how do these expressions of hatred affect you?"

"You asked me the same question in the year 1866, and then I answered as I must do to-day, that I can only deer these demonstrations of hatred, as not a Prussian, but as a man. When I reflect upon the feelings of these people from a nationalistic standpoint, I can only regard them as barbarities—they call it their sacred hatred of the enemy, and this sentiment forms an important incentive to military patriotism. They have taught me to free their country from the presence of the antagonist. They waste no time in reflections. The misfortune is upon them, and every muscle, every nerve is strained to shed it or with reckless self-sacrifice may will go to the extreme limit. Believe me, there is untold power in such a sentiment, and on the 20th of December the bombardment began.

"In the first greeting it was terrible. We had long before old Parisians had left the city, and the inhabitants from which fled could best hear the shells fall in the street, but there was no panic, no disorder, no catastrophe. Rarely could any news from the city have been collected, and that only in fabrics' pigeon and balloons. The reports were most extraordinary. Paris was very fabulous of numbers of all sullies, the fact, that the enemy was about to storm the city, set fire to it and lay it in ashes; or we were assured that rather than see the capital, enemy within the walls the commandant would blow all Paris into atoms.

"It became daily more and more difficult to obtain food. Meat was not to be had; cattle and sheep and horses were exhausted, and the period began when dogs, cats, rats, and mice were a rarity, and finally the beloved elephant at the Jardin des Plantes must be served up. Bread was scarce. People stood in rows, hours at a time, in front of the bakers in order to secure their tiny portion. Disease set in, and, induced by famine. The mortality increased from the ordinary figure to a hundred a week to between four and five thousand.

"One day Frederick came into the house from his daily walk in an unusual state of excitement.

"Take up your note-book, my dear—one historian," he cried. "Now there is wonderful news."

"Which of my books?" I asked. "My Peace Protocol!"

Frederick shook his head.

"Oh, for that the time is past. The mighty thing carried on to a successful conclusion—that is the work of his martial spirit long after it. It has been announced such a store of hatred and revenge that future battle historians must grow therefrom; and upon the other side it has produced for the victors such magnificent revolutionary results that a like harvest may be brought about by their haughty martial spirits.

"What is it that is so important?"

"King William has been proclaimed Emperor at Versailles. There is now really a Germany, one single empire and a mighty one. That is a new event in the world's history. And you easily perceive that with this great result will redound to the honor of the work of war. The two most advanced representatives of civilization on the continent are the ones who from now on for some time to come will cultivate the war spirit—the one in order to receive the blow, the other in order to maintain its position. But up your peace protocols—for a while to come we shall remain under the bloody and iron sign of war.

"I will acknowledge that the union of divided Germany is a desirable thing, and that the recollections by which all these German princes join in offering the imperial crown to the gray-haired victor is inspiring and admirable. Only it is a pity that the union was not brought about in other and more peaceful ways than warlike measures. Religious hatred has always appeared, but national hatreds form the most implacable and cruel.

"In the quiet of the next few days, I will enjoy discussions as to our future.

"With the establishment of peace, which we could now hope for, we might again dare to think of our personal happiness. During the eight days of siege, during the bombardment, no discourse, or thought had passed between us; as the years have drawn on, we could look forward to an old age together—the golden evening of our lives—with sure content.

"In the preceding pages I have turned over with a shudder. It is not to be denied that I have recorded my visit to the battlefield of Sedan, and the scenes of the children week in Orania. I have done it as it was as I had been told: "In case I die first you, Frederick—my all—was exiled by a fanatical mob who, finding a letter written upon his person, accused him of being a spy. He was shot before a so-called patriotic tribunal, and on the 4th of February, 1871, was sentenced to be shot.

EPILOGUE

When I again awoke to consciousness peace had been declared, the Commune had been defeated. For days I attended to my faithful Frau Anna, I lived through in this time without knowing that I was alive. The chapter of my illness I have never known. Those about me tenderly refrained from it, but I believe it was simply insanity.

Dimly I remember that the latter part of the time seemed filled with the sounding of shot- and the falling of bursting shells; probably these sounds were influenced by the actual events, the skirmishes between the commonwealth and the party of Versailles.

Gradually I recovered my reason and realized the circumstances of my profound unhappiness. I did not kill myself, for that the anguish had not killed me, was owing to the existence of my darling. For these I could, I must, live. Even before my illness was at its day, when the terrible event occurred, Rudolf had laid me in my hands, weeping almost as I repeated, "Mother, you will die!" Two little arms were thrown around me, and a sweet, piteous, pleading, childish face looked into mine:

"Mother!"

HOW BUMPS CAUSE LUMPS

When Johnny knocks his elvier mug on the door knob he makes an ugly dent in it; when Johnny knocks his head on the door old knob he expects to find that dented too, and he's naturally surprised to find a big lump instead of a hole.

Funny, isn't it, that the mug should have a dent and Johnny's cranium should have a bump. But it just shows what good care Old Mother Nature takes of us when we get into trouble and bump our heads or knees or noses.

Just as soon as Johnny's head and the knob collide, Mother Nature gets busy, and she pumps a lot of blood into the blood vessels around the "sore spot" and she also sends certain white cells there to soak through the walls of the blood vessels where the bruise is, and when they've all gathered there together they make such a mess that Johnny's mother thinks maybe she'll have to call the family doctor, not knowing, of course, that Mother Nature is already on the job, and that all the extra blood and the extra white cells she begins her work of healing and curing the bruise or cut. If there's a cut there's likely to be germs around, and if there are the little white cells gobble them up; the new blood also gets in its work and almost before Johnny knows it there has commenced and in a very few days the bump disappears and everything is all right, and he is ready for more collisions with door knobs and table corners.

NATURE'S ORCHESTRA

Some Explanations of Why the Wind Sometimes Whistles

Did you ever notice that, although you may feel the force of the wind when you are out in it, you do not hear it whistle unless you are close to a building? This is because the sound is produced according to the same principles as apply to the production of the tones of a pipe organ or any instrument on which the tones are produced by blowing.

In order to make the whistling sounds we hear from the wind it is necessary for it to blow against something. That is why we hear it when we are in the house or some other building.

The whistling is caused by the wind blowing past the sharp edge of some obstacle in its path or building its way around sometimes opening some sharp-edged realstance.

If you blow through a long tube or pipe you will produce no sound, but if there is an opening with a sharp edge near the end where you blow the blowing will cause a distinct sound. It is on this principle that all small whistles, organ pipes and wind instruments of an orchestra are made.

Another way in which the wind produces sounds is by blowing against objects which vibrate.

An illustration of this is the humming volume of sound produced by the wind blowing through a group of telegraph wires, and which may be noted, even when there's not a great force of wind, by placing the ear against a telegraph pole.

The police last night answered a call to the C.N.O.R. station, which resulted in a drunk being taken care of.

VESTRY MEETING POSTPONED
The annual vestry meeting in connection with St. Thomas Church was not held last evening, but was adjourned until Wednesday night.

DRUNKS DISPOSED OF
Jacob Brant had to contribute $5 and costs to the city treasury for being intoxicated and Albert Meath, a stranger, had to pay $3 and costs for a similar offence.

ALLEGED ASSAULT
Last evening the police were called to A. Maidens on South Front street, and the officer upon arrival was informed that the party occupying the house had been assaulted. He was advised to prefer a charge against his assailant.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL
Claude Caverley and Mowat Walt, two young men who reside in the Township of Thurlow, had the morning, before Magistrate Masson, a preliminary trial on a serious charge. The complainant was Mr. B. Ketchenon of Foxboro, father of the girl. The evidence was of such a nature that the Magistrate had no hesitancy in committing the accused for trial at next court of competent jurisdiction. The accused were allowed out on bail, Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown and Mr. W. D. M. Shorey appeared on behalf of the defendants.

DEATH OF SIDNEY LADY
Mrs. Webster Kelley of Sidney Crossing died this morning after an illness of some weeks. Deceased was born in Prince Edward County 87 years ago, but had resided in Sidney, the greater portion of her life, being one of the oldest inhabitants. Mrs. Kelley had been a devout member of White's Methodist Church, Bayside, for many years. She is survived by a son, husband, and two sons, Mr. Wellington Jones of Belleville and Mr. Judson Kelley of Sidney.

GLAD NEWS TO ALL WITH BAD COLDS INSTANT RELIEF— FEW HOURS FOR CURE

NOTHING KNOWN TO SCIENCE IS SO INVARIABLY SURE TO CURE AS "CATARRHOZONE."

JUST BREATHE! CATARRHOZONE

The Ozonated Air Cure, better known as "Catarrhozone" is death to colds.

Its health-laden fumes contain the healing balsams of the pine woods. Soothing and antiseptic, it gives instant relief—stops sneezing, hawking and snuffling.

Mucous and phlegm are cleared away, breathing made easy, and catarrh symptoms entirely disappear. Catarrhozone, simple to use because you breathe it—sure to cure colds and catarrh because it destroys the cause. Doctors say nothing is more scientific; nothing possesses such might of merit in winter ills.

"To clear a cold out of your nostrils and to be able in a minute or two to breathe freely again I can't conceive of anything being better than Catarrhozone," writes J. H. Galvin of Port Lamon, C. R. For any sort of Catarrh, throat trouble or Bronchitis, Catarrhozone is a specific. I know scores of people who use Catarrhozone and all speak wonders of its merits.

Get the complete $1.00 outfit; it does the work sure. Small size 50c; sample size or trial size 25c. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Billy Sunday Coolly Received

Famous Evangelist Fails to Arouse Enthusiasm in New Jersey— Attracted Great Crowds

PATTERSON, N.J., April 5.—"Billy" Sunday packed the new tabernacle at his first two meetings in New Jersey this afternoon and last night, and turned away hundreds of disappointed people. The seven or eight thousand who got into the hall at each meeting, however, did not show the enthusiasm reported at most of Sunday's recent revival meetings.

As a matter of fact, at the afternoon meeting, the coolness was severe. The evening sermon was mainly humorous. The audience was kept rippling with laughter, but it made no great demonstration.

For weeks Patterson has been educated about "Billy" Sunday by the advance publicity campaign. Probably every person in the hall was familiar before hand with the evangelist's athletic pulpit methods and with his slangy and epigrammatic style. All heard of the perfection of Rodeheaver's performances on the trombone. So they came to the tabernacle yesterday prepared to be shocked and steeled for religious emotion. They found Sunday's words and ways rather tame and all almost wholly unmoved, even when he accomplished his crowning feat of leaping upon the pulpit.

Occasionally after some of the climaxes in which his limbs and body collaborated with his sermon, he was applauded, but not with any great fervor. Shortly before two o'clock Sunday came up to the platform by steps which are invisible from the congregation. He was recognized and cheered, a few leaping to their feet to greet him—until he disappeared behind the uplifted end of a big grand piano behind the pulpit.

After he had doffed the thousand dollar overcoat which Mr. John Wanamaker had given him, Sunday appeared in a dress that was impeccable from the most authentic sartorial standard. Nothing more correct was seen on Fifth Avenue. He might have carried an expert tailor and haberdasher in the large travelling outfit which he introduced to the audience. He wore a dark grey morning coat and perfectly cut trousers of black, with a white pin stripe, buttoned over a leather shoes with dull grey uppers, a wing collar with dark four-in-hand tie, with a small diamond scarf pin. From a button hole in his vest a broad gold chain of tiny links depended to his watch pocket. In the evening Sunday made a complete change to a dark double breasted suit with a faint vertical stripe, patent leather pumps which would not have been out of place in a tango palace, and a small dark blue bow tie. At both services he was the best dressed man in the tabernacle. He left the platform perspiring slightly, but unruffled in exterior in spite of the violent exercise which he took during the sermon.

Sunday put words together in picturesque style. He told the audience once, for instance, that if an angel associated with their friends, the angel would have to be "fumigated, bathed, sterilized, washed in common soap, lysol and carbolic acid."

Later on he told them that they let "dictant, old beer-soaked infidels" laugh them out of their religion and that they were a bunch of "fake alarms and excess baggage, and a mean contemptible, scurvilous, scurvy bunch." Whenever he talked of rum or the present state of the old earth he would compose a derangement of pollysyllables and coined words that was forceful and picturesque.

His method of talking on whatever happened to strike his fancy in the manuscript led to frequent changes of the topic of his sermon, and some of the passages in his sermons were obviously inserted for their own sake and not for any relation which they bore to the topic. One of the most effective parts of his evening sermon was a sort of essay in the style of Josh Billings, which he threw in for fun, I hope. It was this:

"There are some people who, when the sing 'Old Hundred' make it 99 because they want their one per cent.

Yes, and I know of a man in the Keith-west who crossed legs with fighting-hugs so that they could work their day and night.

And then there are some men who are so stingy that they would steal flies from a blind spider."

Sunday did not stick to any one period in his choice of slang. "Twenty-thou" probably occurred the most frequently. He spoke of a man giving a cigar "the icy palm, the marble hort and the Klondike."

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application for entry must be made in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent, also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, stony or broken land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—No unauthorized publication of this advertisement will be paid for.—2402.

JACK MARSHALL HOCKEY COACH

Producer of Champion Teams Long Identified With the Stanley Cup —Has His Own System.

Few hockey players can claim more of a bowing acquaintance with the Stanley Cup than Jack Marshall, coach of the Toronto Hockey Club, present holders of the ancient silverware and champions of the world.

Jack can claim more than a nodding acquaintance. He and the cup have knocked around together for pretty nigh the last fifteen years. They've been on the same team four or five seasons. Both have threatened to quit the game several times but they've never succeeded and the year of grace, 1913, finds both still in the hockey ring. Just at present the two are once again together. Jack can take a squint at Lord Stanley's bequest to Canadian hockey when he wakes up in the morning and begins to figure out some of his stories, in need of exercise, advice or the like envelope.

Marshall is nearly as much of a hockey institution as the cup. He started the game away back in the fall of 1894, with the Montreal High School. After that he joined the old Polais St. Charles club of Montreal and for four years stuck to them, turning down even the haughty Montreal Victorias, the aristocrats and founders of the game as we have it to-day, when they invited him to fill a place on their forward line.

In 1899 Marshall took Greeley's advice and went west to Winnipeg and in 1900 came east with the Winnipeg Victories after the Stanley Cup then held by the Montreal Shamrocks. Old time hockey fans will remember that series in the Montreal Arena and how the Vics lost out by a single goal in the odd game of the three. The cup rules at that time demanded the best two of three games. Marshall had cut his foot with a skate and did not play but next year he came back with the Vics and this time had the honor of playing on a Stanley Cup team for the first time.

In the winter of 1901 Marshall came east with the New Westminster lacrosse club, stayed in Montreal and in 1902 the Winged Wheel aggregation put him on another Stanley Cup team by voyaging to Winnipeg and wresting the silverware from the Vics. In 1903 Montreal, with Marshall on their forward line, defended the cup against Winnipeg but lost it to Ottawa. In 1904 Marshall, Jimmy Gardiner, Hyland and several others formed the Wanderers. They won their league title and played one life game at Montreal with Ottawa for the cup but a Stanley Cup series was never completed. Marshall was still with the Wanderers in 1905 living in Toronto and going on a east for the games. In 1906 he remained in Toronto but quit to play.

In 1907 he joined the Montagnards in the Federal League, finished out with Wanderers and was again on a Stanley Cup team with them in 1910 after playing a couple of seasons with Toronto. Between the Wanderers' west through the season of 1910 with last one Marshall will play. He was playing with Wanderers he collided with Fredd'e Lake and nearly lost the sight of his eye.

1913 saw sack out of the game; out for 1913 and all. He acted as referee for nearly the entire season. Then it's a call of the game got to him. Jack "Bobby Kerr" and helped out the Wanderers in the last couple of games. In 1912 he took over the job of managing the Torontos. The Blueshirts had lost the first three games and needed 5 goals badly. Jack again interested setting down and quitting the active end of the game—and he's been quitting ever since, the same nail ever since. Last season he got out on the defence and still showed some of the youngsters how to travel, incidentally bringing Toronto its first Stanley Cup.

Marshall has a system of coaching all his own. He doesn't drive his players but he tells them what they don't know about the game afterwards when the occasion arises and his fog horn voice can be heard at the corner of Queen and Church streets when a game is under way. Jimmy Gardiner is the only player still at it who can compare with the Toronto coach in length of service and even he started the game in senior company a year after Marshall.

SELECTING COCKERELS

Consider Size, Shape, Habits—Keep Only the Best For Breeding.

The selection of male birds should be more rigid than in the case of pullets, for not only is there no demand for mismated cockerels for breeding purposes, but even first-rate birds are not required in anything like such numbers. One male bird only is needed for every six, eight or ten pullets, and thus, however good the birds may be, their sale is naturally very restricted. It should be remembered in selecting breeding stock that the male bird exerts a greater influence upon the external characteristics of the progeny, and thus determines in a large measure the size, shape, color of plumage, and the general appearance. While this is true, however, at the same time he is responsible to a certain degree for the internal qualities, and this point must never be lost sight of when selecting the breeding stock. In choosing a male bird, therefore, size and shape should be specially considered, and he should possess a large frame, be clean and tall on the legs, and active in habits.

The Belgium Indemnities

The intentions of the Germans to exact the Belgium cost be interpreted from the "scraps of paper" with which they are inundating America. Germany's claim of millions perish for want of food and fuel, their actions are corroborations of their policy far more emphatic than these assinine disclaimers and professions of a righteous purpose that come in every mail. Of what use is it to prate of exalted idealism and to speak of the heritage of Goethe, Kant, and Beethoven, when from a land reduced to destitution by Germany's own deed of shame the German treasury requires as inordinate and impossible indemnity?—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

LIVES WITH BULLET IN HEART

Among the many curious cases of wounds which have been investigated by the X-rays at St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, is one in which a German bullet was found imbedded in the muscular part of a soldier's heart.

The radiographer who located the bullet said that it entered the man's left shoulder and burrowed downward. The amazing feature of the case was that after the soldier had been hit he walked for a mile and a half to an ambulance. He did not realize that he was wounded, as not until he saw a few splashes of blood.

The bullet was not removed, and the man lived afterward.

This is by no means an isolated case of a man living, and even of following some occupation, with a foreign body in a vital spot. Two interesting radiographs in the laboratory at St. Bartholomew's Hospital illustrate this. One is of a German bullet imbedded in the right lung. It measures about one and a quarter inches long, and the delineation is perfect. The other shows a number of pieces of shrapnel in the skull cavity at the base of the eye underneath the brain. The shrapnel entered one side of the cheek and penetrated through to the other side.

Civilization at Stake.

The whole content of historic civilization is certainly to be helped to rear it upon the foundations laid by Judaism and by the noblest and the purest of the thinkers of all ages it is at stake. The conceptions of justice and of mercy, of truth and right and law, of freedom and of the individual worth and dignity of man, which are embedded in it and sanctioned by it, are threatened with destruction by any triumph of German militarism and of German Kultur. They are two theories of life and of the universe which stand face to face. Immeasurable consequences flow from either. One or other must triumph and the sword has to decide which it shall be.—London Times.

MET BETTER MAN AND WAS BEATEN

By Jack Johnson

HAVANA, April 8.—"I met a better man and was beaten. I did the best I could and put forth the best that was in me to win, but despite the rain of blows Willard seemed unaffected, though I hit him hard enough and often enough in the first two rounds to floor ten ordinary men.

"One consolation I have is that I proved to my friends that I was in condition. No man could have tried harder than I to win, but I was up against a man who wouldn't crumple when I hit him, and whose right to my jaw took the championship from me."

By Tom Flanagan, Chief Timekeeper for Johnson and Acting Manager

HAVANA, April 8.—"Johnson called me to his side after twenty-third round and said to me: "I am gone. Get my wife away from here."

"Johnson used everything he had up to the twenty-sixth round, trying as no man ever tried before, to land a knockout blow. He battered Willard's body and jaw with terrific punches, but Willard loomed up as a superman, because the blows did not seem to stop or even to daze him. Johnson's terrific punches in this battle were as powerful as those he delivered against Jeffries."

By Jack Curley

HAVANA, April 8.—"I knew Willard would win. He is the greatest heavyweight of all time. No man on earth, of illistic horizon, has a chance with him. Wittard as yet has not reached the crest of his ability."

"Willard will take a brief rest and then will meet any white fighters. He probably will draw the color line."

ALLIES BEGIN FRESH ADVANCE ON METZ

Two Columns Start from Verdun to Clear Germans from Lorraine—Ridges Dominating Course of Orne River Captured at First Blow

PARIS, April 7.—(Special)—Verdun is the base of a new advance eastward that has begun by French armies close to the Lorraine frontier and about forty miles to the crow flies from the great German fortress of Metz. The ultimate object of this movement is to drive the Germans out of western Lorraine, to provide for the surrounding and laying siege to Metz, and to prepare the ground for an invasion of Germany by way of Mezieres and the Middle Rhine. The first move in this campaign was the capturing of the Village of Gussainville and the ridges dominating the course of the Orne River. Progress here may be slow, but each mile gained is of great importance.

A second column in the meantime has begun an advance farther south and made progress in the direction of Mairaver. The French gains in the woods of Ailly and Brule were held without any giving way, and some new German trenches were captured.

The French forces in the forest of Le Petre also recorded additional progress.

Member of 39th Passes Away

Private Harry Driver, who enlisted with the 46th regiment at Lindsay as a member of the Third Contingent, and who came here with the Lindsay Y.P. to join in the mobilization of the 39th Battalion, died last evening at the hospital here from an attack of cerebral meningitis. Deceased was an Englishman by birth and was 37 years of age. Owing to the fact that Private Driver had no home or relatives in this country, the remains were this after noon buried in the Belleville cemetery under military auspices. The burial services of the Anglican Church were held at Tickell & Son's undertaking establishment, after which the body was conveyed to the cemetery for interment.

Mr. Snell Promoted

MONTREAL, April 7.—(Special)—E. W. H. Snell, General Agent, passenger department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at New York, has been appointed to succeed the late Mr. William Stitt as General Passenger agent, eastern lines, at Montreal.

Mr. Snell is a native of Montreal, joined the C.P.R. as clerk to the treasurer in 1890. In 1910 Mr. Snell became Eastern Passenger Agent at New York, and later was promoted to Assistant General Agent, with headquarters at New York.

CLERGYMEN SHOULD PREACH CHRIST, LEAVE WAR ALONE

Princetown Professor Tells Preachers They Should Mind Their Own Business—War Not Indefensible—Nations do not Rush Blindly Into Conflict, but for Definite Ends

NEW YORK, April 6.—War was defended and the clergy were criticized for their world peace propaganda by Philip Marshall Brown, Professor of International law at Princeton University and former Minister to Honduras, before the annual meeting here today of the Alumni Association of Auburn Theological Seminary, at Auburn, N.Y. The speaker held that war was not horrible and indefensible but "the most rational thing that can happen at times."

Professor Brown declared that by denouncing the war the clergymen are in danger of being "thrown off the track."

Continuing he said: "War is not brought on by the evil in men's hearts, will likely go into this war, if she does go into it, from evil passions? Certainly not. She will go into it after careful consideration and to accomplish certain definite ends. It is not from malice that men in war fire at one another, but for a national idea. It is a sin to call war a horror. Men go into war actuated by a wonderful spirit of self-sacrifice."

Clergy Made Mistake

The speaker declared that the clergy had made a mistake in dwelling too much on the propaganda of world peace and that the Ardford of state should be left in the hands of statesmen.

"Any sentimental idea of propaganda that produces results in a way that hurts the whole movement of Christianity," he continued. "Christianity is in the hearts of individual men and you should not try to run the universe when immediate cases are crying for solution. We have had labor warfare at home in West Virginia and Colorado. What have you done to keep the peace there? What are you doing to keep peace in New York, would we intrust that task to preachers? This problem is a hard one to meet, but it must be met in a practical and not in an ideal way. You should preach Christ and leave noble problems of labor and world conflicts. God will work out his plan and we have no right to protest against the great features of His plan."

Zeppelin Flew Over Dunkirk

DUNKIRK, France, April 7.—(Special)—A Zeppelin dirigible balloon appeared over Dunkirk last night, coming in the direction of the sea. The dirigible apparently intended to bombard the shipping in the harbor, but on being sighted by the torpedo boats put about in haste, returned and retreated to the German lines.

GIRL SHOT BY GUARD

CORNWALL, April 7.—(Special.)—Last night while Mrs. Mitchell Oke was returning from Cornwall Island with her three children they were challenged by one of the guards on duty on the Ottawa & New York Railway bridge. The guard, receiving no reply, fired. One of the girls, Sarah Oke, aged 17 years, was wounded in the thigh. As soon as the identity of the party was established all haste was made to render the wounded girl assistance. She was hurried to the General Hospital where the wound was dressed. It is hoped that no serious consequences will follow.

Mrs. Oke claims she did not hear the guard, and the first she knew of his approach was when she saw the flash of the discharge of the rifle.

KILLED IN CHURCH BY TAUBE BOMBS

Twelve Women Victims of German Airmen's Raid at Newkerk

BOULOGNE, April 7.—(Special)—During religious services on Sunday afternoon a German aeroplane of the Taube type dropped bombs on the Newkerk Church near Ypres.

There was a large congregation present, and besides numerous cases of bruises and injuries suffered, twelve women were killed outright.

Abbe Reynaert, who was preaching at the time, was hit by flying debris and badly hurt. He die a few hours later.

Woman Offers Sheldon Home

Thinks He Should Have Home Till Ready to Face World Once More

MONTREAL, April 7.—If he chooses to avail himself of it, there is a home open to Charles D. Sheldon, the former "wizard of finance."

A Westmount woman has offered to take Sheldon into her home and give him shelter and comfort until he is ready to face the business of life once more.

"Home and shelter, and a little money, sum her offer.

This offer does not come from one of Sheldon's former victims, nor from one who made money by "investing" in Sheldon's blind pools. It has been dictated—so she told today—merely by human sympathy for a man, no longer young, who has been through terrible experiences, and is now probably poorer in spirits than he once was.

The offer was placed before Wilks & Burnett, who acted as curators of the Sheldon estate. Mr. Burnett stated that he had not received a call from Sheldon, but would communicate this offer to him as soon as possible.

"It is very kind of the lady," he remarked, "in my opinion, however, it would be a logical thing for Sheldon to return to his own country and his own people. There is nothing for him in Montreal, I should think."

Friends of Sheldon said today that they will give him similar advice.

Dig Tunnel To Make Escape

It Is Discovered by British Though 24 Hours Before Completion

LONDON, April 7.—(Special)—A thirty completed tunnel, through which a hundred German prisoners could have made their escape from the internment camp at Philberds, near Maidenhead, has been discovered by the British military authorities, according to The Daily Telegraph.

The newspaper assert that the tunnel would have been finished in another twenty-four hours. It was thirty feet long, and had been dug beneath a garden and under a high wall. The work of excavation had been carried on at night with the aid of fire shovels.

Canadian Women Respond to Call

LONDON, April 7.—(Special.)—Daughters of the Dominion of all classes and ranks have not been behind their British sisters in responding to an appeal made by the government for women to volunteer for war service. A huge batch of letters is being received at the board of trade offices, not only offering their services, but expressing their willingness to pay their own fares to England. Many of them have a liking for nursing and the manufacture of munitions of war.

TWO SOLDIERS ROBBED

Room Mate Made off With Their Wad During the Night

KINGSTON, April 6.—Two soldiers are today minus their cash. The two spent Sunday at Odessa, and it was while the latter they arrived back in the city. As they could not get into their quarters they took the advice of a stranger outside and went with him to a rooming house where they spent the night. The three slept in the same room. When the soldiers awoke on Monday morning, the stranger was missing and on looking for their money they found that it was missing too. One had $15.80 and the other $5.40.

MACKAY'S GALLANT END

KINGSTON, April 6.—Particulars have been received here by relatives of the death of Corp. W. A. C. Mackay of Renfrew, 2nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, and son of S. A. C. Mackay of the Provincial Treasurer's staff, Toronto. It appears that on March 10 Corporal Ferguson Bremner, also of Renfrew, was shot dead, and in order to recover the body the Bremner company was ordered to keep up a steady fire on the German trenches while Captain Hooper and stretcher-bearers went out to pick up Bremner's body. In this action Corporal Mackay was shot, and died in half an hour. The Renfrew contingent buried the body and marked the spot with a cross and an inscription. Captain Hooper has written the dead lad's mother, telling of his bravery and faithfulness to duty.

Prinz Eitel off On Daring Dash

Officers Gave Newport News Officials a Jovial Farewell

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 7.—Shortly before midnight last night everything appeared to be in readiness for the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich to leave the Newport News shipyard.

Collector of Customs Hamilton, who had visited the Eitel during the morning was given a jovial farewell by the officers. The first officer invited him to stay aboard saying, "I wish you would remain and go with us."

Commander Thierichens it was formed, had been farewell to American Government officials in his visits today to the battleship Alabama and to the customs house. The collector in turn visited the German commander and his officers bon voyage.

At 11 o'clock last night Admiral Beatty, commandant at the Newport news yard, transmitted a radiogram to the customs house here. Collector Hamilton translated at his office detailing developments. Attaches of the office were keeping in touch with the German ship very closely as possible. That no one knew exactly what were the plans of the German commander seemed apparent.

GERMANS CROSS YSER

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 7.—This afternoon's statement says a German detachment with three machine guns succeeded in crossing the Yser canal to the North of Dixmude, but was attacked yesterday and dislodged by Belgian forces. An attack made by us in the vicinity of Etain rendered us possession of Hills No. 249 and No. 221, in addition to the Hautbois and the Hospital farm.

In Eparges we gained ground and maintained our advances, at the same time taking 40 prisoners, including three officers. In the Bandesapt we mined and blew up a German position.

WOMAN PORTERS ON TRIAL

Great Central of England is Making Experiment

LONDON, April 6.—The Great Central Railway Company is making experiments to see if women can not be employed as railway porters to set free men of military age. For the present the employment of women on platforms is being strictly limited, but it is thought they can be employed more extensively on the stations and even at large town stations in attending to passengers. The experiments are the result of suggestions from the general committee of railway managers. Other lines will follow the Great Central's example.

GERMANY HAS LOST HALF HER OFFICERS

LONDON, April 6.—The Havas Agency at Paris has sent out the following despatch:

"An official compilation of the losses of the German officer corps since the beginning of the war to March 15, taken from German official lists, gives a grand total of 31,376 men in killed, wounded and missing. Of these 9,925 were killed. The dead include 43 Generals.

"The total of German officers on a peace footing is given as 52,805, so the losses are considerably in excess of half the effectives."

NEWSPAPERS COMMENT ON AMERICAN NOTE

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 7.—The newspaper Kreuz Zeitung, commenting on the American note to Great Britain says: If the telegraphed summary is correct it means the far-reaching retreat of Great Britain to carry out its blockade measures against American trade even though carrying goods which are not contraband, if they are bound to or from Germany. America thus surrenders the principle that every blockade must be effective in order to be recognized.

ITALY AND SERBIA CONCLUDE A TREATY

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 7.—A telegram from Rome says Italy and Serbia are about to conclude a treaty in which Italy withdraws hostility to Serbia occupying territory on the Adriatic provided it be not fortified. The despatch says if the treaty is signed this week the entry of Italy into the war may be considered imminent.

Terrific Fighting In Yser District

Violent Bombardment at Dixmude —Guns Boom Incessantly at Night

LONDON, April 7.—(Special)—The Daily Telegraph has the following from Boulogne:

During the last twenty-four hours violent fighting has been taking place in the Yser district.

Yesterday evening an extremely violent bombardment occurred at Dixmude, and the guns boomed without cessation all during the night. Little is known of the result of this fighting.

The towns of Ostend, Bruges, Thourout, Courtrai and the surrounding villages are like vast open-air hospitals, and all are packed with Germans wounded.

The troops at Courtrai all have been sent to the eastern theatre of the war. Roulers, Courtrai and Thourout are turning wounded men away, and the town of Bellegem, Capelle and the St. Eloi are rapidly becoming crowded. The wounded arrive as best they can. Some walk in, while others find means of ridding.

A considerable number of British and French wounded are reported among the inmates of these hospitals.

Despite their terrible losses the German troops do not seem to advance an inch. Their generals are determined to take Ypres, but thanks to the Belgian army the enemy's attempts so far have met with nothing but failure.

FORCED TO VACATE VILLAGE

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 7.—Today's German official statement says: The village of Dreigraichen, which was occupied by the enemy yesterday, and which the enemy bombarded with his heaviest artillery and mine blowers, was for this reason abandoned by us last night. Northeast of Verdun the French advance approached only as far as our outer positions. Northeast and southeast of Verdun a series of attacks made by the enemy failed, with extraordinarily heavy losses. In the Combres Hills two French battalions were destroyed by our fire.

STRONG ATTEMPT TO FORCE DARDANELLES

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 7.—Apparently another attempt to force the Dardanelles is under way. An official announcement from Constantinople says a cruiser and a torpedo boat were sunk by shells from the forts on Monday. No official information has come to London or Paris.

HAVE RETIRED FOR SIXTEEN MILES

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 7.—A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says a semi-official communication throws discredit on the Austrian official bulletins which are designed to pacify public opinion and are evidently misleading. For example, the Austrian admission of a "small retreat," in reality covered a retirement of sixteen miles.

Illinois Saloons Out of Business

CHICAGO, April 7.—(Special)—Three new dry counties were established today through local option elections in Illinois, bringing the total to 52.

Added to the 52 counties previously without saloons—55 out of the 102 counties in Illinois now are in the prohibition territory. Nearly 100 saloons were put out of business out of 330 involved in the elections.

REPUBLICAN LANDSLIDE IN CHICAGO ELECTIONS

CHICAGO, April 7.—(Special)—In the most exciting election that Chicago ever has had, William Hale Thompson, Republican, was elected Mayor of Chicago yesterday by a plurality of about 125,000.

Robert M. Sweitzer, the Democratic candidate, was never in the running.

In the 35 wards of Chicago there were eligible to vote 702,106 men and women. Early returns showed that more than 85 per cent. of the registered vote was cast. The total vote was more than 600,000.

More than 200,000 women cast their ballots during the day, and the votes of the women played no small part in the triumph of the Republican candidate. Thompson received great support from the women in almost every ward in the city.

RUSSIANS SEIZE NEW HIGHWAY IN HUNGARY

Turned Weight of Forces Upon Rostok Pass and Routed Austrians—Attack of Austrians on Other Sections to Relieve Pressure Defeated

PETROGRAD, April 7.—(Special)—In their fight for the roads to Hungary the Russian armies have started on a systematic expulsion of the Austrians from the whole mountain chain of the Carpathians, and, having captured Lupkow and Uzuk Passes, they turned their embattled strength against Rostok Pass, where they scored a series of their most signal successes Sunday and Monday. Here they captured the main sector in the southern slope of the principal mountain chain, and their advance guard crossed the southern slope of this chain and occupied the Villages of Smolnik and Orsanzka.

In the hope of checkmating the Russian advance the Austrian forces delivered conflict attacks on certain sections of the Russian front, but all these movements were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy. Twenty Austrian officers and 1500 men were captured by the Russian forces in the course of a day's fighting. The Austrians are now retreating as best they may, and are burning their bridges and provision depots to retard the Russian progress.

Fighting elsewhere in Poland and Galicia has been confined to partial engagements in the environs of Mariampol, Lodvino, and Kalwarya, on the Niemen front, and the usual artillery cannonades, fusilades and reconnaissance operations in the other sectors.

Smooth Canadian Coins are Good

DETROIT, April 7.—(Special.)—Recent objections by Detroiters to the acceptance of Canadian silver has been completely removed by assurance to merchants and bankers that all silver coin, including the smooth pieces looked upon with so much suspicion, will be redeemed at par.

The quick action of the Canadian government in this matter is due largely to the efforts of Wellington Boulter, 204 Virginia Park former mayor of Pictou, Ont., and a prominent Canadian. The action of the Detroit United Railway in refusing to accept the Canadian silver aroused the patriotic spirit of Mr. Boulter, who considered such action a reflection upon the stability of his government.

He took up the matter with B. R. Hepburn, member of parliament from Prince Edward county, Mr. Boulter's home, and the member consulted with the minister of finance. The government immediately assured the railway company that the money would be redeemed at par.

Regarding the redemption of Canadian money particularly the smooth coin, E. V. Illsley, manager of the Standard bank of Canada, Windsor, has written the following to Mr. Boulter.

"All Canadian silver coinage not mutilated is redeemable at the present time as far as Detroit banks or any bank includes the Detroit United railway and all others. Smooth silver, however, has to be parceled up separately by the banks receiving it, and so labeled, before it is sent across to Canada for redemption. In so far as the banks are concerned, therefore, smooth silver is as redeemable as perfectly good coinage. There is no objection on it, but if a corporation like the Detroit United railway, handling large sums of this smooth silver were asked to parcel it separately, it should, and doubtless would, do so. The company might also be asked by its bank to pay the cost of expressing the silver to Toronto for redemption, but that is a matter solely between the company and its Canadian bankers. Mutilated coin is redeemable at a discount of 25 per cent. All countries charge approximately the same for redeeming their mutilated coinage."

SHOULD HAVE 100,000

KINGSTON, April 7.—(Special.)—Prof. Lorne W. Shuttleworth, of the Military College, who lost his sight in the South African war, declared in an address today to the Kingston Canteen' Association that the Canadian press had fallen short in its duty in not urging upon the Government the sending of more troops to fight beside those of the motherland. He holds that Canada is not doing its duty unless it maintains at least 100,000 men constantly on the firing line.

HUGE WAR BOOTY TAKEN BY RUSSIANS

PETROGRAD, April 7.—(Special.)—All the Austrian prisoners from Przemysl have now been sent to the interior of Russia. Altogether they comprised nine Generals, 2,207 officers and 112,890 soldiers. In addition there were 400 officers' and wounded persons whose condition prevented their transport, and who are still retained in the hospitals at the front.

"The inventory of the enormous quantity of war material captured at Przemysl has not yet been completed, but the capture includes over 900 guns, of which a large number are in perfect order.

"Daily we discover new depots of munitions of war. Many guns and rifles with their accessories, were thrown into the river by the Austrians. We are taking steps to recover them."

HYDRO-AEROPLANES DROP BOMBS ON SMYRNA FORTS

LONDON, April 7.—(Special.)—The Reuter Telegram Co., has received a despatch from its correspondent at Athens, saying that British warships again bombarded the forts at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna, Monday, according to the report of the captain of the Greek steamer Arcadia. Hydroplanes of the allies dropped a number bombs, the captain declares, and the Vali of Smyrna ordered Europeans to leave the town.

A British hydroplane first reconnoitred over the Smyrna forts Saturday morning, dropping several bombs, according to reports brought here. A destroyer passed in close to the harbor while warships engaged the forts at long range.

Later in the day a British battleship accompanied by several destroyers, convoying a transport, appeared off Chicos Island and bombarded the Turkish towns of Kastro and Diodelfia. The transport carried several seaplanes and several thousand troops, according to reports received here. When last seen the was steaming toward the entrance to Smyrna Gulf, convoyed by the battleship and destroyers.

Within The Military Circle

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

All articles and notes under this head are passed by the commanding officer of the 39th Regiment and authentic in every particular.

BELLEVILLE

Col. Ketcheson, commanding officer of the 49th Hastings Rifles, has up to the present time recruited 305 members for the 3rd contingent. Of this number 168 have been turned over and accepted as members of the 39th Battalion, mobilized here. The remainder are being drilled by Sergt. Douch.

A number of recruits for the 39th Battalion have been secured at Hancroft and Maynooth and will be brought here for instruction.

No less than eleven officers of the 49th regiment have volunteered their services for overseas service.

At the present time there is no enlisting going on here for the 39th battery, owing to the fact that there are no vacancies, the batteries in this locality being up to full strength.

Acting Promotion: To be Acting Sergeant—Pte. E. Greer, from 6-1-15.

On and after April 7th the "fall in" will sound at 9 a.m. and parade will remain out until 12 noon, with half hour's intermission.

Lieut. C. O. C. Fenton is permanently posted to "D" Company.

Lieut. C. H. N. Spafford and Lieut. E. R. Wright are posted to "C" Company, pending approval.

It is published for information that the hotel known as "The International" of this city is placed out of bounds for all troops, and military police will be detailed to see that this order is carried out.

Acting promotion: To be acting Pioneer Sergeant: No. A12160 Pte. W. Edwards, 25-3-15.

No. A12816 Pte. A. C., K. Strickland, 4th C. Company, is appointed Acting Pioneer from this date.

KINGSTON

A battery commander's course will be started by the R.S.A. on April 19th and will run until the 26th. This course is a "brush-up" course for officers who are commanding batteries for overseas service. The next regular class of the R.S.A. will open on April 26th.

The Army Medical course for Lieutenants commenced at the local armouries this morning. So far the following officers have applied for the course and have reported: Lts. Stratton, Nappane; Hamilton, Brockville; Embrey, Bancroft; Thompson, Calvary; Cotman, Cobden, Ont; Disnell, Mallorytown, Ont.

Queen's College has decided to play its part in the organization of a company for the 38th Battalion. The company will be called the "Universities" company and will be made up of men from Queen's and McGill. Recruiting began today at the college, and will continue tomorrow. Capt. Campbell and Prof. Morison have charge of the recruiting of the corps.

Twenty-nine of the 35 nurses needed for the staff of Queen's College stationary hospital corps have been selected and recommended, which leaves just six more to complete the number necessary.

CIVIC GOVERNMENT IN EXTENDED SESSION

Large Volume of Business Brought Before the Body and Disposed of—Council to Co-Operate With Militia for the Betterment of the Soldiers—Several Recomendations Adopted

A regular meeting of the City Council was held last evening at which Mayor Panter, Aldermen Wallbridge, Woodley, Platt, Smith, Duckworth, Earl, McCurdy, McFee and St. Charles were in attendance.

During the session, which lasted until 11 o'clock, considerable business was transacted. A deputation of officers from the 39th Battalion was present to ask the Council to assist in every way possible to discourage drunkenness and the indiscriminate manner in which liquor is supplied to the soldiers. Other matters were attended to in this interesting session.

After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc., Ald. McFee in the chair.

Col. Preston, the commanding officer of the 39th Battalion, addressed the Council. He said the officers desired to express to the members of the Council and the citizens of Belleville their hearty appreciation of the many acts of kindness extended to them. There were two matters he desired to speak about. This afternoon a party was with a waggon standing in front of the barracks selling soft drinks and some articles of food. The man had a license to sell on the street, but the officers were of the opinion that he should not be allowed to stand in front of the barracks door. At the barracks it is intended to have a dry canteen, and the profits, if any, will go into the regimental fund for the benefit of the men. He would respectfully suggest that the Council prohibit the sale of such goods in close proximity to the barracks. Another matter he would like the Council to co-operate with the officers in regard to was the sale of liquor to the men. We have, said the Colonel, too much drunkenness to contend with. He would request the Council to unite with the officers to see that the regulations are adhered to by the liquor sellers of the city. It has been a fact that on Sunday, soldiers have been supplied with bottles of liquor and several were supplied on Good Friday, when all places were supposed to be closed up.

Col. Smart endorsed what Col. Preston had said, and he hoped the Council would co-operate in the matter.

Mayor Bywater said Col. Preston had said all that was necessary.

Mayor Panter said the members of the Council were delighted to have the officers address them. He had no doubt but that the Aldermen would cooperate with the officers for the well being of the men of the battalion.

Col. Preston thanked the Mayor for his remarks and the promise made.

The reports of the various committees were then taken up and the accounts were passed without discussion. The following recommendations were disposed of—

That the city of Belleville become a member of the Hydro Electric Railways Association of Ontario, and the fee for the same be paid—Carried.

That the request of Benjamin Sanford for the privilege of operating a lunch wagon on the streets of Belleville be granted.

Ald. Woodley suggested that the request of the officers of the 39th battalion in regard to this matter be considered in.

Ald. Wallbridge moved that the recommendation be referred back to the Executive Committee to report upon.

This motion prevailed.

That the chairman of Printing and Stationery, and the chairman of Light get prices regarding the printing of the 1914 and 1915 assessment rolls and report at the meeting of the Council.

Ald. McCurdy said that tenders had been received from two printing concerns in the city, but one had not had time to consider the matter. He suggested that this matter be laid over until next Council meeting.

Mayor Panter—What printing concern has not tendered?

Ald. McCurdy—The Cherry Press.

Ald. Duckworth and Ald. Earle were in favor of the time being extended, and the former made a motion to that effect.

Ald. Smith moved in amendment that the chairman of Printing have the assessment printed after the tender of the third party had been received.

Mayor Panter said he would object to this being done. It should be done by the whole Council.

Ald. Woodley—The entire Council should have a voice in the matter and he was in favor of having the matter settled tonight.

Ald. St. Charles said that he would vote for the matter being settled tonight.

Ald. Woodley moved in amendment to the amendment that the tenders be opened and settled tonight. Upon the vote being taken the amendment to the amendment prevailed.

That the chairman of Public Works request the solicitor to prepare a by-law for the construction of sewers to be constructed in Belleville according to plans and specifications of the city engineer.—Carried.

That the Gas Department be instructed to leave the gas standards on and south of Dundas street where they are.—Carried.

That tenders be called for the cutting of the market bells for one year from April 20th, all tenders to be in hands of the chairman by 12 noon, Thursday, April 15th, 1915.

A recommendation that the phone in the home of the Chief of the Fire Department be discontinued, was discussed.

Ald. St. Charles thought the phone should be left in the Chief's house and the engineer of Fire Underwriters said it was necessary.

Mayor Panter said it was necessary for the Council this year to curtail every expense, if not the tax rate will be burdensome.

Upon a vote being taken the recommendation was adopted.

A communication was read in reference to a convention of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association to be held in this city on Friday, 21th inst.

The communication was on motion concurred in.

AN EXTRA GRANT.

A request was made by the Woman's Hospital Association for an additional $200 for indigent patients, and this extra demands made upon this fund, on the motion the matter was referred to the Executive Committee for consideration.

SEWAGE.

Mr. S. Marson, City Solicitor, wrote the Council, detailing the work necessary to be done before a by-law is passed, with gas in the mains in Belleville.

The matter was referred to the Public Works Committee.

At this stage of the proceedings the Council adjourned for a few minutes in order to hold a committee meeting.

When the Council resumed a representation was presented by-law in the case of B. Sanford, that he be allowed to sell soft drinks, etc., upon the premises that he is prohibited from selling on Pinnacle street between Dundas and Wharf streets.

The recommendation was adopted.

The committee rose and reported.

The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. St. Charles asked if a person living outside the city could be supplied with gas if the main run to the city line, and they would dig from the city line to their own property at their own expense.—Referred to the Gas Committee.

Ald. Smith—Has anything been done in reference to the petition for a granolithic walk on Queen street.

These petitions have not yet been reported upon by the assessor or other officials.

INTRODUCTION OF BYLAW.

Ald. Wallbridge introduced a bylaw to repeal Bylaw No. 1964 relative to the appointing of auditors.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on Bylaws.

The time of the Council was extended for an hour.

Ald. Woodley was voted to the chair in the committee of the whole on bylaw.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted, and the bylaw was passed through its various stages and numbered 1977.

After some discussion in regard to procuring new auditors, it was decided to leave the matter to the Executive Committee for consideration.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Wallbridge moved, seconded by Ald. McFee, that this municipality heartily endorses the Hydro Electric Railway programme as outlined in the memorial presented to the Hon. Mr. Hearst and the Provincial Government on Friday, March 26th, 1915, by a deputation representing the majority of the municipalities of Ontario; and that as the construction of said electric railways will not only give transportation facilities, that at the present time are entirely inadequate to the needs of the country, but will also furnish an easy and inexpensive means of supplying parts of the Province with hydro-electric light and power that would otherwise be largely denied those advantages, we respectfully urge that your Honorable Government favorably consider the request contained in the said memorial, and grant to such roads a subsidy of $3500.00 a mile; and that as the memorial sets forth that any subsidy granted will not be needed for some time, and will only be required as roads are constructed, we respectfully urge that your Honorable Government make a pronouncement on this question as speedily as possible, in order that a part of the work may be proceeded with at once, believing that this will do much toward restoring public confidence and relieving conditions of the present unemployment, and that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. W. H. Hearst, M.P.P., Premier of Ontario, the member of the Legislative Assembly for this riding, and to the Secretary of the Hydro Electric Railway Association of Ontario.

The motion was carried.

A motion prevailed that the Mayor issue a proclamation calling upon all citizens to co-operate with the civic authorities in reference to the sale of liquor, etc., to the men and to assist in maintaining the law and of discipline.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Under this head Mayor Panter asked the Public Works committee to meet and consider the West Belleville sewer system and the cost of presenting the same to the electors; and also that a meeting of the Executive Committee to consider the question of selecting auditors be called in the near future.

It was decided to have a meeting early next week.

Council adjourned.

THE CONGESTION FROM A BAD COLD LOOSENED UP IN ONE HOUR

IF RUBBED ON AT NIGHT YOU'RE WELL NEXT MORNING

NERVILINE NEVER FAILS

When that cold comes, how is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat vigorously with "Nerviline." Rub it in good and deep. Lots of rubbing can't do any harm. Then put some Nerviline in the water and use it as a gargle; this will ease the cough, cut out the phlegm, assist in breaking up the cold quickly.

There is no telling how quickly Nerviline breaks up a hard hacking cough, eases a tight chest, relieves a pleuritic pain. Why there isn't another liniment with half the power, the penetrative qualities, the honest merit that has made Nerviline the most popular American household liniment.

A large 50c. bottle of Nerviline cures ills of the whole family, and makes a doctor's bill small. Get it today. A large size is more economical than the trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

SPORT AND GUNNERY

Admiral Scott Made Shooting a Matter of Competition

When the war broke out, and for some considerable time before, heavy gun shooting was the sport par excellence of the navy, both "Gun-layers' Test" and "Battle Practice" shooting is astounding amount of enthusiasm and competition—and also betting—and Sir Percy Scott is the man, above all others, who was responsible for it. Twelve years ago, gunnery was a dead matter, and target practice a nuisance. On February 2nd, 1903, Captain Percy Scott, C.B., delivered a lecture at the United Service Institution of Hongkong, on "The Fighting Efficiency of a Fleet which is Dependent on the Straight Shooting of the Guns." Out of that lecture arose a host of questions from the officers present, and one was in connection with creating interest and the need of competition. Captain Scott replied: "Interest entirely on competition in the past." In Malta harbor you never did the weekly sail drill without one or two men being killed in their anxiety to be first ship in the fleet—that same spirit still lives. I only want to introduce it into gunnery—we ought to make use of the national vice, namely 'sport,' and to create the same ambition among our officers and men in shooting as existed in sail drill."

SIR PERCY SCOTT

He saw his ideal come to fruition before he retired, but it was not without a considerable amount of unpleasantness. When, in February, 1903, he was appointed to the new created post of Inspector of Target Practice, he found himself faced with a dead weight of opposition and indifference, but so vigorously did he prosecute his office that he received the sobriquet of "The cursed Sport," which he took quite unlikely, and at last had the satisfaction of seeing the whole service as keenly enthusiastic over good shooting as he was himself. Now he has been recalled from the Retired List to lead a band with the present race.

To remove the stains on leather surfaces apply the white of an egg with a sponge, allow to stand a minute then polish with soft cloth.

DEATH ROLL

DEATH AT ROSLIN

On Wednesday March 24th the death occurred of Mrs. Port Cooke, wife of Mr. Port Cooke, at her home, near Roslin. Deceased was in her 48th year Mrs. Cooke was a good woman, and had the friendship and esteem of many She was a member of the Methodist church, having joined the Thomasburg church before her marriage. It was her wish to have her sermon preached there, and that wish was willingly granted. Although of late years not enjoying the best of health she was only confined to her bed one day. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Crookshanks, and was largely attended. The bearers were: Messrs Joseph Chisholm, Fred Ketcheson, D. Howgs, Chas. Chapman, W. Pitchett and C. Stark. Besides a sorrowing husband, she leaves to mourn her loss, a daughter, Mrs. Will Vanalten, Belleville, Master Clarence and Miss Blanche at home, who have the sympathy of neighbors and a large circle of friends.

MELVILLE.

What is more tempting to the palate than that most delicious sweet—maple sugar? Young folks and old come with delight the season that gives us this richest delicacy. On Thursday evening, April 1st, the young people of Melville Sunday School allured visitors from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, by announcing a treat of this delectable sweet. From Robbin's Mills, from Burr's, from Bowerman's from Wellington and Rose Hall came young people to accept this invitation. Beside serving refreshments of buns and maple sugar, a programme was given, Rev. W. R. Archer, Wellington presiding. Patriotic choruses by the young people, a solo, "The Comrades of Miles Standish," by Miss Annie Chase, and a vocal duet, "Easter Song," by Mr. Willie Zufelt and Miss Chase were among the musical numbers. Miss Alice Harston in Recitations, "Entertaining the New Minister," was enthusiastically applauded. Mr. Ralph Adams gave a comic reading in his usual entertaining style, and Miss Frances May in recitation, "The New Green in the Church," was heard with delight. Mr. Jas. Locklin, the superintendent of the Melville Sunday School tendered Rev. Mr. Archer the thanks of the assembly for so kindly and readily filling the position of chairman. The singing of the National Anthem brought a most delightful evening to a close.

Mr. W. H. Anderson and Mr. D'Arcy Young made a business trip to Belleville on Thursday.

With the church bright with blooming plants, suggestive of the awakened nature and spiritual life, an impressive Easter service, breathing perceptibly the spirit of the Easter message, was held on Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Weir, of Albert College, occupying the pulpit. The Easter anthem, "Up From the Grave He Arose," rendered by the choir, was most appropriate, and a vocal solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," by Miss Dorothy Rockwell, Napanee, completed a most impressive service.

On Monday evening, April 5th, Miss Gladys Chase, the bride-to-be, who is soon to resign the position of daughter in her father's home to assume the responsibilities of wife in a new home of her own, was most pleasantly surprised when about forty young people, intimately associated with her in church and social circles, assembled at the home of her parents, Mr., and Mrs. Jas. H. Chase, Melville, to shower her with many useful gifts. A pleasant evening was passed in music and social intercourse, after which refreshments of cake, sandwiches and cocoa were enjoyed. Miss Annie Chase and Mr. Will Zufelt serving. In the wee small hours the young people departed, leaving the bride-to-be the memory of a last pleasant evening spent with her young associates in the days of her girlhood, and also the best wishes for her future happiness in the new life in which she is about to enter.

LETTERS FROM ABROAD

Dear friends of Grier St. School!

Many thanks to you all for gift of paper clippings. Am writing from the trenches, so kindly excuse pencil. Germans are quiet today, although they managed to damage one of our machine guns. Had a fair fall of snow last night, but weather is improving now. We have all the shelling we want, and the town in which we are billeted is often shelled. We see many ruined towns and many refugees. In some places the trenches are only one hundred yards apart, and remarks are often exchanged with Fritz, generally ending in rifle shots. Good-bye all.

Your sincere and grateful friend,
M. VANDERVOORT.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO OLD AGE, WOMEN ARE HELPED

At the first symptoms of any derangement at any period of life the one safe, reliable, helpful remedy is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Tens of thousands of women have taken it with unfailing success for every conceivable illness and disease of a womanly nature. It is a woman's temperance medicine and its ingredients are published on a wrapper.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a true friend to women in times of trial and at times of pain. For headaches, backaches, faint flashes, nervous condition, bearing down sensation, "all gone" feeling, dizziness, fainting spells, lassitude and exhaustion women should never fail to take this tried and proven medicine.

Prepared from nature's roots and herbs, it contains no alcohol nor narcotics, nor any harmful ingredient. Medicine dealers everywhere have it on hand in either tablet or liquid form at all times. If you want a specialist in women's diseases to diagnose your case absolutely free of charge, write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., today.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little Liver Pills. These tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules—the smallest and the easiest to take. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick headache, Bilious Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented and relieved.

SEPARATE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

While Continental newspapers are discussing the rumor that Austria, and even Turkey, are attempting to open peace negotiations without consulting Germany, Russia is busy forcing her army onward to the Austrian frontier, with a view to securing unlimited scope for operations within the enemy's country.

As the military situation is developing, it is a question if Russia could afford to grant Austria a separate peace except on terms which would virtually require her to enter the alliance against Germany. For one thing, this would destroy the hope of enlisting Italy in the war, and it might even throw Italy into the hands of Germany.

A more definite reason for refusing Austria a separate peace, however, is that the Austrian frontier has proved to be the weak portion of the line, where the most successful blows can be dealt Germany as well as Austria. Germany has been obliged to detach troops from her own frontiers to aid in the defence of Austria. It is probable that the recent Russian progress in the north is due to the fact that more German troops have been withdrawn from that section to reinforce the armies in the Carpathians. With her great masses of infantry and cavalry, and comparative weakness in artillery, it is to Russia's advantage to lengthen out the line as much as possible. Germany, on the other hand would benefit by having a shorter front to defend. If Austria were allowed to drop out on a basis of neutrality Germany's eastern front would be shortened to the limits of her own territory, where she is heavily entrenched and backed by a network of strategic railroads. That front could only be broken by a very costly direct attack, and very likely could not be pierced at all without a superiority in artillery, which Russia has small hope of attaining.

Russia is now trying to work around this front by crossing the Carpathians and moving on through Hungary, Moravia and Bohemia toward the southern frontier of Germany. Here Germany is less strongly fortified. Moreover, if compelled to defend her southern as well as her eastern and western boundaries, Germany would have to stretch her lines until they were very thin almost everywhere. Besides, the Czehs of Moravia and Bohemia are of the Slav race and hate the Germans and Austrians. They probably would go over to the Russian side if Russian troops could once enter their country.

For these reasons it must be the object of the Allies to crush and break Austria, rather than to grant her a separate peace and neutrality for the remainder of the war. This is the apparent object of the Russian drive through the Carpathians.

FEDERAL AUTHORITY OVER FISHERIES

Representative Linthicum, of Baltimore, has introduced into the United States Congress a measure to deprive several states of their present control of their fisheries, and to vest this authority in the federal government. The bill has not yet been passed, but its ultimate success is assured, if only by the issuance of an executive order, which secures, temporarily, its main objects. The proposed legislation is not general in scope, its specific aim being to correct abuses connected with the Chesapeake Bay fisheries. Hitherto the individual states, have had control, but have failed to exert it with any degree of uniformity or efficiency. The natural result has been a rapid decrease in the productivity of these fishing waters.

The situation is one of interest to Canadians. The experience of both Canada and the United States proves that, if natural resources are to be wisely administered, the limits of federal and provincial or state jurisdiction must first be clearly defined. In both countries this has been strikingly exemplified by difficulties which have cropped up in connection with the control of fisheries, and, in Canada, the subject has caused long and tedious litigation. Mr. Linthicum's bill forms part of the wider movement to secure for the United States what Canada already has, viz.,—sufficient federal authority to safeguard fisheries and other resources from depletion.

ARDOUR DAY

In Canadian schools it has been the custom for years to observe Arbour Day in a greater or less degree. This custom should receive increased attention from educational bodies and the general public, for this country has a great need for the planting of more trees and shrubs, both in school and residential grounds. Canada is so dependent on her forests that any measures which may be taken to extend the knowledge of the pupils regarding trees and the need for their protection will serve a useful purpose.

In each of the provinces, with the exception of British Columbia, provision is made for the celebration of Arbour Day. In most provinces it is a public school celebration only, the regulations requiring the observance by the planting of trees and shrubs in school grounds. It should be made a public holiday, instead of being confined to the schools, and the scope of its observance should include the annual clean-up, particularly as it is usually celebrated early in May. In this way, more general interest would be aroused in the work, and greater results secured, from an arboreal or wolf as an artistic and sanitary standpoint.

GERMANS RUSHING MEN TO CARPATHIANS

PARIS, April 6.—A despatch from a Geneva news agency says that Swiss traffic with Germany has been delayed considerably since Friday on account of the fact that the German railroads are being occupied fully in the transportation of troops from Flanders to Austria by way of Munich. These troops probably will be employed to reinforce the Carpathian front. It is also said that large bodies of Austrian troops have been withdrawn from the Tyrol near the Italian frontier.

Dog Betrayed German Sniper

Food-Carrying Canine Revealed a Marksman in Pit Using Maxim Silencer

(Montreal Gazette)

How a German sniper enjoyed a brief immunity from death or capture by the using of a maxim "silencer" and how the betrayal of his whereabouts in a little pit between the contending forces was innocently effected by his little dog which had been in the habit taking him food, is described in a letter by Mr. C. D. B. Whitby, of The Montreal Gazette business staff, now Private Whitby with the Royal Montreal Regiment at present somewhere in Flanders.

"The ways of the German snipers are also very devious," writes Private Whitby. "One, for instance, gave this regiment a particularly lot of trouble. He had wormed his way out into no man's land, a rifle pit in "no man's land' between the opposing trenches and, with a rifle fitted with a silencer, aniped merrily at relief and working parties. Food was brought to him by a white and tan dog. It was the dog that led to his undoing. Now the orders are to shoot any of the canine species seen around the firing line. Sniper hunting has been rather a pastime with the R.M.R., a reward offered by the colonel for each of the pests brought in dead or alive helps to stimulate interest."

Canada's Fire Losses

With a fire loss averaging over two million dollars per month, or sixty-seven thousand dollars per day, the fire situation in Canada has reached a stage where some steps must be taken toward discovering the cause and finding some means for a large reduction of this annual toll. Fire commissioners agree that a large proportion of fires are of deliberately incendiary origin, that a still larger proportion are of unconsciously incendiary, and that a not inconsiderable number are the result of carelessness or neglect. The number of fires resulting from causes beyond human control constitutes almost a negligible quantity in the year's total. How this situation should be handled is a difficult question. The law prescribes punishment for arson, but, under present conditions, and with the machinery available, it is exceedingly difficult to secure convicting evidence. The insurance companies, being private corporations, cannot be expected to prosecute; unless the amount at issue is sufficiently large and the evidence is conclusive, it is cheaper for them to pay the loss than to contest it.

The police departments of our cities are not interested in fires unless it be shown that there are suspicious circumstances surrounding the occurrence. Even should this be demonstrated, there are no trained men connected with the police forces qualified to thoroughly investigate the circumstances. The Ontario Legislature at its session in 1914 passed an Act to appoint a fire marshal, whose duty it would be to study the question of the annual fire loss. He would also have power to investigate fires which were deemed of suspicious nature and to prosecute where necessary. No further action has yet been taken under the legislation, and the appointment of a fire marshal is still in abeyance.

Drug Clerk Tells How To Cure Indigestion
Recommends to Sufferers the Best Stomach Remedy in Belleville today.
"It is a wonder some of us have stomachs left," remarked a well-known drug clerk recently. "While all drug stores sell a score or more of so-called remedies for which there is a wide demand, most of them are just purgative pills which aids digestion of the food only in so far as stomach is present time. They have no curative or strengthening effect on the stomach at all, and of course do not reach or cure the cause. So the same people keep on coming here and buying and using them until they are real chronic dyspeptics. When anyone really asks my advice, I swear by and recommend ordinary bisurated magnesia, which doesn't digest the food at all but acts as an antiacid and sweetens the sour, fermenting contents of the stomach. That stops the pain, heart-burn, sour rising, wind, bloating, faintness, etc., in just a few minutes, and the stomach digests its food without help or trouble, which is the proper way."
"Doctors make mistakes sometimes, too," he continued. "My own aunt had all kinds of trouble with her stomach for years. She bought and used several styles of digestive pills but got worse right along, as naturally she would. Finally she went to a doctor, who nearly scared her to death by telling her she had cancer of the stomach. She came to me with his prescription and told me what he said. I thought it was nonsense. I sent her to another doctor who at once said she was well and he didn't tell her anything, but just gave her this same thing, bisurated magnesia. She took it two weeks and fever has had any stomach trouble since and that's three years ago. She's my own aunt and I know this is a fact. Yes, a lot of bisurated magnesia is sold in Belleville. All the druggists have it, I suppose, and all you take is a teaspoonful after every meal. It's all right."
Montreal News: "The gentle Kaiser is quite capable of lobbing up serenely one of those days and disavowing any knowledge of the submarine murders. That would be characteristically 'smart' German 'diplomacy.'"

EDITOR DIES IN HARNESS

CARLETON PLACE, April 5.—Samuel James Allen, one of the oldest and most respected business men of this town, died here of Bright's disease on Saturday evening. The deceased was a member of the firm of W. H. and S. J. Allen, who conducted the Carleton Place Herald here since 1883, and had not missed taking part in the issue of the paper during this long period until three weeks ago, when illness first enforced his retirement from active service. The deceased is survived by his wife and two daughters, Hazel and Helen, at home, and Albert Tenley, of the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa. He was a member of the Orangemen, the Chosen Friends and I. O. F., being a financial secretary of the latter. The burial services will be conducted to-morrow from his late home to Pine Grove Cemetery.

A Clean Mouth Promotes Health

Oral hygiene is quite properly focusing the attention of the medical profession as well as the laity. A noted authority is quoted as saying: "There is not one single thing more important in the whole range of hygiene than hygiene of the mouth."

In the process of sterilizing the mouth—destroying disease germs—dependence may be placed on 'Absorbine, Jr.' This germicidal liniment has made good under severe laboratory tests and its use as a germ destroyer and preventive is becoming quite general. It is unlike the usual germicide because it is non-poisonous and is safe and harmless to use.

Prof. J. D. Hird, biological Chemist, Washington, D.C., after an extensive laboratory examination of Absorbine, Jr., says: "Four or five drops of Absorbine, Jr., to an ounce of water is sufficient to thoroughly cleanse the mouth and teeth of injurious bacteria, without injurious action on the teeth." (Complete report mailed upon request).

GERMAN RANKS MELTED UNDER ARTILLERY FIRE

Eighth Bavarian Regiment Decimated in Combat at Esparges—Prisoner Said Orders are Not to Give in at Any Price

PARIS, April 6.—(Special)—Combats at the Esparges, in the department of Meuse, on March 18, 19 and 20, were no less brilliant and successful than the preceding engagements, according to the French official "eye-witness" in a report giving further details of the battles on this part of the front.

"The most recent success," says the report, "was due to the intense artillery preparation, the very prompt assault and violent hand-to-hand fighting. In the trenches captured from the enemy, in which our heavy artillery fire wrought great excavations, we found bodies cut up and half buried in earth.

FRENCH FIRE TERRIBLE.

"Survivors who were captured declared that the French artillery fire was horrible. Others say that the 8th Bavarian Regiment was decimated, having lost 2,000 men and 16 officers during February. One battalion was reduced to 87 men. Despite this, one of the German prisoners asserted that he heard a German general say: 'We are ready to sacrifice a division, even an entire army corps of 100,000, but we must not give in.'

"An official note relates feats performed by several soldiers and officers —among them Private Roquet, who, during a counter-attack by the Germans, jumped on a parapet and killed seven of the enemy."

"Billy" Sunday Takes Day off

Evangelist Tells Reporters He Thought Willard Would be "Easy Meat"

PATTERSON, N.J., April 6.—Billy Sunday took a day off today and in the limousine which has been put at his disposal as long as he is here, he and his wife, "Ma" Sunday, toured the city and paid visits, among them calls at several banking houses.

First Billy dropped in on Mayor Robert Postyen at the City Hall, and in response to a hearty greeting exclaimed:

"Well, you have a regular city here. I had no idea Patterson was such a large and bustling place. You should be proud of it." Mrs. Sunday said she was also pleased with the city.

At police headquarters Sunday met Chief Binson and other officers, and slid a couple of weights down the shuffle board in the patoon room, declaring the exercise was "bully" for the stomach muscles. Next the couple went to see "Jim" McCormack, Sunday's old "baseball side kick," who was in bed with an attack of rheumatism.

McCormack greeted Sunday with the exclamation: "Hello, Bill, you don't look five years older."

"The pleasantest moments in many months," was the way Sunday described this meeting with his old friend. They talked over old baseball days for half an hour until Mrs. Sunday suggested that it was time for Sunday to get home and receive his newspaper interviewers.

Sunday received a score of newspaper men. He was gowned in a silken bathrobe, reclined in a big easy chair, and talked of his early baseball days. He showed considerable interest in the Johnson-Willard fight at Havana, and early in the afternoon picked "a winner" in the person of Johnson. When the returns came in, Sunday said:

"I thought Willard was easy meat for Johnson, but the result is great. Every white man should be happy."

"Hurrah, hurrah," was Mrs. Sunday's comment.

"It's a case of too much booze and too much Paris. Booze defeated Johnson."

Billy talked of the time when he quit baseball to work for the Y.M.C.A. at a salary of $83 a month. Previous to making the decision to enter evangelistic work for the Y.M.C.A. Sunday was swamped with telegrams, he said, offering him flattering salaries to stay in the baseball game.

"I remember my first meeting after I had started out to be an evangelist," he said. "It was in a tent in Perry, Iowa, and there were five hundred people. Ma and I were more than worried because we were afraid expenses could not be met."

Asked what he was going to do tonight, Billy said: "To bed at seven o'clock and a good night's rest, to be ready and fit for tomorrow's work." Sunday said he intended to cut his meeting short tomorrow night, closing at 8.30 o'clock, in order that he might attend the Phillip Sousa band concert at the Fifth Regiment Armory. The evangelist is acquainted with several members of the band and said it was his intention to have a seat with them on the platform.

That the Unitarians are ready for Sunday's expected attack and are prepared to retaliate with well known figures armed with legions of facts about their religion, was evidenced by the appearance of stacks of printed matter in the reading room which will open tomorrow at Orpheus Hall.

Mrs. Ethel B. Robinson of Patterson and Montclair, author of "The Religion of Joy" and "Glimpses of God," and prominent in the work of Unity Church Montclair, is in charge for the present and told something of the plans of the campaign. She said no meetings had been planned for April, but four would be held in May.

"Of course, if Mr. Sunday makes an attack on our religion and doctrine, figures will be brought on at once," she said. Among the possibilities as speakers are former President William Taft, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard University; John Haynes Homes, pastor of the Church Messiah of New York, and Rabbi Stephen M. Wise, of New York.

Unitarians' Answer

Informed of Sunday's remark that he had no more fear of the Unitarians than he had of the saloon keepers, and that Taft was "a good scout," Mrs. Robinson said:

"Billy Sunday has no fear of the Unitarians and the Unitarians have no fear of Billy Sunday. We are all trying to do God's work in this world. The unitarians are only too glad Billy Sunday is in Patterson, and they hope and expect he will do marvellous work there. No truly religious man ever knocks another religious man. Man needs to have his souls set on fire with a zeal to do God's work. The tiny baby is not devilish, but is a spark of God."

SELECTION OF SEED POTATOES

Of all the factors in potato growing, selection of seed is by far the most important. How we bred our Shorthorn cattle as many of us have been in the habit of selecting and breeding our seed potatoes, we would now have no breed of Shorthorns. If we used only the culls and scrubs to breed from, our breeds of stock would soon run out. It has been careful selection and the application of scientific principles of breeding that has brought our pure bred live stock up to the present high standard. One reason why potatoes on many farms in this country have degenerated is that culls, screenings and small potatoes have been planted.

If no method of selection has hitherto been followed, the seed for this year's crop will have to be taken from the bin. Potatoes which are of medium size, smooth, free from disease and true to the type of the variety being sown, should be selected. During the late summer or early autumn when the vines are beginning to die down, the best and most vigorous hills should be marketed by putting down a small stake or twig. The hills showing most vigor of vegetation will usually give the best yield of tubers. When the crop is harvested any poor hills among those marked should be discarded and the rest saved for next year's planting. One farmer doing illustration work for the Commission of Conservation planted potatoes thus selected and ordinary potatoes side by side. When harvested four rows from the selected seed yielded ten bushels per row, while the four rows on either side of the ordinary seed yielded seven and one half bushels per row. This was a gain in yield of 33 per cent.

This method of selection does not take much time and, as repeated experiments have shown it to be the means of substantial increases in yield, it should be more generally practised.—F.C.N.

Fodder Cheese In Good Demand

The prospect of high cheese prices at the beginning and through the season is looking still more assured. Interest is at present fixed on the new fodder made, which however continues to be very small and mostly brought up by the local trade, the finest quality selling at anywhere from seventeen and a half cents, or fully two cents per lb. higher than last year. Present prices are the highest that fodder cheese ever sold at on the Montreal market. It is reported that the Imperial Government is buying up a large quantity, cheese being now recognized as one of the staunchest and best adapted foods for soldiers at the front. Factory men should get busy at the earliest time. Already cables have been received from England, asking for quotations for fodder cheese, which are only arriving in very small quantities. Some factories are reported to have left the fodder cheese trade entirely.

Cheese and bread are to be more extensively used at the front than in any former war, and the Canadian cheddar is just the thing for such generous consumption. Farmers should not for a moment lose sight of the cheese market and factories should get on to it as soon as possible. Lots of cheese will be made and good prices will rule right along. That appears to be the lookout at the present time.

WOMAN NERVOUS, WEAK AND DIZZY

Could Not Do Housework for Family of Three. Vinol in a Short Time Made Her a Strong Well Woman.

Fort Edward, N. Y.—"I was in a run-down condition, nervous, weak and dizzy, so that in doing the housework for my little family of three, I would be all exhausted. I tried cod liver oil emulsions and three or four other medicines without benefit. Finally a friend told me about Vinol and I tried it. Soon I felt better and now it has built up my strength, so I have no more nervous or dizzy spells, and can do all my house-work without getting all tired out."—Mrs. ELMER GLIDDEN, Fort Edward, N.Y.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them, that they constantly overdo and suffer from headaches, backache, nervousness and kindred ills. Vinol is a most efficient strength creator for such women.

It is the medicinal elements of the cod's liver, aided by the blood making and strengthening properties of tonic iron which makes it so far superior to all other tonics.

If you are in this condition try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails.

POKER GAME ENDS IN KNIFE BATTLE

QUEBEC, April 6.—A row in which Austrian and Russian laborers engaged in a knife struggle caused serious injuries to three men and the arrest of twelve participants Sunday afternoon in a shanty at St. Anne de la Perade, near Three Rivers. The men work at the Wayagamack pulp mills and on Sunday were off duty. They engaged in a friendly game of poker, but, incidentally, talk over the war was started, and the fight ensued.

Three wounded men are under treatment at Three Rivers, and all twelve in number were rounded up by High Constable Doyon, who with a number of deputies surrounded the camp and stopped the struggle.

Murder Mystery At Rochester

ROCHESTER, April 6.—Albert Gribbrock, wealthy wholesale grocer, was shot to death as he slept in his handsome home in the exclusive Park ave. district this morning, and the police hint that sensational developments are likely to grow out of the murder. No arrests have as yet been made, but the police intimate they are keeping a person under surveillance.

The revolver with which the shooting was done was held so close to Gribbrock's head that the hair was singed. The weapon had been carried away by the murderer. The murdered man's eighty-year-old nephew was in bed with him and was not aroused by the noise of the shot.

Gribbrock shared his home with his older brother, also a member of the wholesale grocery firm and it is declared by the police there have been frequent quarrels in the house in the past few weeks. The brother is not suspected.

ROCHESTER, April 6.—No arrests have as yet been made in the mystery surrounding the murder of Albert Gribbrock, a well-to-do retail grocer in his handsome home on Park avenue early Sunday morning. Mrs. Henry Gribbrock, his sister-in-law, the only known eye witness in the house at the time, has spent two nights at police headquarters, but is not under arrest. She has been "detained," as the police explain.

Last night her nerves gave way and she was placed under treatment by a trained nurse. The police began a thorough search of the premises today in an effort to find the revolver with which the murder was committed. It is one of the puzzling angles of the murder.

Assistant District Attorney W. F. Love stated this morning that while an arrest was expected last night, the lack of one link in the chain of circumstantial evidence being forged around one person has made an arrest inadvisable.

"I shall be chagrined if no arrest is made today," he said.

Fashionable Twelth, was all agog over the crime. It is said by members of the family that it was suicide, but no motive can be ascribed by them for that theory.

MYSTERIOUS NEW POWDER

Doubles Explosive Effect of French 3-inch Guns.

PARIS, April 6.—The Army Bulletin today makes the first official reference to the new powder which has been talked about mysteriously for months. The Bulletin says that without entering into details, which cannot be divulged, it may be stated that the new explosive put into use doubles the explosive effect of the shells of three-inch guns.

MRS. WISENIGHBOUR SAYS:—

"I should have told you the other day when I was speaking of "Ready's" Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an imbarated Fibreware Tub to hold your clothes if you want to make a success of washing."

MRS. NEWLYWED says: "I've heard of Eddy's Imbarated Fibreware. What's the difference between Fibreware and Woodenware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat, all in one solid piece, it cannot warp or fall apart, no chance of splinters—wears much longer—looks much better—and is lighter to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wisenighbour.

General Otter evidently did not want to enter into any controversy when he blamed the weather for the bad boots supplied the Canadian soldiers.

"WAR"

A SERIAL STORY BY

BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

BARONESS VON SUTTNER,
the Authoress.

"My little one had never called me anything but Mamma. That he at that moment, for the first time, used the word "Mother" said to me in two syllables. "You are not alone, you have a son who shares your pain, who loves you above all things, who has no one in the world but you, who not leave your child, Mother!"

I pressed the precious being to my heart, and to show him that I had understood him I murmured, "My son, my son!"

I then remembered my little girl—his child—and reached out.

But the anguish was unendurable, and I fell into mental darkness. For years—at longer and longer intervals —I was subject to these attacks of melancholy, of which upon my return I felt no trouble I knew nothing. Now, at length, I have outlived them, and for several years have been free from the unconscious misery, though not from the bitterest, conscious sorrow. Eighteen years had passed since the 1st of February, 1871; but the deep anguish and the deepest mourning, which the tragedy of that day brought to me, I can never outlive though I should live a hundred years. It is later times, the days are more frequent when I can take part in the events of the present, can forget my own unhappiness, can sympathize in the joys of my children, not a step passes when I escape my misery. It is a peculiar experience, hard for me to describe, and which can only be understood by those who have similarly suffered. It would seem to indicate a dual life of the soul. If one one is so occupied, awake, with the things of the outer world as to forget, there yet remains that second nature which ever keeps faithfully in mind their painful memory; and this —when the other is altogether lost itself felt. Every night at the same hour I awake with this dull, strange alon. My heart seems torn asunder and I feel as if I must relieve my agony in signs and bitter weeping. this lasts for several seconds, without the knowledge I knowing why the other is happy or unhappy. The next stage is a sentiment of unbearable sympathy, full of the tenderest compassion—"Oh, poor, poor humanity!" Then amidst a shower of tears I see the shrieking figures fall—and thus I remember for the first time that they best-beloved met such a death.

But the dreamy, singular to say, I never realize my loss. It often occurs that I come to talk with Frederick as if he were alive, and in circumstances of the past—but no sad ones —frequently alluded to by me at our meeting after Sadowa-Königgrätz, our joining over Sydekum's grave, our walk through Switzerland, our studies of favorite books, and now and then a certain picture of my mother's, my husband in the evening sunset-light, with the hidden sheave, clipping the roses. "Is it not true," he says to me, smiling, "that we are a happy old couple?"

My mourning I have never laid aside—only my veil, which I wear but a day. The woman who has loved, possessed and lost—so long—must in the most feel that love is indeed stronger than death. With this may exist a longing for revenge which can hardly grow cold.

But how should I seek revenge? The man who were guilty of the act could not be personally blamed. The sole responsibility rested upon the spirit of war, and this was the only force with which I could attempt—though in a feeble way—to settle my account.

My son Rudolf shared my views to a great extent—which did not, however, prevent his going into camp for the autumn manœuvres, and, wouldn't hinder him marching over the border, should that gigantic European contest break out which we were all anticipating. I might yet Live to see the desires for life in these sacrificed to this relentless Moloch, and the hearth of my old age fall in ruins.

Should I live to experience that and again be driven to madness, or should see the triumph of justice and humanity, for which all nations and alliances of peoples are now striving.

My red journal—these sheets written under date of 1871 I marked with a great cross in record of my life. My so-called protocol—my peace record—I once again opened, and of late have added much to the history of the years of the international life of the settlement of the strifes of humanity by peaceful methods.

For some years the most influential nations of the continent have been watching each other, both absorbed in thoughts of war—the one in armament records of past successes, the other in hurried preparations for gradually these sentiments have changed. Not, indeed, in the case of the governments, but in the case of the peoples. Among the latter, the voices protesting for peace have become louder.

Very there are few to whom this seems impossibility. There are, especially, many still to whom humanity out of its long sleep, or the hatred to plant the white flag. Their testimony is "Very good, but—their sympathies are with you. Disarm! Yes, only then will you prevent the most appalling disaster to humanity that has ever been." Disarm! Disarm! Everywhere in England and France, in Italy, in the northern countries, in Germany, in Switzerland, in America, societies have been formed with the common object to educate public opinion, and by the united expression of popular will to demand of governments that future disagreements shall be submitted to international arbitration, and by so doing to substitute for war in the place of rude force. That this is not the impossible fancy of a dreamer has been proved by facts. It is not only people of influence and position, but members of Parliament, bishops, scholars, senators, ambassadors, who glided on the list. To these is added that ever growing party which will shortly number millions in the ranks of "labor" and of the people, upon whom, ultimately, the demand for peace is a first condition.

"Mother, will you lay aside your mourning the day after to-morrow?"

With these words Rudolf came into my room this morning. For the day after to-morrow—the 26th of July, 1881—the Baptism of Else, first-born son is to be celebrated.

"No, my child," I answered.

"But, think, surely at such a festival you will not be sad; why wear the outward sign of sorrow?"

"And you surely are not superstitious enough to think that the black dress of the grandmother will bring evil to the grandchild?"

"Certainly not. But it is not suitable to the occasion. Have you taken a view?"

"No, it is only a quiet determination. But a determination connected with such a memory had all the force of law."

My son bowed his head and urged me no longer.

I have disturbed you in your work. Were you writing?"

"Yes—the story of my life. I am, thank God, at the end. That was the last chapter."

"How can you write the close of your life? You may live many years, many happy years, Mother. With the birth of my little Frederick, whom I will train to become his grandmother's new chapter is begun for you."

"You are a good son, my Rudolf. I should be ungrateful if I had not pride and happiness in you; and I am also conscious of your love—and yes, I am entering on a happy old age quiet evening; but the story of the day is closed at sunset, is it not?" He answered me with a quiet and sympathetic glance.

"Yes, the word 'end' under my biography is justified. When I committed the idea of writing it, I determined to begin with the 1st of February, 1871. If you had been torn from me for seven to be felled—luckily during the Bosnian campaign you were not in the sound—I might have been obliged to lengthen my book. As it is, it was painful enough to write."

"I am curious to read," answered Rudolf, turning over with the leaf.

"I hope so. If the book shall cause some pain in the reader, or to awaken a detestation of the source of all this unhappiness here described, I shall not have written it in vain and shall be

"Have you examined all sides of the question, Mother?" said my son. "Have you exhausted all the arguments which lead to the roots the spirit of war, and sufficiently refuted the scientific objections to it?"

"My dear, what are you thinking of? I have only written of my life. All else is left to others. Certainly not. What do I, the rich woman, the high rank, know of the sorrows which war brings to the mass of the people. What do I know of the plagues and the devastations which follow in its train with the economic-social question in the front? Familiar—and yet these are all the very matters which must determine all reformation. I do not offer a history of my own, but of future rights of nations—only the individual suffering.

"Sounds like the usual editorial," commented my son.

The Minister went on calmly:

"But such a system is surely for the preservation of peace. For it is to secure our border, as traditional peace commands of ex, we do as our neighbors are doing, and we do it with a sacred duty and hope to keep danger far from us. So I raise my glass to the toast in honor of the Triple Alliance, which has as close to the heart of Franz Martha as to the heart to the Peace League of Middle-Europe—and I ask you all to join me in drink to the maintenance of peace! Let us enjoy its blessings!"

"To such a toast I will not drink," replied. "Armed peace is no benefaction; we do not want peace for a long time, but for ever. If we set our hopes on it for a short time, it is the assurance that the ship will not be wrecked for a long time? That the whole trip will be a fortunate one? is what the honest captain vouches for."

"Can you in truth, your Excellency, honestly believe in a desire for peace on the part of those who with such enthusiasm and passion are soldiers, how they find such delight in the arsenals, fortresses, and manœuvres if they were really regarded merely as scarecrows? And the people—their earnings in order to like hands across the border? Do you think the military class will willingly relinquish the position and custodians of the peace? Behind this mask—the at its peace mask—glitters the eye of understanding, every member who votes for the war budget knows it."

"The members!" interrupted the minister, "they cannot praise enough the self-sacrifice which they have shown in order to establish the serious times and which finds expression in their willingness to vote the appropriate funds."

CRESTS AND BADGES OF WARRIOR CHIEFS

Crests and arms exist to-day as they did in the days of old, when our much-admired ancestors had to be "labelled" on the field of battle for purposes of identification.

Field-Marshal Sir John French's crest is the Irish elk, This denotes the French origin of his name—originally "le French"—for the dolphin was the ancient symbol of French royalty. It was still he found crudely carved upon the ancestral tombs at the Dominican Abbey at Clonshanville, near French Park, Ireland.

The red and white cross of the Holy Sepulchre is carried to this day by Sir Ian Hamilton, commander. Sir Philip Chetwode, whose ancestor rode with King Richard the Lion-hearted against the Saracens.

Upon the coat-of-arms of Sir Douglas Haig appear the stars and crescent which lighted the raids of his border forebears. "Tyde what may" is the quaint family motto.

General Smith-Dorrien's crest is a hand holding a trefoil; upon the hand is a mount with the same heritage, together with the motto, "Thus this family is of French origin is indicated by the fleur-de-lis, "Pervigilo et labore fioro" ("Take breath, pull strong-arms" sounds very much like advice to a Norman archer on the battlefield.

One of the most interesting crests of all is that belonging to Admiral Sir Arthur Wilson. It is a smiling cherub. One pictures the cherub as "Dreaming upon sky aloft and looking after the fate of Jack Tar," as does Sir John himself.

Another crest which the navy can claim is that of Baron Fisher, of Kilverstone. It shows the Prince of Wales and the stern of a battleship, the crest is badged holding the trident —emblem of Britannia's rule over the seas—and underneath the crest appear these words:

"Fear God and Dread Nought."

Appropriate also is the motto which appears on the crest of Sir Hedworth Meux, K.C.B. Him knight. The crest itself is an ancient cannon. Admiral Lord Beatty's crest is most distinctive in that the supporters are not a demition holding a crescent, with the motto, "Fortitude et Fidelitere" ("Strongly and Truly").

The crest of Lord Kitchener is adorned with a camel, which frequented the neighborhood of Jitterbog, Khartoum. There have been many additions to this honorable bearing since the sunlight first flashed upon it.

England has joined the bustards, and so has the black eagle. Lord Kitchener traces his descent through the female line of Scotts to an ancient French family of knightly horsemen.

WATER FOR THE ARMY

British Soldiers Get It Filtered and Boiled For Drinking

Probably no army is being tended with such care in the matter of drinking water as the British Expeditionary Force. Even the German authority, which is a wonderful scientific force, now testifies to the fact that it is well credited, inasmuch as typhoid and other kindred epidemics, which are invariably traceable to impure drinking water, appear to have developed among the Teuton hosts.

The British military authorities have not failed to profit from the lessons of the South African War, and the precaution at one time reached an acute stage.

When the base is contiguous to a town or city with a public supply it is very often the case that the river. It is the zone in which fighting is taking place that the trials and dangers arise. In order to assure Tommy Atkins a plentiful, portable or travelling filter trains have been provided.

The filter is charged at a convenient source of supply—a standpipe if available or the water may be drawn from a stream. The water passes through suitable mediums, such as charcoal, gravel and sand, which are packed in layers within the filtering vessels. In so doing, all solid impurities which may be suspended in the water are arrested. But such treatment does not render the liquid free from bacteria life. Another process is essential to consummate this end, and consequently the water is boiled, which suffices to destroy any inimicable germ life lurking in the liquid.

STRENGTH OF INSECTS

Prodigious Muscular Development of Tiny Creatures

The insects are provided with muscles of enormous power as compared with men. If a fly be held by the wings it can pick up and carry a match, and this is as if a man were able to pick up a beam 28 feet long by 16½ inches square.

An ordinary little ant can pull eight matches on rollers, which would be equal a load of 320 beams the size of a man when its weight is compared with that of a horse.

The flea jumps 200 times its own height, which is about the same as if a man were to jump over the nearly thousand-foot high Eiffel tower.

An oyster opposes being opened by exerting a force of over 30 pounds, and this is about the same power he would have to take on large locomotives and bear them Atlas-like upon his shoulders.

From a study of the physical point of view man 's the weakest of animals. It is only by the use of his mind and the application of the laws of mechanics in the machinery he has invented that he has been able to dominate the world.

A Record Size Ditch

A long marsh drain, believed to be the longest one of its kind in western Ontario, was completed at a cost of $50,000, which includes bridges. The drain starts at the eighth concession, Malden township, and extends to the Canard River, a distance of eight and three-quarter miles. It is 12 feet wide at the top and 20 feet at the bottom. Its average depth is six feet.

CONSTIPATIENTS
Read This—
It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning.
The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.
Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health.

How Thin People Can Put on Flesh

A NEW DISCOVERY
Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there but your food doesn't work and utilize the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This a true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny method diets. Omit the flesh creating-buns. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and start with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" flesh could be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, takes with your food and prepares it or the blood in easily assimilated form. Then people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best body-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and J. S. McKeown and all other druggists in Belleville and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Presbyterial Meeting at Napanee

One of the most successful conventions under the auspices of the Kingston Presbyterial Union was held on Good Friday afternoon and evening in St. Andrew's Church, Napanee. Thirty Presbyterian Churches within the Kingston Presbytery were represented. Telling addresses were given by the Rev. W. A. MacTaggart, Toronto, the synod's Convener of the Sabbath School and Young People's Society Committee; Rev. Dr. McTavish, Rev. J. W. Macintosh, Rev. J. D. Fiske, the Union's North Hastings Missionary. Three hundred and fifty dollars was raised toward the support of the North Hastings Missionary.

The officers elected for 1915 are as follows: Honorary President, Mrs. Moore, Latta; President, Wm. Mac-Intosh, Belleville; Vice-President, J. H. Moffat, Napanee; Sec. H. W. Newman, Kingston; Treasurer, D. A. Shaw, Kingston.

Executive Committee—Rev. C. C. Salmon; Barbour; Rev. H. Gracey, Gannanoque; Rev. Mr. Omond, Picton; Jas. Craig, Kingston; J. O. Bremner, Harcroft; Thos. Donnelly, Newburgh; A. Dickson, sr., Camden East; Mr. Masson, Burnbrae.

Finance Committee—D. A. Shaw, Kingston; J. C. Linklater, Gannanoque; D. F. Sinclair, Belleville.

The delegates were splendidly entertained by the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Howard is pastor.

The next convention is to be held in John Street Presbyterian Church, Belleville.

THE BRITISH WORKMAN AND BOOZE

(From Beck's Weekly, Montreal)

Lloyd-George spoke pretty plainly to the Anglo-Saxon delegation on Monday. The drinking habits of the men, he said, offered a greater menace to the Allied nations than the militarism of Germany. While the Admiralty waited for damaged warships to be repaired, Sheffield workmen, instead of driving rivets, spent their time guzzling in saloons. Unemployment at the present time, despite war or perhaps because of it, is said to be unknown in England. Perhaps therein is found an explanation of the trouble about which Lloyd-George complains; the workmans finds himself too prosperous.

It would be a radical invasion of what we have always believed to be an essentially British institution, the liberty of the individual, if the Government undertook to authmartily suppress the traffic in alcohol during the war, as the Chancellor threatens. But the sacrifice would not be without its compensations.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be returned if the rights applied for are not granted, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application for entry must be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (or Sub-Agency) on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Entry by proxy may be made at any Agency (or Sub-Agency) on certain conditions by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of the homesteader resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by the homesteader, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by such residence of the father (or mother).

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. A homestead entry will not be granted for more than one homestead, nor will a purchased homestead be granted where the applicant has already exhausted his homestead right, except in certain districts.

The area of cultivation is subject to certain exceptions. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS GIVE TO RELIEF FUND

Even the Poorest Elint Themselves That Soldiers and War Sufferers May Have Plenty

One of the most striking features of the war relief in Russia is the practically universal participation of the common people." It is not an exaggeration perhaps to say that 15,000,000 peasant households at least have given money or goods to equip hospitals, to care for soldiers' families, to relieve the sufferings of refugees, or to increase the comfort of soldiers who are fighting at the front. Nine-tenths of these households have an annual budget of only two or three hundred dollars, and many of them are in very straitened circumstances, but no matter how poor they may be they all give something.

Within the last five or six years there has been a great increase in Russia in the various forms of what may be called co-operative activity. Thousands of villages now have co-operative societies, credit unions, or consumers' leagues, and among the members are the best and most intelligent men in peasant communes. In localities where there were no zemstvos (as well as in many where there were) these co-operative societies took the lead in relief work, and upon their initiative or under their direction there were collected not only considerable sums of money but large quantities of grain, clothing and homespun cloth. In the Province of Orlof, for example, the peasants of a single district contributed 1,112,000 rubles in money and 12,000 yards of homespun linen; four volosts (cantons) in the Province of Kostroma gave 1,000 yards of cloth and a large quantity of underwear; sixteen volosts in the Province of Riazan contributed 3,218 rubles in money, 700 yards of linen, and several hundred bushels of grain; one volost in the Province of Orlof raised 6,000 rubles for a school, hospital, and 15 cottages in the Province of Ekaterinoslav subscribed 31,000 rubles for a tannery to supply 200 pairs of boots.

Peasants Want More Aircraft

Many of the communes, cantons, and districts specified the objects to which they wished to have their pecuniary contributions devoted, and it is a curious and interesting fact that not a few of the peasants asked that their money be used in the construction of aeroplanes!

The village school-town meeting of Kholuitchak, in the Province of Smolensk, subscribed 5,000 rubles and asked that it be distributed as follows: For general Russian relief, 2,000; for the Belgians, 500; for the Serbians, 500, and for the Poles, 1,000. The village school of Varyshevo, in the same Pro-luce, gave 6,000 rubles and asked that 3,000 be used for "general war relief," 600 for "the relief of the suffering people of Poland," and 400 for "the reestablishment of Belgium." With a special request that the name of Prince Gedroitz be omitted.

But the Russian people did not confine themselves wholly to work for the relief of wounded soldiers, soldiers' families, and destitute refugees from the war zone. They remembered also the soldiers fighting at the front. The various groups, clubs and social organizations in Moscow and Petrograd, such as the cacciers, the authors, the newspaper men, the actors, the scientific societies, and the employees in the various Government departments, took turns in devoting a day, or a term of days, to personal solicitation and collection of money for the soldiers and sailors. Hundreds of collectors took the field in cities, towns, and villages, carrying flags or riding in vehicles which bore the inscription, "It is cold in the trenches!"

There was hardly a human being in the Empire who did not hear or see one of these days every week, if not every day. The peraabia in the villages appointed "war collectors" who went from house to house collecting sheepskins and warm outer clothing for the soldiers, and a similarity of detailed was so great that it nearly swamped the Government's facilities for reception, transportation and distribution. The peasants sometimes formed societies themselves in order to send warm clothing to the "cold trenches."

In one village of Nizhni Novgorod a poor old aged peasant woman who was likewise almost nothing that she could give except a towel. She gave that, and then, after the collector had left her little log house, she called to him, handing after him, and holding out a copper five-kopek piece (two and a half cents), said: "Here! Take this, too. I was saving it for kerosene, but I can sit in the dark."

Modest "Tommy"

It is due to the fact that all letters written by the men have to be read and signed by an officer that the humanity of Private Tom Parry, 3rd Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers, became known to the public.

The latter's letter to his family was supplemented by the following from his officer: "I see he is too modest to tell you that he has been mentioned for conspicuous conduct. During an advance, the man carrying one of the Maxims was shot, and, leaping in the open. Your son ran out from cover, brought in the gun up to the firing line, and then went back for the ammunition he had previously been carrying. If you have any more sons like Tom, send them out here."

Soon the army of the unemployed will be decreased by the return of their regular summer occupancy of the pro-fessional summer resort visitors.

GERMANY HAS LOST RUSSIA'S BUSINESS

An English correspondent in Petrograd writes as follows concerning the Russian hatred of everything German:

German need to be spoken here a good deal, and in Moscow among business people it is not heard. Now it is dangerous to speak it anywhere. In almost every shop hangs a large placard asking customers not to speak. Car conductors will not allow them to. Often to the visitor's surprise people are stared at with dislike and suspicion because their English has been mistaken for German. Certain several altercations which arose in this way. A lady was once told by an officer not to speak German. She retorted in French. "You ought to learn to recognize the language of England, you are in it." An Englishman who speaks perfect Russian was abused rudely in a street car because he was talking English to his wife. He turned the laugh by saying in Russian "If you had been better educated you would be able to distinguish between German and English." The man collapsed. Even the teaching of German has been suspended. A German newspaper which has been published here for a century and a half has been suppressed. Thousands of firms which had close relations with Germany industrially have resolved to send their orders elsewhere, and no Britain might step in and get them if our business men stayed to do business on Russian lines. But that means studying Russian requirements and giving long credits, which few British firms care to do.

A fine opportunity is offered to foresight and enterprise. There is no sacrifice which we are not willing to suffer in order to throw off the economical yoke of Germany and attain our independence." So says the organ of the Chambers of Commerce and Industry of Petrograd. And the members of these bodies mean it. Now, if British firms were to employ agents or to send out representatives who spoke Russian and who understand the people they would hear about plenty of openings for business. Lastly, a century I have noticed here is German, from Solingen or Essen. is Sheffield so prosperous that it needs no fresh market? During the last year or two Russia will spend millions every year on agricultural machinery. Are our makers going to stand aside and let others supply it?

Rialto Gossip.

"There goes Susan Brett," remarked Yorick Hamm. "She loves to hear herself talk."

"Then it must be a great trial to her," responded Hamlett Pait, "to have to work all the time for the movies."

A Good Excuse.

A choir boy recently gave as an excuse for missing choir practice that he had to sit up with a dying friend, but an investigation proved that it was his best girl who was "just dying to see him."

Hatred of England

In a letter published by a German newspaper, a Landwehr officer writes: "On the German front officers and men do not salute in the usual way, but they hate England. Hate England, while the reply is, 'May He punish England.'"

Cautious Klem

The White Sox and Giants were aboard the Orontes, nearing the equator. Half the party had been summoned on deck to watch the crossing of the line. Bess thought he saw it in the distance, but Steve Evans declared it was high water and the two submitted to the ducking. Argument arose and the matter was appealed to Umpire Klem.

"Is it in or out at this season?" demanded Steve.

"I cannot make a decision," replied Klem: "I didn't see it."

"Stand Solid"

"The captain said, 'Get up, men; stand solid!' We formed about six deep. Then we gave them the surprise of their lives. We could just see a black mass in front of our trenches. We got on for all we were worth. We were like devils possessed. We could feel we were going through something soft. Not a German got past us to the trench. They ran down the slopes like rabbits, and to help them we gave them rounds rapid."—Private D. Hamilton, Royal Scots.

Treachery of Civilians

The Russian troops in East Prussia found many civilians provided with gun sticks, outwardly resembling ordinary walking sticks. Hitherto it has been somewhat of a mystery how the Germans managed to get through the lines frequently been a shot in the back without the culprits being discovered.

HOW CONFIDENCE COUNTS

In Blissful Ignorance Youngster Was a Wonder at Golf

Hughie Jennings has a yarn that illustrates how confidence helps a ball player.

Hughie had a young fellow who had seen the big show before I used him against Washington. Johnson was going to pitch, but in some way the youngster got the idea that Johnson was Bob Groom.

"He watched Johnson pitch the first inning, and then, turning to Crawford, he said:

"'Is Johnson much faster than this fellow?'

"Sam caught the idea, and replied: 'Oh, yes. This fellow has some speed; but there isn't anything on his fast one.'

"The kid trotted up to the plate the first time up and cracked out a hit. The second time up he drove out another hit. Then he learned that he was batting against Johnson, and the last time up he looked foolish trying to bat, and he struck out."

RAIDING GERMAN HELD BY THE UNITED STATES

Prinz Eitel's Career Ends at Newport News—Captain's Bluff Called—Thierichens Says Expected Aid Failed to Come

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 8.—(Special)—The career of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich as a sea-raider is at end.

To-morrow, at her commander's request, she will be interned until the end of the war. The breech-locks of her guns will be removed and her engines will be sealed. A United States guard will be mounted over her.

Deserted by sister ships of the German raiding fleet, Commander Thierichens last night determined not to take his vessel out to certain destruction at the hands of the British cruisers lying off the Virginia Capes.

He Expected Help

He claimed to have expected the arrival of German ships to engage the hostile fleet which laid in wait for him. When these failed to come and the last day of the time allowed him to remain in port drew near the end, he communicated to Collector of Customs Hamilton his desire to intern.

"There's no use in fruitlessly sacrificing the ship and the lives of the crew," he said.

Collector of Customs Hamilton boarded the Eitel shortly after 7 o'clock last night with an imperative notice from the Washington Government that the time for his stay in this port would expire at midnight tonight, and that he must leave American waters by 4 o'clock on the morning of April 8. Before the collector could deliver the message Commander Thierichens handed to him the written announcement of his decision.

The Written Backdown

The text of the captain's letter was as follows:

"I inform you that I intend to intern steamship Prinz Eitel Friedrich. The retief I expected, and the number and force of the enemy's cruisers waiting outside the bay makes it seem to me impossible for the dash for the open sea to be made with any hope of success.

"I have decided not to deliver the crew and ship to a fruitless and certain death.

"I am greatly obliged for the courtesies shown by all United States authorities.

"I await your spiders.

"I have communicated the same message to the commander of the U.S.S. Alabama.

"Respectfully yours, Thierichens."

WESTERN SIDE OF YSER FREED OF THE ENEMY

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 8.—The Belgian legation here has received a telegram from the Belgian Minister of War, dated yesterday, which reads: "The western side of Ypres Canal in the direction of Dreigenschen has been completely freed of the enemy by the Belgian troops. The Germans fled in disorder, leaving behind them machine guns and ammunition."

CONSTRUCTED THREE GIANT SUBMARINES

(Canadian Press Special)

ROTTERDAM, April 8—Three giant submarines, constructed at Hoboken, near Antwerp, have been taken by the River Scheldt and canal to one of Germany's bases on the Belgian coast. They are said to have a surface speed of from twenty to twenty-five knots.

More Successes For Gen. Botha

CAPETOWN, South Africa, April 8.—(Special)—It was announced officially here today that troops of the Union of South Africa have occupied without opposition the railway stations at Kalkfontein and Kanus, German Southwest Africa. This follows the capture of Warmbad, 20 miles north of the Orange River, which was announced yesterday.

FRENCH LOSE HEAVILY

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 8.—The German headquarters gives out the following: "The fighting between the Meuse and Moselle continued yesterday. The French attacks, unrolled in failure in the Woevre district on the heights of Combres near the Forest of Schoss, north of St. Mihiel, Ailly forest, near the forest of Apremont, to the north of Flirey and in the forest of Leperte. The French losses on the entire front again were enormous, without obtaining the slightest success. On the eastern front there have been no developments.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The State Department has been informed that by order of the British Admiralty the River Dee and the port of Chester have been closed to navigation by night and all lights extinguished.

NO SETTLEMENT OF DRINK TILL PARLIAMENT MEETS

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 8.—The Cabinet having failed to come to a decision on the drink question, no settlement is expected until Parliament meets next week. The impression is growing that the Government will contest itself with bringing in a measure prohibiting the sale of spirits. Conservative leaders are believed already to have given privately their assent to whatever action may be taken, provided a measure for total prohibition be considered at this time.

Sir Wilfrid. "Wow! I rode too near the edge.

Wines and Spirits Are Prohibited

Britain to Encourage Consumption of Beer of Lighter Sort

LONDON, April 8.—(Special.)—Several more cabinet meetings will be required, according to The Times, before the government is able to place definite proposals before the country for dealing with the drink problem, but it already is possible to indicate in what direction the ministers are moving. They have ruled out total prohibition as impracticable. The Times continues, "and so far as the discussions have gone, favor the following measures:

"First, prohibition of wines and spirits; second, encouragement of lighter beers by compulsory reduction of their strength; third, further restrictions in the sale of intoxicants in the military areas, and in districts where munitions of war are being manufactured."

GIVES SUM TO AID BROKE TRAINER

LONDON, April 7—Richard Marsh, who for years was trainer of the race horses of King Edward, and also acted in that capacity for King George is to receive royal assistance in straightening out the tangled financial affairs which recently threw him into bankruptcy.

At a creditors' meeting today announcement was made that King George "out of consideration for his late father's old servant and his own servant", would provide 8,000 pounds sterling (£40,000 toward Marsh's debts.

The receiver added that the creditors could not expect from the King "a penny more", and advised them not to hold out for a better offer.

Report on Boots is Now Under Way

Majority of Makers Have Emerged From Ordeal With Credit

OTTAWA, April 8.—(Special)—The investigation into the boots supplied the Canadian soldiers is concluded, and the work of preparing the report of the committee is in progress. There will be a debate on it in the house. It is possible that there will be a majority report, but there is no certainty.

That many bad boots have been supplied by certain manufacturers has been shown, but for the most part the manufacturers, especially the more responsible and better known of them, have supplied boots up to the samples and specifications given them, and in many cases have even supplied better boots than was required by the department.

The chief fact brought out and admitted generally by the witnesses is that the Canadian boot was too light for the conditions at Salisbury, but it also had been shown that the conditions there this year were abnormal. The light boot, however, has not altogether been condemned, and the expert employed by General Hughes to prepare a boot for the militia has stated that there should be two boots, one heavier than the other for winter use. It has also been shown that the Canadian boot is better adapted for marching than the British article.

Before the committee finished its work today Hon. Charles Murphy called attention to a telegram which had been received from the ordnance officer at Winnipeg in reply to a request for a statement as to who authorized him to buy boots from a Winnipeg middleman.

The reply said:

"Boots referred to in your telegram were purchased from samples submitted."

Chairman Middleboro agreed that it was no answer at all. It was useless to issue sharp instructions to this effect to obey the orders of the committee.

INEVITABLE RETIREMENT OF ENEMY IN THE WESTERN WAR ZONE

Back to Berlin Movement is Foregone Conclusion and Russian Successes are Likely to Accelerate its Speed—Allies Patiently Await Hour to Strike—Seven Heavy German Reverses Have Decided the Campaign

LONDON, March 28.—(Special.)—The ninth and tenth instalments of the French official review of the war which in the previous chapters has dealt with the German effort, the using up of German troops and officers, and the material and moral wastage of the German army, deal respectively with military supplies, and the conclusion of the war up to date, as found by the writer.

"Under the caption "The Scarcity of Primary Material for Projectiles," the review points out that the chief of the imperfections noted in the German projectiles is to be found in the bad quality of the primary material. It declares there is a "terrible scarcity of rubber," and is still more serious is the scarcity of copper, which is indispensable for the manufacture of shells and munitions."

Food Also Scarce

The same condition, it is asserted, hold true of saltpetre and of the nitrates necessary for its manufacture.

The review then deals at great length and presents tables and quotations from German writers to prove the scarcity of foodstuffs within the empire. It says: "It has been observed on several occasions that the revictualling of the German army has not been as regular as that of the French, in the case of the battle of the Marne, and in the weeks that followed, the German prisoners were famished, and declared they had eaten nothing for several days."

In the tenth and last instalment, the writer proceeds to draw his conclusions, which he places under four heads as follows: "The Bearing of the German Defeat," "The Bearing of the French Success," "The Three French Superiorities," and "The Offensive Faith of the French Army."

Basic Plan Failed

Under the first he says:

"Of the events of which an abridged recital has now been completed, it remains to appraise the results of these six months of war, and to define the possibilities of which those results have in store for us in the further operations. The first of all be affirmed that the fundamental idea of the German general staff has completely failed. This plan has been superabundantly set forth by German military writers as also in the Reichstag by the minister of war. It aimed at crushing France by an overwhelming attack and at reducing her to a condition of helplessness in less than a month.

"Germany has not succeeded in this. Our army is, as we have seen, not only intact, but strengthened; full of trust in its leaders and profoundly penetrated with the certainty of final success.

Seven Severe Reverses

"To sum up, the German general staff has placed upon its record since the beginning of the campaign—apart from the failure of its general plan, which aimed at the crushing of France in a few weeks—seven defeats of high significance, namely, defeat of the Sweden attack on Nancy, defeat of the rapid march on Paris, defeat of the envelopment of our left in August, defeat of the same envelopment in Nov. defeat of the attempt to break through our centre in September, defeat of the coast attack on Dunkirk and Calais, and the defeat of the attack on Ypres.

"The German army, powerful and courageous as it may be, has therefore succeeded in gaining the advantage upon no single point and its forced halt after six months of war condemns it to retreat, the pace of which may be accelerated by the Russian successes, but the necessity of which is now a foregone conclusion indepently of those successes.

SHOOTING OF CHILD DISCUSSED IN HOUSE

OTTAWA., April 8. — (Special)— Press reports of the shooting of a child by a military guard occasioned a sharp interchange between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Major-General Sam Hughes when Parliament met this morning. In alluding to the reports Sir Wilfrid used the words "seemingly another case of the shooting of the innocent."

This brought the War Minister to his feet in anger. It would be better, he exclaimed, for the Opposition leader to await official reports. People had been warned in all towns and cities where guards had been placed that they must speak when challenged.

He has been stated that the soldiers have been instructed to shoot to kill," commented Sir Wilfrid.

"Sentries have been instructed that, if attacked, or an attempt is made to disarm them, they are not to shoot to kill," retorted General Sam.

"In this case it seems to have been a woman and three children who attacked the soldier," observed Sir Wilfrid, and the incident closed.

Eitel Still At Her Dock

German Commerce Raider Did Not Make Dash

NEWPORT, NEWS, Va., April 7.—The German commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich did not sail from this port last night. Opportunity to leave neutral water under cover of darkness was afforded by the United States Government which had den'ed clearance to merchant ships of Germany's belligerent enemies.

Daybreak today found the Eitel still moored to her pier at the ship yard. But a few hours remained of the 24-hour period in which she would be permitted to attempt to pierce the cordon of allied warships hovering outside the three-mile limit off the Virginia Capes. Since Commander Theirichens failed to take advantage of a particularly dark night to escape, belief has early today was that the cruiser would be interned. Whether or not this would be done immediately after the expiration of the liberty time at about 11.40 o'clock this morning could not be ascertained.

Drawing Line On Foreigners

Even Men of Allied Nations are Being Refused by Recruiting Officers

MONTREAL, April 7.—Orders have been sent out that no more foreigners are to be enlisted with the Overseas Canadian troops, Dr. Russell says, are to be refused. To a certain extent, of course, the commanding officers are left to use their own judgment, but unless the would-be recruit has been in Canada for a considerable period and unless he understands and speaks English especially well, he will not be accepted.

URGES WOMEN TO TRY PUBLIC LIFE

TORONTO, April 7.—"If the city fathers do not properly look after the community interests then why should not the city mothers do it?" said Sir George E. Foster, at a meeting of the Ontario Educational Association at Convocation hall last night in an address on "Women as Empire Builders."

"Women should enter public life," he said, "because they must conserve and protect what they have produced. There remains much to be done, but mind you, public life is not all boots and binoculars (Laughter).

"They must take advantage of the waste which would make Canada the richest country in the world. I put this matter up to the women. It is for them to act, not to smash windows, nor drop corrosives in letter boxes, because there are more sane and more womanly ways in which every woman can take a part in keeping good that which she has helped to make good and keeping safe that which she has helped to make safe."

DISASTROUS FIRE IN KILLALO

EGANVILLE, April 7.—The principal business section of Killaloe was almost entirely wiped out by fire which originated from some unknown cause in Slack's harness shop at 1.10 o'clock this morning.

The buildings which were completely destroyed were Slack's harness shop, where the fire originated; residence of Thomas Cybulski, Anthony Cybulski's barber shop, Hazelton and Boland's general store, and J. Paulbeski's general store.

A burr-up call was sent to Pembroke for assistance.

WITHIN DAY'S MARCH OF HUNGARIAN PLAIN

Russian Forces Pouring Down the Southern Slopes of the Carpathians—Many Prisoners Taken

LONDON, April 8.—(Special)—After months of dogged fighting and terrible privations the vanguard of the victorious Russian armies in the Carpathians can see from the southern slopes, within a day's march, the great plain of Hungary on which the fertile soil of the Dual Monarchy is fated to be decided. On Sunday Russian bayonets gleamed in the sunlight on the ridge south of Baligrod, down the slopes the slopes the Austrian defenders sullenly retired to prepared positions, which had been manned with reserves, the enemy falling back sixteen miles.

Germany is reported to be rushing supports from the west. While the enemy's losses have been enormous, there is no confirmation of the report that 80,000 Austrians were captured in the past week on the Carpathian front alone.

The Russian forces now hold the crests of the principal chain of the Beskid mountains, and the southern spurs are also falling before the irresistible advance of the Muscovite.

Austrian claims of successes are denied in Petrograd, which regards these reports as designed to mollify public opinion in Austria-Hungary.

A Petrograd despatch asserts that during the period from March 20 to April 3 the Russians took prisoners in the Carpathians on the front from Baligrod to Usok: 378 officers, 11 doctors, 33,155 men, besides capturing seventeen cannon and 100 machine guns. About half of these captures are said to have been made on a front of 150 versts (100 miles).

ALLIES MAINTAIN GAINS IN GREAT ARTILLERY ACTIVITY

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 8.—This afternoon's official statement says: In Belgium the day was marked by artillery engagements. In the valley of the Aisne and the district to the east of Rheims our efforts, in spite of the abnormally bad weather, continued with great activity and we have maintained our gains between the Meuse and the Moselle in their entirety, while at the same time we are proceeding to make further progress. In the Bride forest we captured a German trench, at the same time taking a large number of prisoners on this section of the front.

BELLEVILLE

Outside physicians are inspecting the recruits to-day with a view to ascertaining the existence of meningitis germs.

The army service corps is dispensing milk powder to the troops, which is considered more sanitary than the ordinary liquid milk, and does not call for inspection.

KINGSTON

All officers of the 21st Battalion are required to parade at the Armouries every afternoon from 5 to 6 p.m.

Major Brown of the staff of the third division, is about to be made general staff officer, and Captain Porter of Lindsay will be added to the staff and given the duty of looking after the instructional work.

A squad of the 26th Battery are given riding lessons every day and the men are taking well to their horses. As soon as the battery takes charge of the Dornitories at artillery park, and have places for horses and guns nearer their drill grounds, the battery will get down to real artillery work.

The following have applied for the R.S.A. class which opens on April 26th: Lieutenants Hivers, Gillies, Cameron, Rogers, Lambert, Huycke, Wattback, of the third division; Lts. Fletcher and Dean of the 2nd Brigade; R.M. C. Cadets Hazen, Reade and Ayles of the 26th Battery; Lethbridge.

No more applications are being accepted for positions with the Royal Army Medical Corps for Imperial service. Over fifty applications could have been sent from this division.

Captain Stacey, officer commanding "C" Battery, has added a star to his shoulder decorations, and Bandy in Tete du Pont Barracks is pleased to see him get a step up on the military ladder. He is a good officer, popular with his men, and a hard worker for the interests of his battery. His promotion dates back to March 2nd.

A remount depot for Canadian troops has been established in England with Lt.-Col. Hendrie, a brother of his honor the Lieut.-Governor, in charge. The personnel for the depot will be created in Kingston and will consist of 15 men, which will be made up as follows: 1 Lieutenant; 1 Regt. Sergt. Major; 1 orderly room clerk; 1 Sergt.; 4 corporal; 2 shoeing smiths; 1 saddler; 12 privates. Forty out of the number must be rough riders, and all others must be well acquainted with horses.

STOP OVERTIME ON WELLAND CANAL.

OTTAWA, April 8.—Special—A deputation of labor men waited on Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, and Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, yesterday, and requested that the contractors on the Welland Canal extension and improvements be asked to discontinue working their men overtime, and to pay them semi-monthly instead of monthly, and that Sunday work be discontinued, so that many men now in need of work may be given employment. The Ministers promised favorable consideration.

The deputation was headed by J. C. Watters, President of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and with him were: T. J. McGovern, Thorold; W. Reilly, Hamilton; James Marsh and Thomas Moore, Niagara Falls, A. T. Merrizzo, Montreal; Murray Nicholls, Toronto, and J. A. McPherson, St. Catharines, representing the various trades.

Soldiers Under Bacteriologist Test

Medical Experts in City Conducting Examination—Every Effort to Stamp Out Disease

Surgeon-Captain Amyot, Provincial bacteriologist, Drs. Palmer, Fraser and Hodge, of the Second Division, arrived in the city yesterday for the purpose of conducting an investigation into the outbreak of cerebro-spinal meningitis which has occurred here amongst a few members of the 39th Battalion, resulting in two deaths. After making every arrangement for the test, etc., Dr. Amyot returned to Toronto this morning.

Dr. Palmer, at the Armouries today, made a test of over 100 members of the Battalion for the purpose of detecting any trace of this terrible and fatal disease.

To a representative of The Intelligencer Dr. Palmer stated that a thorough test of the men's throats and noses was made for the purpose of ascertaining if any germs of the disease were being carried by reason of the men coming in contact with those who had died. The examination was thorough in every respect and if there was the slightest sign of transmission of the disease the men were isolated at once. Every man who had in any way come in contact with the men who had died were subjected to the test. An incubator has been brought here, and in this medical instrument will be grown the organism and culture media. It is grown in the incubator and examined under a powerful microscope. In this way the slightest form of the disease can be detected. If there are any such cases special treatment will immediately be given by drawing off the fluid from the spine. Dr. Palmer stated that there was no need whatever of any fear of the disease spreading, as the precautions now being taken were such as to prevent this happening. Every agency known to medical science will be used to stamp out the disease here.

Dr. Amyot, while in the city, coincided with the views expressed by Dr. Palmer, namely, that there was no cause for alarm. Some objection, it was stated, had been made as to receiving such patients at the hospital here, but the refusal, should there be any, would be investigated by the proper authorities.

Turning to look, Jack Johnson was not turned to a pillar of salt, but he got something quite as effective.

General Otter evidently did not want to enter into any controversy when he supplied the Canadian soldiers.

Outflanked by Russian Horse

Remnants of Hindenburg's Army of Invasion in Tight Corner

LONDON, April 8.—(Special)—The correspondent of The Morning Post at Petrograd cables: "On Monday the Russian horse artillery got behind the German line of retreat towards Mysthienets and destroyed the bridge over the Rosoga that carries the high road to the frontier a mile or two from the village of Yaki."

Altogether the German remnants of the vain glorious raid into Poland are now in an uncommonly tight corner, being unable to move either forward or back, according to military rules, the choice being between total loss and a prolonged and hopeless struggle, which must end in a break and run for the frontier, which at different parts of this front is five to fifteen miles distant, mostly with impracticable marsh land and without roads for retreat.

Occupy New Position at Metz

PARIS, April 8—(Special)—Getting under way with great momentum, the new French advance towards Metz was successful west of Metz and the Moselle, near Pareid, east of Verdun, where two lines of trenches were captured from the Germans, and at Eparges, where an important success was recorded, the French war office reports tonight in an official communique.

The French advantages were gained in the early part of the day, and the rest of the time was spent in beating back the counter attacks of the exasperated Germans, who came on time and again, finally launching a particularly heavy onset, which was made an excellent target for the French artillery, machine guns and rifles.

A repetition of the German tactics in Ailly wood was noted. Here they came forward in their traditional mass formation and were shot down. Many prisoners were also taken in a French counter-charge before the defeated Germans were able to regain their own trenches and reform.

The German staff is regarding the capture of Hartmanns-Weiler Kopf in Upper Alsace as a serious blow, for most of the Prussian Guards have been captured in this region, having been transferred to this point from another section of the front. Whenever there is desperate work to do the guard is sent for.

Blames Italy For Downfall

PARIS, April 8.—(Special.)—What the Kaiser thinks about Italy, is reflected in the following statement he recently made to officers attached to the German Austrian army staff:

"Even if we are crushed we shall never tire of telling our children in history as we have in Germany that our downfall was due to Italy. It takes as long as seven twenty years we will win back whatever we lose Italy now, and after some vehicle as interest."

This disclosure was made in a neutral newspaper man by an Austrian officer who heard the Kaiser's row.

Steamer Escaped German Airmen

MANCHESTER, Eng., April 8.—(Special.)—The captain of the Cork steamer Ousel reported on his arrival here from Rotterdam today that for the fifteen miles east of Gallopers lightship two German hydroplanes hurled eleven bombs at his vessel. Evasive action was adopted by taking a zigzag course until the Germans exhausted their bomb supply.

NOTABLE WEDDING OCCURS IN LONDON

LONDON, April 8.—The most notable wedding of the season was that of Lady Victoria Pelham, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, to Lady Victoria Stanley, daughter of Lord Derby, at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. Among those present were Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria, Princess Maud, and many officials and dignitaries, including Premier Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Haldane, Arthur Balfour and Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill. Queen Alexandra wore black, with a bunch of yellow primroses. It was a wild-flower wedding, the bridesmaids carrying country posies, daffodils, lilies of the valley and rambler roses, while the chancel was redolent with flowers, including daisies. Neil Primrose is a son of Lord Rosebery. The wedding unites Unionist and Liberal houses.

TURKS DRIVEN FROM BATUM

PETROGRAD, April 8.—(Special)—The Novoe Vremya's Batum correspondent reports the entry of the Russians into Artvin, Russian Armenia, without firing a shot. This, the correspondent adds, consummates the transchcork operations, the entire Batum province having now been cleared of the Turks.

QUIT LEPER ISLAND

Mrs. Thomas Found Pinikese Too Lonely After Death of Her Son.

BOSTON, April 7.—Mrs. Emma Thomas, mother of Archie Thomas, the boy leper who died recently on Penikese Island, has reconsidered her decision to end her days in the leper colony. She has finally left the island, on which she went into voluntary exile several years ago.

After the death of her son, Mrs. Thomas received permission to remain on Penikese for the rest of her life, under salary from the State, but the loneliness there caused her to leave the place.

DEATHS

REEVES—In Belleville on Wednesday, April 7th, 1915, George Reeves, aged 79 years, 10 months.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 212 Charles street, on Saturday, 10th inst., at 2.30 o'clock, to Bridge Street Methodist Church, for service. Interment, Belleville cemetery.

His millions have kept Harry, Tim out of the electric chair, says Dr. Gordon. In such cases, millions are rather a handy commodity to have around.

The Reveille Of Romance

Poem by Deputy Minister's Son With First Contingent

In "The Reveille of Romance," written by Mr. Peregine Acland in October of last year on board His Majesty's troopship Megantic at the fleet which carried the first contingent of the Canadian expeditionary force to England, there is expressed more clearly than in any other Canadian war poem the sense of high adventure felt by most of the young Canadians who answered the first call to the front. The poem is as follows:

"Regret no more the age of arms,
No sigh 'Romance is dead.'
Out of life's dull and dreary mass
Romance has raised her head.

"Now at her golden clarion call
The sword salutes the sun;
The bayonet glitters from its sheath
To deck the deadly gun.

"The tramp of horse is heard afar
And down the Autumn wind
The sharpest shrieks of sudden doom
To which brave eyes are blind.

"From East and West and South and North
The hosts are crowding still;
The long rills hum as troop trains come
By valley, plain and hill;

"And whence came yearly argosies
Laden with silks and corn,
Vast fleets of countless armed men
O'er the broad seas are borne.

"All come to the gay festival
Of rifle, lance and sword,
Where toasts are pledged in red heart's blood
And Death sits at the board.

"Now Briton, Gaul and Slav and Serb
Clash with the Goth and Hun
Upon grim field where whose yields
Romance, at least, has won.

Though warriors fall like frosted leaves
Before November winds,
They only lose what all must lose
But find what none else finds.

"Their bodies lie beside the way.
In trench, by barricade,
Discarded by the titan will
That shatters what it made.

"Poor empty sheaths, they mark the course
Of spirits bold as young;
Whatever checked that fiery charge
As dew to dust was flung.

"Far terrible it is to slay
And bitter to be slain.
But joy it is to crown the soul
In its determined reign.

"And better far to make or mar,
God like, for but a day,
Than spend the sluggard's slavish round
In life-long, mean decay.

"Who sighs, then, for the Golden Age?
Romance has raised her head,
And in the sad and sombre days
Walks proudly o'er your dead!"

WELL KNOWN FORMER BELLEVILLIAN MARRIES

The marriage took place yesterday afternoon in St. George's Anglican Church, Ottawa, of Miss Kathleen G. Bishop, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Frederick Bishop, and Mr. Karl G. Spangenberg, of Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Spangenberg, of Toronto. Rev. T. M. Bromley, director, officiated; and the wedding music was played by Mrs. F. M. S. Jenkins. The bride was attended by her two sisters, Miss Sydney Bishop as maid of honor, and Miss Grace Bishop as bridesmaid. Mr. Lain Spangenberg, of Toronto, the groom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Frank McElroy and Mr. Ritsell Odell. The bride's gown was of white charmeuse satin with a long train and an overdress of lace. She wore a long tulle veil and carried lilies of the valley and orchids. Her attendants wore gowns of similar design in blue and pink shades respectively. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Grafton of Montreal, and Mrs. S. A. Spangenberg, of Toronto. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 41 Park avenue, after which the couple left for Montreal and points east. On their return they will reside at the Calnarian Apartments, Frank street.

Banquet and Presentation to Secretary Hess

Last evening at 6.30 the dormitory men of the Y.M.C.A. got together for a little social time which took the form of a banquet. The fellows have not been unmindful of the wholehearted services rendered to them by Mr. Hess, the General Secretary, and since it was his birthday and also the anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Hess' wedding day, the fellows took the occasion as one whereby they would remember them with some little gift as marks of good will and appreciation. The supper was delightfully prepared and arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin. Mrs. Faulkner, E. Forman, and Miss Rowland. After partaking of these bountiful good things, Mr. Bruce Burnham, as chairman, spoke in kindly terms of the services rendered by Mr. Hess, and also read an address which voiced these sentiments from every man on the top floor. As slight token, Mr. Hess received with his appointments of the Masonic Order, and Mrs. Hess a cut glass service. Mr. Hess, in responding, payed tribute to the worth of the men on the top floor, and expressed surprise that he should have been remembered at all, feeling as he did, that he had only rendered that service which was his duty first, and a sense of pleasure secondly. Mrs. Hess spoke briefly, and expressed her appreciation at the thoughtfulness to one who was more or less remote from the interests of the men. Short speeches were made by Mr. Allison, Mr. Faulkner, Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Burnham moved a vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. Davison, expressing appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, not only in the preparation of this affair, but for their constant care in looking after the needs of the men. The meeting closed by all singing the National Anthem.

LETTERS FROM ABROAD

FROM D. F. WARD

My Dear Mother:

Just a line to you after all this time to let you know that we have moved once more and are stationed at Shorncliff Barracks and not as I think, to stay here. You may rest easy, I think, about my going to France, for I don't think so, as I have to stay here to instruct the 2nd and 3rd contingent and beside that I am on the staff as quartermaster's assistant, not Battery, but Brigade Q. M., and that is a good job. Well, Mother, and how are you now—as good as I am, I hope, and you will be right. I'm glad you like my picture, for I had it taken at a bad time, but it was the only chance I had so I took it, but I will have another one taken if I get any money at all. Well, I am all set in barracks; the Q.M. and myself have a room all to ourselves and we are having it as a regular sitting-bed room made of it, so if you wish to contribute to a soldier's comforts you can, by sending the price of a table and couple of chairs and a couple of pictures to hang on the wall. It will all help to make it look like home if you do. Of course the Q. M. S. is a Belleville man or I should not wish to make a room look comfortable with him; but as it is, he is a decent fellow and he and I get on fine together. Well, remember me to Bill and all our friends and give my love to Phoebe and accept the same for yourself. Well, Mother, this is about all now, so I will close with best of love and wishes. I remain,

Your loving son,
FRANK WARD.

P.S.—Don't forget to subscribe a bit to our happy home and comforts as quick as ever you can.

Hello Phoebe:

Here we are again. How are you getting on, anyway, and how is the world using you. Have you lots of work and money, and is Bill still working? How is Mother getting on? Is she in good health yet, and is the ground too slippery for her to get about. Tell Mother I'm glad she likes the picture I sent, but will send a better one when I get some money. Well, Phoebe, we are pretty busy here now. We are in the training depot for the 2nd contingent, and we have to train men for the front. Say, that reminds me—what does Billy Whiffin belong to—the 40th, 15th or 31th? I was talking to Major Herdon today and he asked after Mother. Will you tell her that? Tell her I have been to a couple of seaside resorts since I have been in Shorncliffe. I have been to Folkstone and Sandgate, and it is not a bad place at all. To tell the truth—I don't think. Well, Phoebe, I must close now as I have to fill in some forms so as to be able to draw the rations for the day to-morrow. So, good-bye. I remain,

Your loving brother,
FRANK.

THE ELECTION LAW

The opinion expressed by many in a position to know is, that the amendment to the controverted elections act, as proposed by Hon. Mr. Pugsley, is anything but judicious. The ground-work of the change is that in the trial of federal election cases the court might not only depose a successful candidate of his seat if corrupt practices were proved, but might award the seat to the candidate receiving the next highest number of votes, provided it did not appear that corruption had been employed by him or his agents.

In reviewing Mr. Pugsley's proposition The Hamilton Herald suggests that "if the law were to be so amended, it is safe to say that there would be mighty few successful candidates in whose behalf corruption had not been employed. If the supporters of a certain candidate were convinced that he had no chance of election by fair means, it would be easy to get him elected by hiring one or two workers on the other side to engage in bribery."

Speaking editorially from a similar viewpoint, The Montreal Journal of Commerce, Hon. W. S. Fielding's organ, says:

"But the fact remains that the amendments are all of a minor character, and that the chief evils which have existed under the present law are not likely to be removed by amendments. The people who supply funds to be used by corrupting electors will find no new provisions to check their operations. The number of men who honestly endeavored to respect the law will be a rather worse position than at present. As the petitioner is required to support his allegations by affidavit, the proposal is that the affidavit be abolished. 'If John Smith should write a letter to a friend accusing John Brown of wrong-doing, Brown, on learning the facts, would have a remedy in the courts. But if Smith should make the allegations in the form of an election petition, there would be no remedy; the slander would be legalized. Petitions will continue to be prepared in large number, to be traded off as bribes. Judges will have to wink at the bargains that will be made in connection with these transactions. What deposited will be returned, the groundless petitions will easily be withdrawn if they are not.

"It will be said, with some truth, that there is much good law already, and that if it is enforced that will be made in connection with these transactions. What deposited will be returned, the groundless petitions will easily be withdrawn if they are not.

"Our Canadian law on the subject is said to be substantially the same as the English law. But the fruits of the law are not the same in both cases. Perfection of Government has not been reached in England; but electoral corruption has been practically destroyed there, while it has been allowed to flourish in Canada. The proposed amendments to the Canadian law, though not valueless, give little promise of the conditions that have been brought about in England."

"A better way to discourage electoral corruption," concludes The Hamilton Herald," would be to give the trial judges power to disfranchise temporarily any constituency in which corruption had been common. This drastic remedy has been applied in England and has proved effective. A disfranchised constituency is a disgraced constituency, and the disgrace is sure to spur all decent and public-spirited citizens to the duty of reforming the name of their constituency. Besides, the lack of representation in Parliament causes such inconvenience that it is in itself a sharp punishment."

AMERICANS ON THE FIRING LINE

Americans are taking a very active part in the fighting in Europe. This fact is brought home by the statement of Minister Hughes in the Dominion Parliament last week that the Canadians would be surprised to learn that dozens of Americans on the battle line with the Canadians had fallen.

It is a known fact also, says the Buffalo Express, that there are many Americans fighting also with Germany, France, Austria and even with Russia.

There are probably more Americans fighting with the Allies than on the other side because thousands of American citizens, Germans and Austrians or of Germans or Austrian descent, are unable to join either of these armies. On the other hand, it is very easy to enlist in either the English or French service because ocean traffic to these countries is practically uninterrupted. It is difficult to estimate the great number of German-Americans who would join the colors if they could get to the war zone.

The reason is very obvious why many Americans are in the Canadian regiments, because of the Dominion's proximity and the large number of Uncle Sam's children who have become Canadians by residence because of the influx to that country from the United States in the past ten years.

CURRENT COMMENT

If dancing, as is claimed, benefits both the 1.65 and the 200 pounder, it is pretty near being a general blessing.

No man can afford to run along year after year and not earn his salt unless he belongs to a commission of some sort, remarks the Galveston News.

We presume the relatives, of Mr. Mason, the American who killed himself are perfectly satisfied. They have received $20,000 for him.—Ingot Mexican money—but real gold coin.

The United States has presented Germany with a claim of $220,059.54 for the loss of the steamer William P. Frye, sunk by the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

A Grit contemporary, referring to the decision to have soldiers vote, if there be an election, adds, "Will the ballot boxe be stuffed?" Why, so The Conservatives will be in control.

Even the Irish Guards' band was enthusiastically cheered in Dublin on Sunday. If London reports are trustworthy, Irish patriotism in connection with the war has become pronounced and earnest on the side of the Allies.

Victoria Colonist: "A German writer says Germany cannot give her Belgium because it has cost so much blood to conquer it. This is as if a thief should refuse to give up his booty because he had killed the man from whom he stole it, and got a blow that made his nose bleed."

Montreal Gazette: "The Mayor of London, Ont., is seeking to have the city's police clad in khaki instead of the regulation blue. Why such a change? Police in Paris or Petrograd is different enough to find as it is, without dressing him up in a color that is well-nigh invisible from a distance."

Journal of Commerce: "Montreal stockbrokers are to be reorganized on their decision to open the exchange for floor trading. They have had a very slight month of it, but undoubtedly the worst is over. Their decision to extend the activities of the exchange will do much to restore confidence."

Willard's win at Havana is to be welcomed for the reason. It will perhaps relegate Jack Johnson to obscurity. Johnson is not a "champion" of prood. Mentally he is of a low grade, and morally he ranks still lower. It is not wholesome for a man of his stamp whose mental lapses are notorious, to be held in admiration by any class and exploited as a popular hero.

Kingston Standard: "It is all very well for the liberals to be trying to make out that the men connected with the Canadian Car scandal are not all Conservatives. Green is not content to either party and Liberals have been just as keen to get in as their opponents. The work of the Parliamentary Committee proves this."

Hamilton Spectator: "Mine and more the United States will learn that the British Government, with centuries of the best statecraft behind it, may be relied upon to do what is best under any set of circumstances. So long as there is a genuine heart-bond between the two great English-speaking peoples, no divergence leading to more than a little temporary till misunderstandings, are cleared away, can possibly arise."

Hamilton Herald: "Some silly contemporaries are clamoring for prohibition in Ontario because Lloyd George has threatened drastic measures to cope with the evil of drunkenness, which is interfering with the production of war supplies. When drunkenness becomes a serious matter in Ontario as to interfere with production in any important branch of industry, it will be time to turn to prohibition."

Toronto World: "How to deal with these submarine pirates is a perplexing problem for the British Admiralty. Apparently, the most effective defence lies in the protection of the territorial water routes by means of flotillas of fast destroyers from their speed comparatively free from the torpedo attack, and at the same time ready to ram any armed craft immediately on its emergence. Magnificent work is the work of the Imperial navy it was not altogether prepared against guerilla warfare at sea as conducted by the modern Hun."

Immigrants Skipped

After Accepting Positions on Three Frontenac Farms

KINGSTON, April 7.—Immigration Officer George Hunter is on the "war path" after three immigrants who have skipped from Kingston. The three men came to Kingston from Montreal. One acreed to go and work for J. Silbey, Loughboro. Another secured a position with Herbert Buck, Loughboro, while the third was to go to the home of Michael Mack, Storrington. It appears when the men arrived in Montreal they immediately sought work. When the immigration officer at that point saw that they were willing to work on the farm he immediately purchased them tickets at the expense of the Government and sent them on to Kingston.

When they arrived in the city Mr. Hunter took them in charge and secured them places on farms. After he had been in conversation with them for some time, they said that they wanted to go up street, but would be back by the time the men arrived to take them out to the farms. From the time they left the immigration rooms, they have not been seen or heard of. Trouble awaits them if they are found.

PIONEER PASSES

Daniel Aykroyd Lived 88 Years in One Place.

Very few men have lived so long in one place as did the late Daniel Aykroyd of Loborough, who died on March 30th, 1915, at the age of 88 years and 8 months.

He was born on the farm not more than five or six rods from the place where he breathed his last breath and lived there practically all his life. He was the eldest son of the late Samuel Aykroyd, who came with his father to Kingston from Hudson, New York, about 1810, at the age of, ten or twelve years. The grandfather of the subject of this sketch came from Yorkshire, England. He was the descendant of a long line of yeomen, whose ancestry has been traced back to the fourteenth century.

The original surnames is an interesting subject. Some have thought Aykroyd a foreign name, but it is not. The original name was "Oakrod", or the place of the oak tree.

Bulgaria Playing Double Game

ROME, April 7.—Commenting upon Bulgaria's reply to Serbia's protest growing out of the Valadievo incident (the attack by Bulgarian irregulars upon Serbian frontier guards) The Tribuna says the claim must have displeased the Triple entente powers while reviving the hopes of the central Empires and Turkey. The newspaper thinks that Bulgaria is negotiating with the allies, while at the same time maintaining intimate relations with Austria and Germany.

Bulgaria, hoping for a realization of the provisions of the treaty of San Stefano, The Tribuna declares, "is playing a most audacious game which may cause all sorts of surprises."

The treaty of San Stefano, to which The Tribuna refers, was signed on March 3, 1878, at San Stefano, a small port on the Sea of Marmora, west of Constantinople, and put an end to the Russo-Turkish war. Under its provisions a principality of Bulgaria was to be created extending from the Danube to the Aegean; Serbia and Montenegro were recognized as independent. The provisions of the treaty were greatly altered, however, by the Congress of Berlin, June-July, 1878. Some of the territory which Bulgaria was to obtain under this treaty was awarded to her as the result of the last Balkan wars.

FIGHTERS MADE SPEECHES

Willard Sale, "If I Could Speak I Would Not Fight"

HAVANA, April 7.—Willard and Johnson were presented last night with handsome gold watches as souvenirs of their battle, the gifts coming from "citizens of Havana."

Willard, called upon for a speech, first refused, but finally got up and declared, "If I could speak, I would not be fighting."

This was Willard's second speech in Havana, the first one being shortly after his arrival, when he was called upon in a theatre. Then he said simply, "I'll do my best April 5th."

Johnson last night delivered his customary breezy speech, declaring: "The best man won. I would not belittle Willard's man's accomplishment, and wish Willard all the luck he would wish himself."

Trainers Al Willard and Jack Curley presented Johnson with a loving cup, and citizens also presented Curley with a watch.

MOTHERS! DO YOU KNOW

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. Prove Zam-Buk to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, wounds, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other form of preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. All these virtues have proved it.

Corns Are Out-of-Date

They Indicate Methods Which Are Obsolete Now

Folks who have corns are folks who pare them, or use liquids, or some other old-time treatment known as "corn-dodgers."

Most folks don't keep corns now. When one appears they apply a Blue-jay plaster. The pain stops instantly. In 48 hours the corn disappears forever.

A famous chemist found this way to end corns without pain or soreness. Now millions use it. Fully half the corns that grow are ended as soon as they appear.

There is no excuse for corns. You can't prevent them, maybe, but you can remove them quickly. There will be no lasting corns on any feet when all folks know of Blue-jay.

How Calais Was Barred to Desperate Attack

Wounded Officer Tells How British Held Thousands of Huns from Calais

MONTREAL, April 7.—A letter from an officer who is now recovering from serious wounds has been received in Montreal and tells how 800 British soldiers barred the Kaiser's road to Calais and held back less than 600 of the English "Tommies" charged and drove back a force of Germans twenty times their number. It is due to this gallant charge that the Germans failed to reach Calais last October.

The letter in part is as follows:

"Our force, consisting of 2,400 men comprising the Scots Guards, the South Wales Borderers and the Welsh and Queen's regiments, had hastily constructed trenches across the village of Gheluvelt. This village is on the road to Ypres, and on the day when the German forces tried to reach Calais our thinned regiments successfully held back 15,000 of the Kaiser's men who fought fiercely.

No quarter was given the British. Savagely the Prussians stabbed about them. Bayonets were thrust into dead and living, and many an English soldier but wounded by a Prussian bullet was murdered by a Prussian bayonet.

On the left the Scots Guards still held their line, and on the right the Queen's were at bay, and before the enemy could advance they had first to deal with these gallant remnants of gallant regiments. But now the Worcesters had arrived. An officer of the South Wales Borderers, the old 24th, which had gained undying fame at Rorke's Drift, had gathered to him himself found and guided the Worcesters to the hard-fought field.

The Englishmen were only three companies strong, but these scarce did men charged right through the shotswept streets of Gheluvelt, right up to the last trenches. Armed into the midst of the German host and the Germans turned and fled—fled when the odds at this moment were more than twenty to one in their favor, and fleeing, too, for ever their change of breaking through Calais. Had they withstood that desperate charge, had they not been borne down upon the Englishmen, sheer weight of numbers would have carried them through to Calais road. But they fell back—back behind their original position, and were never again able to break British lines.

Of the 500 Worcesters who went to the charge but 200 unwounded men answered the roll-call when the field was won, and of the 2,400 British soldiers hale and whole when morning broke, but 800 lived to tell of that great fight.

LIFTS IN NERO'S PALACE

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—The palace of Nero had three elevators.

In the year 6 A.D. an enormous tank was established in Rome on all intents in and 64,000 men.

The hobble skirt was one of dame fashions decrees in the days of Moses.

These and many other startling facts going to show that life among the ancients was not so different from that of modern times were brought out by Prof. Camden M. Cobern, explorer and archaeologist, who has just returned from a trip to Palestine. He began a series of lectures on the archaeological discoveries today in the Arch Street Methodist Episcopal church.

Professor Cobern pointed out that the Jews had three different systems of shorthand reporting in the first century, and that there was a regular court a shorthand reporter or clerk sat on each side of the Judge. Many of the Roman emperors had "stenographers" with them on their travels.

Other advantages enjoyed by the ancients, according to Professor Cobern, follows:

In St. Paul's time there were seventy-five unions in Ephesus, and a struggle between capital and labor must have been waged even then.

There were several monopolies in the first century, the greatest of all being the oil business. The "trust" dealt in olive oil and the like.

There also were monopolies in eggs, perfumes, and bricks.

As to bonus, Professor Cobern says he has read in manuscripts dug from ancient tombs and houses of a Roman who spent the equivalent of $12,000,000 upon decorations for his house. Another plutocrat spent $90,000,000 in one year. Nero on one occasion spent $175,000 for roses on his banquet tables. The roses were brought from Egypt.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 30th, 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been giving doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people in the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same Old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Prosperity for Canada With End of War

Man in Touch With French and Egyptian Governments Is Optimistic

"I am confident that in the rush of prosperity that is bound to follow the finish of this great world struggle, Canada will participate to a large extent. The boom will not come right after the conclusion of the war, but will take some time, probably two years. During this time emigration to Canada will be very limited, because the men will be needed over at the other side. In two years time, however, the rush to Canada will be enormous, and I firmly believe that in five years time, Montreal and Toronto will be cities of over a million population."

This opinion was voiced by Mr. Jules Ratzkowski, of Paris and Cairo, expert advisor to the French and Egyptian Governments, who is in the city on a visit.

Big Thing for Trade

In an interview M. Ratzkowitski said the war would kill the "Made in Germany" cry, and the commercial standing in the world would be destroyed for ever. The allied countries and Canada especially would share in the trade that has up to this time been hers. It would then be a case of "Made in Great Britain", "Made in France", and "Made in Canada."

Has Cheerful View.

M. Ratzkowski spoke cheerfully of the progress of the war. He voiced the opinion that the great conflict now being waged could not continue much after the month of July. This is not only his own opinion, but the same opinion is expressed by the prominent people of Paris and the officers of the French army. The war, according to M. Ratzkowski, was not an ordinary war, but a gigantic siege, which is slowly but surely coming to a climax.

Germany has used up all her gold and her paper money is now worthless. She cannot continue long, because her vitality has been all used up. Another two or three months will see her end.

Maxine Elliot Tells of Pitiful Condition of Refugees

DUNKIRK, France, April 7.—Still vigorously pushing her relief work close to the battle lines in Flanders, Maxine Elliott reports finding the Belgian refugees "stuffed like sardines in the barns, even in the pigsties and henhouses—in fact, any place that has a roof."

"I have still not been able to find any shelter for my ambulance within a radius of ten miles," she said in a correspondent who found her on that vehicle, axle deep in mud and dripping with rain.

"I staff the ambulance full daily with food and clothing," she continued, "and make the relief round of as many cases as I can.

"I can hardly describe to you the misery—condition of these poor refugees," she continued. "Only when we have clothed twelve families from top to toe, from ten to fourteen people in each family, and it is impossible further then to find shelter and they are stuffed like sardines in the barns, even in the pigsties and henhouses—in fact, in any place that has a roof.

"In a house close by eighty soldiers sleep on the floor, and in a tiny room adjoining are fragments of seven families, fifteen people in all. Two of the children are down with typhoid, one on the floor and one in an old biscuit box, and this is the sort of thing we encounter daily. We have managed to make a great improvement in conditions though it is impossible to house them any better. There is not enough room for the army, and as many civilians as possible are sent away constantly, and when they come on—shelled out of their homes, and bid fend about from one wretched place to another.

"What horror, horror, everywhere the glorious thing called war brings in its train. We see nothing but and sights and yet the people themselves are not sad. It is surprising what people can live through. There is a family of five living in a sandcart, close by and have been there five months! They have roofed the top over with sacking and a side or two was left there they tuck themselves away and the soldiers feed them.

SIGHT OF THE LIVING SADDER THAN DEAD

Wounded Were Deserted—Over-Worked German Surgeon Amputated Limbs Without Anaesthetics—Saw no Armed Enemy

(Montreal Gazette)

The sight of two thousand dead men on a battlefield, the majority German foes, but a goodly number of his own French compatriots, was not nearly so trying on the nerves as the spectacle of thousands upon thousands of helpless refugees fleeing before the advance of the Germans upon Paris. This is one of the most vivid impressions brought back from the war zone by Mr. Pierre Chevassu, a former member of The Gazette staff, who reached Montreal on Saturday. Mr. Chevassu was one of thousands of reservists hurrying forward by forced marches to join their regiments just at the time when General Joffre, by ordering his troops to make a determined stand on the Marne on September 9th, allowed the army of Paris to come out and strike the Germans on the flank, forcing General Von Kluck to change his course and finally to retreat. The reservists were unable to overtake their corps before the crucial battle was fought, but they saw enough of its aftermath to give them a very real idea of the meaning of war.

Mr. Chevassu, who left Journalistic work to become Mayor Martin's secretary immediately after the election of last year, left Montreal as soon as the call came for reservists and rejoined the colors in France before the end of August. With his fellow-reservists he travelled in the path of the retreating troops, and on reaching his regiments saw life in the trenches. Of his experience he retains a rather painful recollection, as repeated attacks of bronchitis, due to exposure, compelled him to obtain his discharge from active service.

Mr. Chevassu, seen on Saturday at his home on De la Roche street, stated that the roadways and fields over which he marched in August were strewn with dead bodies and empty champagne bottles. "We reached the Marne on September 11th, two days after the crisis of the battle," said Mr. Chevassu, "and from Connonte to Vermon, a distance of about fifteen miles I saw nothing but dead Germans and a smaller number of French soldiers. We were advancing then, and had no time to stop for dead or dying. The Germans had raided every champagne cellar they could find and they simply shed the empty bottles on their retreat. I believe I saw millions of empty champagne bottles in a territory covering ten miles. It was nothing but German dead and the spirals of bottles everywhere. In the department of the Marne they left the houses behind them in an awful condition. When we got to the Marne the Germans were but a few hours ahead, but we were delayed ten hours waiting for the building of a pontoon bridge upon which we crossed. When we reached a village the people would tell us the Germans had left the place running."

Wounded Lay With Dead

Mr. Chevassu describes striking scenes at Fere champenoise, where a battle had been fought on the hills overlooking the town. The fields were filled with the dead, and in each apparently vacant house a drunken German would be found. At the little village of Morin Petit, eight miles from Champenoise, Mr. Chevassu saw 2,000 dead in one field, the grim harvest of a battle fought three days previously. "Some were not quite dead, but we could do nothing," said Mr. Chevassu, "as we had no ambulances. The Germans had taken their loss seriously wounded, and abandoned the others with the dead. It was a terrible sight, I can tell you. The bodies had turned black and the fighting, which had continued for four days must have been terrific. The roads we traversed for eight days were red with the-blood of these men. I shall never forget the position of one German. He was an oldish man and well built. He was sitting partly upright—dead. His right hand was supporting his head, and his left hand was clasped on his heart. You know, the Germans are very fond of pork, and among the many things we found on that battlefield, was the dressed pork they were not to eat. We noticed two fine carriages they had raided, and the bodies of two horses and horses were mingled the dead soldiers everywhere. There was one sign of mercy, which was the appearance of the burial parties, who were already beginning to dig the big trench for the blackened bodies. The battle of Champenoise was fought twice, and even when we got their, we were under a long distance artillery firing. Not a house was left standing in Morin Petit.

Fire From Unseen Foe

After forced marching Mr. Chevassu said, he joined his regiment, the 32nd Infantry, with 250 other reserves, all of whom formed part of the 9th army corps. This corps was later mentioned in despatches. Referring to the two spells of three days each which he had spent in the trenches, Mr. Chevassu said that he had not fired a shot and had not seen an armed German though he had been under fire himself. "They fired at us, but as I could not see them, there was nothing to do but shoot at." He saw many wounded Germans, and many German prisoners on the march.

After having left the trenches, and between attacks of illness, Mr. Chevassu served as a despatch bicycle rider. After his first illness, he returned to the second line of trenches, where life was more endurable, but more cold and fever came on forcing him to enter the hospital at Bourmedieu, where a German Taube, either by design or accident, dropped a few bombs, despite a large Red Cross flag spread on the ground as a signal to the hirmon. Fortunately no one was hurt. At Fere In Francois, the sisters in charge of the hospital informed Mr. Chevassu that the Germans had had 15,000 wounded men in the hospital during the eight days' retreat from the Marne. So great was the number of wounded that the German surgeons amputated arms and legs without the merciful relief of anaesthetics. The agony of the wounded men, said the sisters, and their terrible cries were awful to recall. Many of the men left behind and the hospital mortality numbered 100 a day. It was the opinion of the sister that many of these might have been saved with proper treatment. One effect of the lack of care was the outbreak of the dreaded typhoid fever.

Mr. Chevassu said that all over France are heard words of praise for the English soldiers. Everyone expressed that they were not more numerous at the start of the campaign. But they are given unstinted praise for their splendid work in the retreat from Mons. The estimate of the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail was that the English army lost 20,000 men in the series of heavy battles they fought at Mons, Le Cateau, and St. Quentin. The more extended French line offered their biggest battle at Charleroi, and the heroism of the rear guard in holding off the Germans until the retreat came for a first stand is now a matter of history. "If the French people regret that the English veterans were not able to do more than to stay the German advance from Mons, they now realize that the English army is doing more than they could ever expect," said Mr. Chevassu.

INTEREST IN CANADIANS.

The arrival of the Canadian contingent created the greatest interest. The appearance of the men and the belief that they are all good horsemen were points that were most often heard in the comments made upon them.

"There is one thing the Germans did not do," said Mr. Chevassu, "and that let the vineyards alone. They took the champagne, but they spared the vines.

The heroism of the French women is mentioned by every traveller from France, and Mr. Chevassu says it has taken a practical turn. The women are always knitting, and it is not unusual to see fashionable ladies, while waiting for the patriotic sermons in La Madeleine, in Paris, pull out their knitting and work away quietly. They come sometimes two hours ahead of time to be sure of a seat for the stirring discourses of Abbe Sertillange, who is the most prominent preacher in Paris just now. In the big dress-making establishments the women, while waiting to be served, ply their knitting needles constantly. Mr. Chevassu affirms that his wife is busy as many others that a deep religious feeling has awed awakened in France. Whether it will last he cannot foresee, as it is human nature to fear God more when in danger than when the danger is passed. "But I can tell you this much," said Mr. Chevassu, "soldiers in the trenches wear their religious medals on the outside of their uniforms, and no one ever thinks of laughing, as would have been done before. I was told by an officer that before charging the French soldiers kiss the ground and go at the enemy with yells." Mr. Chevassu exhibited a pious medal which he still wears, and which he wore at the front. It was given him by his mother.

Though he was obliged by army regulations to hand over all souvenirs, Mr. Chevassu managed to secrete one which he has with him. It is a bit of German helmet which still bears crimson stains. Another souvenir if a small canvas bag used for carrying test peps, which is stamped with the number of the German army corps, the regiment, and the individual number of the Teuton who lost it in the Marne battle. A large German coat, also a souvenir, was necessarily left in France. Mr. Chevassu says that every German soldier carries a prayer book containing the official invocations for the health of the Kaiser and the success of the German arms.

One little incident which Mr. Chevassu relates has its amusing side, and the Germans, evidently came down into France with the idea of staying for good, brought fire barges laden with wine to the canal of the Marne. "In their retreat they sank three barges, but we raised them and drank the healths of the retreating Germans."

Mr. Chevassu, who was accompanied home to Montreal by his wife, whom he married in Montreal, was in Paris during the 24 hours when the German Zeppelins dropped bombs on the city with slight damage. The Parisians showed little fear and little more than afraid of the bombs. Mr. Chevassu's father, who retired from the French army some years ago with the rank of colonel, and who served in the Franco-Prussian war as a lieutenant, has returned to active service and is engaged in looking after supplies.

"As to the future, the French people are full of confidence," said Mr. Chevassu. The barracks are filled with soldiers waiting to go to the front and with the expected advance this spring, when Kitchener's army is ready, we expect the end of long months of war in France anyway, and perhaps out of Belgium as well."

How to Care for Your Complexion

There is no truer saying than that "beauty is only skin deep." Good features lose their charm under a sallow or blotchy skin, and poor features are glorified by a beautiful complexion.

A "Your Complexion" has just been issued by Nyal's and contains many helpful hints and beauty hints, including proper methods of massage. It can be had for the asking at the Nyal Agency Drug Store and you should call or telephone for it. Among other things it points out is that diet, sleep, ventilation, exercise and other things we cannot escape are continually wearing against our complexions. Get a 25c or 50c jar of Nyal's Face Cream and convince yourself of its cleansing and refreshing and beautifying qualities. It is greaseless, is rapidly absorbed by the skin, leaves no stickiness, and gives a pleasant, smooth, cool sensation, quickly removing the irritation produced by wind and weather.

All Nyal preparations are justly famous and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream which, we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone as for your copy of this book which contains most valuable information.

GERMAN TOYS IN BRITAIN

LONDON, April 7.—The Times says: "The importation of German toys into England appears still to be carried on. According to statements of British factory owners, the German toy trade is entering Britain under the guise of American-made articles.

"For a long time past German-made dolls classed as American are said to have been shipped from Italian ports to America, then reshipped by an American German house to England. These articles are sold in this country at a comparatively low price.

"It is asserted that subsidized Germans have gone to Italy found German goods there, and sent them to agents in America for transshipment. Children sets described as American made are in other places believed to be of German origin.

"The United States seems to have been used in this way owing to the increasing difficulty of getting goods through Holland, although supplies are said still to be coming through the latter country.

There will be great joy in the South over the victory of Jess Willard. How Southerners do love a negro!

Atlantic City Porters Strike Small Wages

Will Be On Job Little And No Wages Paid Some

CHICAGO, April 7.—The first Government investigation of wages and conditions of employment of Pullman car porters and collectors was made here today by the United States Commission on Industrial Relations. E. S. Hungerford, General Manager of the Pullman Company, was on the stand most of the day, and was questioned by Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of the commission.

In the first fifteen years of a sleeping car porter's service, Mr. Hungerford said, he received $27.50 a month in wages. At the end of fifteen years more and after seven and a half months' service he got $30 a month.

In the first year of service, Mr. Hungerford said, a porter buys $36.00 worth of uniforms a year, but thereafter the company takes on this burden. A bonus system gives men who good records $5 extra month's pay a year. They are eligible for a relief fund after five years and to the pension list after twenty years in the employment of the company, but these privileges are flexible and often applied to exceptional cases, such as disability resulting from train accidents.

Mr. Walsh read many communications from withholding the writer's name complaining of the conditions of employment and low compensation. One writer remarked that a porter's wages would not buy his meals on some runs.

Mr. Walsh brought up the subject of tips.

"Do you expect the public to pay the difference between those wages and a living wage?" he asked the witness.

"No. I don't think that was considered," the latter replied.

"You thought them satisfied with these salaries?"

"No. I wouldn't say that we received no expressions of dissatisfaction regarding them," replied Mr. Hungerford.

"Is $27.50 enough to pay any man for a month's work?" continued Mr. Walsh.

"We can get all the men we want at that rate," was the reply.

The witness was asked as to the history of the tipping system, and replied that it did not originate with the Pullman Company.

"It seems always to have been a general condition. It didn't originate with us. However, if anybody is deserving of tips, it is the sleeping car porter. Some of them are deities."

It appeared from the testimony that porters are permitted generally to retire at 11 to 12 p.m. and must go on duty again at 5 p.m. This applies to seventy-two hour transcontinental runs, as it does to short ones.

Mr. Walsh read from a book of rules by P. C. Johnson, District Superintendent of the Pullman Company at Omaha, entitled "What to Do and What Not to Do." In this compilation it appeared that porters were required to shine shoes, and the witness said they bought their own polish. The porter standing at the steps receiving passengers is instructed to "look pleasant, speak low to keep the passenger in the impression that it is a mere condescension on your part that he is allowed to ride at all." When the passenger makes a request not contained in the book the company the porter is not to reply that the company rules forbid it, but is instructed to say that the matter is outside his jurisdiction.

A system of small fines for the disappearance of linen was maintained to a considerable extent. Last year, the linen, frequently carried away by careless passengers, cost the company $170,000, the witness said.

With advancing years comes consolation, Ronall Grderless a specially good laxative for ageing people." Sold only by The Ronall Store, 10c., 25c. & 50c. boxes.

LATEST GERMAN DEVICE

PARIS, April 7.—The Petit Journal reveals the latest German device for obtaining information of French losses, regiments and movements of troops. Numerous families of French prisoners imprisoned in Germany have received letters, evidently written under pressure, declaring that the writers are well treated and fed and also asking information about "my regiment, which has suffered so grestly", or "my dear colonel, who I hear is wounded", or "where is dear comrade ——, of whom I have no news."

The letters usually end with a request for food, or still more significant, a copper saucepan.

The Journal warns its readers against replying to such queries, whose motive, it says, is obvious.

Earthquake shocks were felt in Italy Monday. But the big shock is yet to come.

There was a lot of "busted" colored gentlemen in North America this week.

FACTS ABOUT EGYPT

Thanks to Britain, the Country is Prosperous as Never Before

Excluding the Province reconquered in the Soudan, Egypt has an area of 400,000 square miles, just about equal to the area of the Province of Ontario; but only fourteen thousand of the four hundred thousand square miles of Egyptian territory are settled. And yet on that comparatively small area there is a population of twelve millions. The settled portion of Egypt is only half the extent of New Brunswick, but its population is about one-third greater than the population of all Canada.

For almost the third of a century Egypt practically enjoyed British rule, the fruits of which are now being enjoyed by the people of the Ancient Land. Taxation has been reduced, and order maintained; justice administered; industries fostered, great public works constructed, and a general uplift of the people brought about since the blighting effects of Turkish oppression and corruption have been removed, the people of Egypt have enjoyed in peace the fruits of their labor. The principal products of the fruits are agricultural, for fully two-thirds of the population are on the land, and everything else centers on the cultivators. A cleverly devised scheme of financial assistance enables these cultivators to improve their condition. They receive advances from the Agricultural Bank up to the equivalent of about $1,500, the loan being limited to fifty per cent. of the selling value of the land. To this policy is due to a large extent the development in recent years of the country's commerce and industry, and a steadily increasing prosperity.

The cultivated area can never be extended beyond the limit determined by being watered by the Nile, but this region has been enlarged by irrigation systems that are wonders of engineering skill and workmanship—blessings conferred upon Egypt by her British overlords.

There are 1,500 miles of state-owned railways, and 800 of light agricultural railways owned by companies. The value of the imports and exports are each of the sub-tropics fourish in Egypt, for she produces cotton and sugar as well as wheat and other cereals.

Apart from the commercial advantages accruing from the possession and now the ownership as well of Egypt, the holding of the country is of great importance to Britain, because it controls the Suez Canal, an essential part of Britain's shortest route to India. Egypt's principal city, Cairo, has a population of 560,000, and Alexandria, the second city, larger than Montreal, while the second city, Alexandria, has a population of almost four hundred thousand.

Supplies For the Army

In one month there were issued to the troops of the British Expeditionary Force 10,000 pounds of dubbing for boots, 12,000,000 pounds of meat, 4,000,000 pounds of socks, and 100,000 pairs of trousers and clothing. There were also miles of telephone wire and 510 telephone stations.

THE FIELD TELEPHONE

The field telephone plays an important part in the operations of modern armies on active service. By means of it the whole army is kept in touch with the headquarters, and orders that in the old days would take perhaps an hour or more to send from one part of the fighting line to another by an orderly officer, can now be transmitted in a couple of seconds.

The line is laid in sections, each section being of greatly varying length, from a mile to ten miles. At each end of the section is a telephone by the message and communicates the order as receives over the line to the officer at the next section.

Directly the places for headquarters is fixed, after any movement of the army, the telephone lineamen begin laying the lines. This duties during the war rarely. I have seen the lines laid, from one spring of the line to the other and connected up with headquarters in an hour or less. Under the right and left wings the lines are kept apart, says an observer.

In addition to the field cables, the wire has sometimes been carried out under tremendous difficulties. I saw with a party of lineamen who were laying the line along a ridge of high ground about a couple of miles in length when the enemy suddenly began to shell the ridge.

This was about four o'clock in the morning, when it was just getting light. We had to finish the last quarter of a mile under severe fire, and we did it in record time.

This illustration shows the extremely simple little contrivance by which the soldiers in the trenches are enabled to see what is taking place in front of them without exposing themselves to the fire of the German snipers.

The First Ironclad

The first ironclad was H.M.S. Warrior, launched in September, 1860. Her sides were unprotected, but the middle of the ship was "armored" with 4½ inches of iron, backed by 18 inches of teak, for this was found to resist any shot from the 68-pounder gun, then the most powerful gun in use by the navy.

SAVAGES FINE COOKS

Negresses of Interior Africa Perform Wonders With Jungle Herbs

Probably few people suspect Central Africa of harboring some of the most wonderful cooks in the world, but the fact was announced by Mr. M. French Sheldon, a well known traveller and explorer, in the course of a lecture at London.

"These African negresses are the most wonderful and fastidious cooks in the world," said the lecturer; "their cooking is marvellous, and they know practically every tree and plant which can be used as a flavor. For instance, the negress chef is in no way dismayed by the lack of onions and pepper; she merely gathers the bark of a certain tree and scrapes the inner side to get the one, and searches for a particular plant, which, rightly used, produces the flavor of the other; and her skill and patience in blending these flavors and concocting fresh dishes are unbounded. With these powers at her command, it is scarcely to be wondered at that wives in Central Africa are at great demand."

The possession of many wives is, in fact, a sign of wealth, and as their industry is by no means confined to the kitchen, the chief who owns 1,500 wives is really the owner of an army of workers, who cook, wash, garden, and otherwise justify their existence by performing tasks usually regarded as men's work. Marriage laws are rigorous and some faults or crimes are punishable by death, but childless wife may find herself returned to her father, provided the gifts she brought her onsead go with her. The only consolation she has is that her position in no way changes her market value as a wife if another suitor should happen to present himself. Her matrimonial experience is considered rather a desirable asset as having taught her exactly how a wife should behave.

Casualties Among Canadian Forces

3RD BATTALION

Died of wounds—April 7, Lance Corporal Richard Roy Soare, Ingress Abbey Military Hospital, Greenhithe, Next of kin, Mrs. R. Roy Soare, 2,61 Waverly street, Annex, Montreal.

14TH BATTALION

Died of wounds—March 31, Private Joseph Martin. Next of kin, Mrs. Joseph Martin, 209 Manufacturers' street, Point St. Charles, Montreal.

Wounded—March 26, Private J. Billen. Next of kin, Louis Ballatt, Rue Louis de Chateau Grasse, Bernon, Belgium.

Private Alfred St. Hilaire, Bawal-Pindi General Hospital, Boulogne, gunshot wound in neck. Next of kin, George St. Hilaire, 47 Grand street, Quebec.

107TH BATTALION

Stratfordite Wounded

Stratford, April 8.—A letter received in the city today tells of the wounding of Private Percy Bradnam, a Stratford volunteer. In a night attack Bradnam was shot through the right leg, the bullet penetrating the bone. He was sent back to Shornecliffe, and is rapidly recovering.

(Canadian Press Special)

OTTAWA, April 8.—The casualties issued by the Militia Department this morning are as follows:

Fourth Battalion—Wounded, Pte. D. Munn, Edmonton, Alta.

Thirteenth Battalion—Died of his wounds, Pte. Alexander Auld.

Wounded and missing—Pte. Arthur Jones, Montreal.

Thirteenth Battalion—Seriously ill, pneumonia, Pte. Herman Victor Ruth, Algeda, Sask.

No. two company divisional train—Seriously ill, Corporal Herbert Lee, appendix abscess, Belfast, Ireland.

LONDON, April 8.—An additional casualty list published today contains the names of 346 non-commissioned officers and men killed, 763 wounded, making a total in two days of 2251 killed, wounded and missing, these evidently form a portion of the cost of the Neuve Chapelle Victory.

Even the bees are getting into the dreadnought class. A Pennsylvania hen has laid an eight inch egg.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

Condensed News Items for Busy Readers.

CYCLE PUMP FOUND

A cycle pump found on the street by the police is at the police station awaiting an owner.

BUSINESS PLACES INSECURE

Last night the police during their round of inspection, found two business insecure, and made them secure.

DEATH OF INFANT

Elma May, aged one year and six months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cope, residing on Mill street, died this morning.

THE MARKET

There were a number of our country friends in attendance upon the market to-day. Prices for produce offered for sale were same as on Saturday.

FRIGHTENED HORSE

A horse, attached to a buggy, started to run away on Front street this morning, but fortunately the animal was stopped before it had proceeded far or done any damage.

FOUND A PURSE

Mrs. Barker, who resides in the Township of Sidney, reported to the police that she found from the street in the city a purse containing a small sum of money and had same in her possession.

SOCIABLE EVENING

Under the auspices of the Club in connection with St. Michael's Academy, a euchre party and dance was held last evening in the assembly room of the Academy. There was a large number present and an enjoyable time was spent by all. The object of the proceeds was to provide the Bugle Band with necessary equipment.

TWO AUSTRIANS DETAINED

Sergt. Campbell in command of the military police in connection with the 39th Battalion, this afternoon in company with some of the members of the police force visited the G. T. R. Station and placed under surveillance two Austrians, named Karl Kubbrich and Vaso Cherip. The foreigners, going from Trenton here, and through an interpreter claimed they were looking for work. The two men were held in detention pending further investigation, etc., to the city could thoroughly be established.

THEFT OF GRAIN

Charles Vanorman was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with disposing of 1 1-2 bushels of clover seed, the property of Mr. Jas. S. Hamilton of Thurlow. It appears that Mr. Hamilton sold the seed, as stated, at a place where Vanorman was employed, and the latter disposed of it without authority. The accused admitted the offence, and the magistrate, owing to the fact that Vanorman was a married man with a family, allowed him his liberty, upon promise to reimburse Mr. Hamilton and pay all costs in the case. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown in the case.

DEATH OF AGED RESIDENT

Mr. George Reeves, an aged and most respected resident of this city, passed away last evening at the family residence, 212 Charles street, after being ill for about two weeks. Deceased, who was in his 80th year, was born here on the 7th of June, 1835, and lived here all his life, excepting some ten years, which he spent in Kingston. By occupation he was a carpenter, and many of the better buildings in Belleville are evidence of his work and skill. Mr. Reeves had been a devoted member of Bridge street Methodist church for upwards of 70 years, having survived his father as a member of the Official Board of that church. He was a son of the late Mr. Wm. Reeves. An aged widow, two sons and two daughters survive. The sons are Dr. C. M. of Tweed, and J. D. of Toronto. The daughters are Misses Minnie and Maud at home.

Buried With Military Honors

Remains of Private Driver of the 39th Battalion Laid Away in a Soldier's Grave—An Impressing Scene

With all the military honors which could possibly have been accorded, the remains of the late Private Driver, a member of the 39th Battalion, were yesterday afternoon laid away in a soldier's grave. The 39th Battalion, under command of Col. Preston, turned out in a body, being between 1,000 and 1,100 strong, and the men certainly made a fine appearance.

At Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, the burial services of the Anglican church were conducted by Rev. Capt. Spencer, who is attached to the Battalion. The officers, bearers and a number of the men were present and stood at attention whilst the services were being held. The body was reposing in a suitable black cloth case, and the latter was covered with a Union Jack, and the cap and side arms of the deceased were also upon the casket. A beautiful floral wreath, the contribution of the officers, was also placed upon the casket. At the conclusion of the service the body was carried by six comrades to the hearse, which was also draped on top with the Union Jack. The cortege then proceeded slowly down Front street to the cemetery. A firing party under command of Major McLaughlin of C Company, led the procession, followed by the Fifteenth Regimental Band rendering a solemn tune. Behind the hearse the members of the Battalion followed. It was the largest and most impressive funeral cortege ever seen in Belleville.

The band and soldiers marched to the cemetery, where the committal services were rendered by Rev. Capt. Spencer. The firing party discharged three volleys into the air and the last post was sounded by a bugler. The bearers were Privates Hill, Dailey, Southgate, Cooper, Harte and Edge, who were members of the 15th Battalion Company, to which deceased was attached.

During the progress of the cortege through Front street, that thoroughfare was lined by citizens and many were the expressions of regret heard at the demise of Driver, who had enlisted to fight for his King and country.

BASKETBALL GAME AT THE Y.M.C.A.

In the Sunday School Basket League game last night at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, way Intermediates defeated St. Andrews. St. Andrews were handicapped in not having Erastus Grant to play for them, he being at his house in Tweed. Art. Brown, as sub., played a good game, but has had no practice at hockey. The West Belleville boys showed up good in the combination. Herrity starring in his conduction, while Dunneberry and "Twigs" Woodley located the basket for most of the points made. Ross centre, played a great game, and was all over his check, and also figured in the scoring. Russell Woodley, played defence to perfection. Jackson, especially in the last half, played his elusive check "Twigs" for all he was worth, and his partner in defence, Kel Roberts, was pulling the ball down out of the atmosphere every time it came his way. Brock and Penn at forward for the St. Andrews played like trojans, but were unable to work the ball to the basket because of the lightning combination of the little West Belleville team. Lineup:

St. Andrews—(4) Brown, centre; Brock Penn, forwards; Roberts and Jackson, defence.

West Belleville—(6) Ross, centre; "Twigs" Woodley, Dunneberry forward; Russell Woodley and Herity defence.

This Friday night West Belleville and Bridge St. Intermediates play.

In the Juniors, Tabernacle and St. Andrews and West Belleville and Baptist play.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 640 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after date of entry, (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivation of fifty acres extra.

A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

MAN WHO FEEDS ARMY ONCE WAS A PRIVATE

General Robertson Showed Outstanding Ability in Managing Transport Affairs in South Africa

"Who's Sir William Robert Robertson?" people asked, when in one of his early despatches, Sir John French paid a tribute to his wonderful capabilities. "The question was asked by the man in the street because Sir William does not work in the limelight. He is not to be found in the fighting line—although in past campaigns he has done his share—directing artillery and infantry; and yet he is one of the most important men in the army, for is he not "the man behind the gun?" as Tommy has prettily put it.

The phrase exactly describes Sir William's work in this war, for it is he who is responsible for the feeding of the army; and the fact that there has been nothing but praise for his superb management of the commissariat is eloquent testimony to the way he has done his work.

Undoubtedly one of the secrets of Sir William's success, particularly in regard to organization and transport, is due to the fact that he knows exactly what "Tommy" wants; for he has been a "Tommy" himself. His career, indeed, is a veritable romance of the army, for he has risen from the ranks. Thirty-seven years ago Sir William, who is a native of Lincolnshire, came to the conclusion that the life of a servant offered little scope for his abilities. Thereupon he enlisted in the 15th Lancers. A raw recruit at nineteen, there seemed little possibility at that time that he would one day be director of Military Training at the War Office, command the Staff College, and ultimately obtain the position of Chief of Staff.

Worked Long Unrewarded

Like Colonel St. John Lane Harrington, Sir Hector Macdonald, the late Major-General Sir Luke O'Connor, V.C., Major Dauncey, of the famous Inniskillings, and other well known "rankers," Sir William threw himself heart and soul into his profession, although it was not until 1888, six years after he enlisted, that he was recommended for a commission, which he got in the 3rd Dragoon Guards.

Even then he might never have been more than a captain had he not seized his great chance, when, in 1897, he appointed railway transport officer in connection with the punitive expedition to quell a turbulent tribe of Pathans who were plundering the Mirzzai Valley. This splendid work he did on this expedition marked him for early promotion, and he fully realized the hopes of his friends in the Chitral Expedition, when he served as field intelligence officer.

It was during this expedition that Sir William Robertson had his narrowest escape from death. His real life and that of forward scout, his Gurkha guard, and, his sword being in the way, he handed it over to a Pathan guide who was riding with him, going himself a little ahead of the party. The next thing he knew was that two shots were fired at him, one of the passing under his arm and neatly clipping off his horse's ear. Turning round he saw that the Pathan who was guiding him had fired the shots, and the next moment the Gurkha scout had shot him through the head with his own sword.

Transport Work in South Africa

Robertson grappled with his opponent, but, noticing two other Indian troopers, who seemed to appear from nowhere, rushing forward to attack him, he was obliged to let his man go and beat a retreat to his Gurkha guard, which was some three or four hundred yards in the rear.

A medal and clasp, the D.S.O., and mention in despatches were Robertson's reward for his work in the Chitral Expedition, and when the South African War broke out it was acknowledged that he was the one man for the job of standing to the transport of food and troops. How he organized their despatch and control is now of this day, and although some sneered at the idea of a "railway" successfully holding such a position, it was recognized by the army generally, when Robertson was appointed Staff Commandant of the Staff College—one of the highest positions in the gift of the army—that it was but a just reward for the good work he is continuing so enormously to the success of Britain's troops on the Continent.

War Coincidences

It is curious to note how long the staff is alphabetical coincidence in figuring generally and also in relation to Robertson's appointments to the present war and their achievements.

It was Lemaus who defended Liege when Berth's stormed Brussels by violating Belgium. It was Beatty who beat the Germans in the Bight and sank the would-be baby-killers in the Blucher. It was Bluedee who sank a spee in the Falklands. It was the Boths with Boers who beat Beyers.

It is also strange how the letter K has figured in the life of Lord Kitchener. His past associates him with Khartoum, the Khedive, the Khalifa, and Kabul—his present with the Kaiser.

To Save the Non-Com.

The sequel to the heroism of Lieutenant R. F. Hancock, of the 1st Devonshires, is, alas! a sad one. He left his trench, although the German guns were belching forth a hail of lead, and going back some sixty yards, over absolutely bare ground, picked up Corporal Warwick, who had fallen, whilst coming up with a party of reinforcements, and conveyed this non-commissioned officer to the cover of a barricade. The lieutenant then returned to his trench, only to be killed later in action.

Prince Arthur of Connaught is named after the Duke of Wellington.

SCIENCE OF BASEBALL

Distance Between Bases and Weight of Balls Not Result of Accident

The fathers of baseball builded better than they knew when they laid out the first diamond and decided upon the weight and size of balls and bats. The popularity of the game as a spectacle depends largely upon its accessibility, and its uncertainty depends entirely upon the relation between the distance to be covered and the ability of the batter to hit the ball, whether propelled by arm or bat.

As every "fan" knows, the bases are 90 feet apart. The fastest time ever made about the bases from home to home was 13 4-5 seconds, and this was during a game. Written records about the bases is fast time, or 3 2-5 seconds between bases with a running start for all except first base. First base has been made from the plate in a hunt and run in 3 1-5 seconds, but the time is very unusual, four seconds being a good time. Ask a "fan" how fast a ball must go at it strikes the ground in the infield before it is fielded safely on the average. He will guess anywhere from 20 to 100 miles an hour. But hold a stopwatch on all batted balls during a game and count only those which are fielded grounders, and you will find that they average about the speed of a fast express train—say 50 miles an hour, or 88 feet per second.

The shortstop will play from 110 to 125 feet from the plate. Suppose he gets an infield grounder 125 feet from the plate. At 88 feet a second it is taken 1.4 seconds to reach him. Allowing 1.2 seconds for the throw to first base, he has 0.9 of a second only in which to make the catch, draw his arm back and throw to first base. Yet more man are thrown out at first base on ground balls fielded by the shortstop than ever beat the throw to the first station! The play is almost always close—so close that one of the differences between a good and a poor first baseman is that the good one will reach far forward to get a ball, thereby gaining the time it takes the ball to travel the five feet he can reach may make the difference between safe and out.

It is because of this delicate balance between time of batted ball and throw, and the ability of a man to run 90 feet, that the baseball authorities are so right in their opinion that the structure, size, and weight of a baseball, and what pitched and batted can play with none but major league balls made by one of two great firms. They know. Less baseball talent, that a fraction of an ounce difference in weight, a fraction of an inch difference in size, may weigh down the balance in favor one way or the other of the batter—and the balance fixed so the uncertainty must be kept as perfect as possible.

TWICE BURIED ALIVE

Lancashire Man Had a Thrilling Experience Duplicated

Our regiment, the 2nd South Lancs., five hundred strong, was entrenched about 150 yards from the German lines. Almost as soon as we arrived we were to have a foretaste of the strength of "Jack Johnson," related Private W. McClure to a correspondent.

We were lying in our trenches enjoying a cigarette, when the boom of a German gun broke on our ears. Sousonne passed the word, "Duck, boys, duck!"—and we ducked. Next moment there was a dull thud, the ground trembled, and the dug-out where I lay concealed caved inward, burying a companion and myself alive.

Hearing muffled groanings, my comrades told me that but for the fact that my head protruded from the mass of debris they would never have discovered me. My poor chum was never found.

My second experience of being buried alive occurred when we were told off to relieve the Gordon Highlanders, who, it appears were hard pressed. The odds against us were too heavy, and again an again we had to retire. Every time the enemy advanced, driving the enemy back, and each time reinforcements. When the roll was called, out of 500 of our regiment only 150 answered the call.

Next morning all was quiet and still, and we could not see the slightest movement among the Germans. We were just congratulating ourselves on having a chance of a little sleep, when "Jack Johnson" rang out his familiar warning.

Suddenly a dull thud shook the earth around us, and I remember no more. My comrades told me they dug me out from a living tomb.

Thus I was twice buried, but still alive.

Vol. 48 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1915. No. 278

Boy Wielded Axe and Then Took Poison

Made Murderous Attack on Woman Aged 77, Following a Disagreement

MONTREAL, April 8—An unusual case is reported from Howick, Que., of the violence of a 15-year-old boy who struck a woman with an axe and then tried to end his own life by swallowing a dose of Paris green. The blow dealt the woman was not fatal, and the boy has so far recovered from the effects of the poison to be able to appear before a magistrate.

The affair which so nearly resulted in a double tragedy occurred on the afternoon of Friday last in the home of Robert Kerr, a farmer living at Riverfield, a small village some distance from Howick. The boy in the case, Ernest Penfold, an orphan who had been living with Kerr for about a year and a half, was left alone on that day with Mrs. Mary Ward, Mrs. Kerr's mother, who is 77 years of age. Mrs. Ward and the boy had some words over certain work which the woman asked young Penfold to do in the afternoon. The boy left the house at 2.30 p.m., but returned a moment later with an axe which he had taken from the shed. The youngster advanced up on the old woman, and before she could move to protect herself, the lad swung the axe and buried its blade in the left side of her neck.

A deep wound was inflicted, but the force of the blow did not cause Mrs. Ward to fall, and when the lad ran from the house after striking the blow she forked the doors and waited the return of Mr. and Mrs. Kerr. A telephone is installed in the house, but the victim did not use it, but only tried to staunch the flow of blood from the wound until the arrival of her son in law and daughter.

The Kerrs returned home at 4.15 found Mrs. Ward growing weak from loss of blood, and called a doctor. Meanwhile they found the boy in the barn and gave him a whipping. Just before the departure of the physician who attended Mrs. Ward, young Penfold was found in his unclothed very ill, having taken a large quantity of Paris green. So large was the dose that the poison acted as its own antidote and made the boy violently sick. The doctor attended the boy and pronounced him out of danger.

A warrant was issued on Tuesday for the lad's arrest and he was taken before Justice of the Peace David Yass, of Howick. The boy admitted having struck the woman, saying he had been afraid of the whipping he knew he would receive when Mrs. Ward told her son-in-law upon his return of their disagreement. He will appear before Magistrate St. Cyr in Valleyfield today, till probably be sent to a reformatory.

Young Penfold was fourteen years of age last September. He was born in Birkenhead, England, and, his parents both dying when he was young, he was sheltered in an orphanage until two and a half years of age, when he was sent to Canada. His only known relative is an aunt in England.

How a Soldier On Service Votes

Officer Must Identify Him, Votes in Riding Where He Last Resided

OTTAWA, April 8.—Hon. C. J. Doherty, explaining the Bill to enable men on military service at home or abroad to exercise the franchise in event of an election, said that the right was being given to all men who were 21 years of age, and British subjects. The man who was not the right to vote in any particular riding, will cast his vote in the riding where he resided for the last thirty days before he enlisted. There would be an affidavit also by the soldier as to his name and place of residence. The officer who received the ballot will also give a certificate as to the identity of the man and that he actually marked the ballot.

These ballots will be sent out beforehand to the commanding officers in the different parts of Canada, and to the Secretary of the High Commissioner's office in London. When the writs for the election are issued notice will be sent for the distribution to the soldiers.

PRIZE-FIGHTING NOW PROHIBITED IN CUBA

HAVANA, April 9.—Special—The Senate Committee has already reported favorably a bill to prohibit prize fighting in Cuba.

FRENCH REACH EGYPT FOR THE DARDANELLES

Will Co-Operate With the British Expeditionary Force—Ready Since March 12—Debark at Alexandria Awaiting Call of Fleets

PARIS, April 9.—(Special.)—French troops from Africa are ready to assist the allied fleets and British expeditionary forces against Turkey. The following official statements was issued by the War Office this night.

"The expeditionary corps of the Orient, which was placed under command of Gen. A. G. L. D'Amade and concentrated at Bizerta (a fortified seaport of Tunis, Africa) to perfect its organization, effected the voyage of the Levant under the best of conditions. It has been ready since March 15 to aid the allied fleets and British expeditionary corps.

"In waiting it was deemed advisable not to prolong the stay of the troops aboard the transports, and for this reason the hospitality of Egypt was accepted. The French forces have been debarked at Alexandria, and are installed at Ramleh, where they are resting and perfecting their organization and cohesion. They are ready to proceed without delay to any point necessary."

London, April 9.—The Daily Telegraph's Athens correspondent says he learns from Dedeagatsh that several transports of the allies, escorted by warships, were distinctly visible Wednesday morning in splendid weather off Dedeagatsh, and that it was supposed troops were being disembarked along the Turkish coast.

Russians Battling For Uszok Pass

Terrific Struggle Extending Over 100-Mile Front Now Raging—Enemy are Rushing Reinforcements

LONDON, April 9.—(Special)—Austria-Hungary is making a last desperate effort to press back the Russians from Hungarian soil, but already the Czar's forces have begun to deploy along the southern side of the Beskid range and converging on the Hungarian valley, German and Austrian forces are rushing to the support of the defenders on the southern slope, where a large number of fortifications have been thrown up to protect the roads leading to Budapest. A great battle is developing along a front of 100 miles, the separate battle columns endeavoring to form a junction at the base of the mountains. The Russian armies having forced the Lupkow, Dukla and Rotsok Passes, are now pressing on in the region of the Uszok Pass, where a gigantic struggle for the mastery is now in progress.

The Petrograd correspondent of the London Daily News, Frederick Rennet Coles, says:

"By bringing strong forces along the southern forks of the Beskid Mountains the Russians have converted the operations of the separate columns invading Hungary into a general battle, which is now developing across a broad front. Great masses of infantry are pressing ahead for and into the Hungarian valley. During the last eight weeks desperate and successful assaults have been made by the Germans to force the pass leading into the Stryj valley. They have had to substitute entirely new attacking forces three or four times, so great were their losses from rifle fire, the hazards and exhaustion in the snow-covered ravines.

"The Russians are now appearing on the broad roads which converge to the best farming land in Hungary.

"Great reinforcements, both Austrian and German, are filling the prepared defensive positions. A large number of fortifications have been thrown up to protect the southern roads.

PROROGATION IN SIGHT

OTTAWA, April 9—Special—The bilingual school resolution of the Senate is not likely to be voted on this session. It was practically shelved today by a resolution adjourning the debate for a week. Prorogation is expected before that time. The Government motion was made by Senator Daniel.

FUTILE ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE THE SULTAN OF EGYPT

LONDON, April 9.—(Special)—An attempt was made at three o'clock this morning to assassinate the Sultan of Egypt, Hussein Kemal, according to a Reuter despatch, from Cairo. As the Sultan was leaving Abdin Palace, a native fired a shot at him. This went wide and the native was immediately seized.

The Sultan paid his intended visit to various officials, and a crowd assembled around the palace and gave him an ovation when he returned. His assailant, it is asserted, identified himself as a native Egyptian, 25 years of age, and a merchant hailing from Mansurah. He was perfectly composed.

Prince Hussein Kemal Pasha, the eldest living Prince of the family of Mehemet Ali, was appointed Sultan of Egypt last December, to succeed the Khedive of Egypt, Abbas Hilmi, when Great Britain proclaimed a protectorate over Egypt.

Sultan Hussein is in everything except by birth more of an Englishman than a Turk. He was educated in England, and is in full sympathy with the British annexation of Egypt.

WELLS POISONED BY THE ENEMY.

Cape Town, April 9.—(Special)—The British forces at Aus are experiencing great difficulties owing to the poisoning of the wells and the destruction of the pumping plant at Kubus.

Large numbers of land mines have been discovered and exploded.

French Women Serve Country

Hundreds Enlist as Drivers of Ambulances—Women Aviators Eager

PARIS, April 9.—(Special)—The French Women's Automobile Club has announced the recruiting of women motorists, aviators and ballonists to form a brigade of ambulances for the French army. Applications are coming in at the rate of 400 per day.

The organization aims to find enough capable women conductors to replace all the men at present driving motor cars who are capable at rendering better services at the front.

Four women aviators, including Mme. Pallier, Baronness De La Roche and Mme. Renee Dutrieu, who have been refused admission to the aviation corps, have joined this movement. Many applications for enrolment have been made by women motor cyclists who want to act as despatch bearers at the front.

WILLARD TO ARRIVE IN GOTHAM SATURDAY

NEW YORK, April 9.—Special—Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion, will make his triumphant entry into New York Saturday night. Willard's time to arrive at the Pennsylvania station at 7.02 o'clock and is certain to be greeted by an enormous crowd.

All escort of boy scouts will be on hand to accompany the victor on a parade to the St. Nicholas Rink, where Willard is to appear in a four-round exhibition, probably with Jim Savage.

Willard stops over in Baltimore tomorrow and will give an exhibition there tomorrow night. Promoters Curley and H. H. Frazee, who financed the fight, arrive here tomorrow night.

Berlin Despatches Claim Victories

Take Credit for Capturing Several Trenches—Say French Were Heavy Losers

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 9.—A German official statement says: The Belgians have again been driven out of the dominating hamlet of Dreibaechen, on the Yser Canal, leaving a large number of prisoners. We have also bombarded Rheims with incendiary shells in retaliation for the bombardment of villages in the rear of our lines. We took several trenches north of Beauejour last night. Two counter attacks during the night were repulsed. A French infantry attack in the Argonne forest, during which the French employed asphyxiating bombs, failed.

Battles between the Meuse and the Meuse continue with increased fierceness. The French suffered the heaviest losses but were again completely unsuccessful.

In the Plain of the Woevre they also unsuccessfully attacked. During the morning and evening they continually brought up new forces for the occupation of the Menne Hills near Combres.

An attack from the forest of Selonne, north of St. Mihiel broke down before our entanglements. In the forest of Ailly we are progressing slowly. A French advance to the west of Apremont failed. French attacks to the west of Flirey died out under our fire, to the south and northeast of this place they lost heavily and suffered fight ing, in which our troops gained the upper hand and drove the enemy back.

War Tax Stamps In Force 15th

One Cent Stamp, Old Style, Stamped "War Tax," and Two-Cent Special for Money Orders on Mail

(Canadian Press Special)

Nat Thursday morning every bit of first-class mail matter will have to carry a war tax stamp. Until further notice each letter will cost the sender three cents, the regular two cent stamp and a war stamp and each postal card one cent more, or two cents whether in the city or out of the city.

Two cent war stamps is to be used on money orders today and no money order purchases a money order he pays the cost of same and also buys a two cent stamp, which he affixes to the order. These stamps are not to be used for letters and will not carry same at all times.

The railway and steamship companies will not use a stamp for their part of the war tax. Each railway company will act as agent for the government and collect the revenue from the passenger when he purchases his ticket, whether it be for a single passage for a chair or parlor car or for a sleeping car. Some of the rates are:

On all tickets over $1 and not more than $5, five cents.

For each additional $5, or fractional part thereof five cents.

The tax applies to all kinds of tickets for which cash is paid, providing the amount paid is over $1, and commutation tickets are taxable on the whole amount paid for them at the time of purchase.

Tickets issued in exchange orders drawn at other points are not taxable, because no purchase money is collected when the exchange ticket is issued.

The tax applies to the total charge on a ticket, including meals and berths on steamers.

First Steel Shell Produced In Canada

Nova Scotia Steel Plant Can Now Turn Out Proper Metal

OTTAWA, April 9.—Special—Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, was presented today by the Nova Scotia Steel Company with the first shell ever made wholly which had ever been forged and finished in the Canadian engineering shops, mounted on a mahogany stand. The shell is made from Nova Scotia open hearth steel, and was presented by the Hon. Col. Cantley. It was not two years ago that it was impossible for the particular steel required for the manufacture of shells could be made in Canada. But Gen. Hughes had faith in the ability of the Canadian Steel Company to do so, and after repeated experiments, notably by Col. Cantley, the steel was made, and everything except the copper band required in the shell will be manufactured in Canada.

CANADIAN BILLET CONTAINS A SHELL

Kills Two and Wounds Five—Part of the Division Reported to Have Been in Sharp Fighting Last Wednesday

LONDON, April 9.—(Special.)—While resting in billets several miles behind the firing line some of the Canadians were heavily shelled, but the casualties were not heavy. One shell hit a barn and exploded among members of the Thirteenth Battalion. Two were killed and five wounded.

A report is current here that part of the division had some sharp fighting yesterday, but details are lacking.

Another batch of medically unfit sails for Canada today.

Drink Diminishes Munitions Output

Lloyd George Repeats His Charges to Governments Report be Issued Soon

LONDON, April 9.—(Special.)—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replied today to a charge made by James Keir Hardie at the meeting of the Independent Labor party at Norwich that the Chancellor had maligned and insulted workmen, and that as a result the word had gone around the world that "working classes were a set of drunken wastrels."

The Chancellor declares that he particularly said it was a minority of the men against whom the charge of drunkenness was made, and repeats the statement that "the drinking habits of the minority have the effect of seriously diminishing the output of war materials at a time when the success of the allies depends entirely upon that material being largely increased."

Mr. Lloyd George says this fact has been established by independent inquiries made on behalf of the Government, the results of which will soon be published.

STEAMER'S MISSION CAUSE OF WONDER

RIO JANEIRO, April 9.—(Special.)—The British steamer Ismailia came into Rio Janeiro today and no sooner had she dropped anchor than speculation was rife as to her real character.

She has on board 146 passengers, and the captain declares his destination is the Falkland Islands. Lack of coal compelled him to come in here. He declined any further explanations. He has it been possible to learn why such a large number of passengers are going to the Falklands.

British warships are still believed to be in Falkland waters, and it is being said here that the Ismailia is a transport, taking officers and men to reinforce their crews.

The British steamer Ismailia sailed from Newcastle, N.S.W., Feb. 8. The marine records give her destination as Suez Canal. She has been reported since her departure from New South Wales.

MUST PAY BELGIUM FOR EVERY WOUND

LONDON, April 9.—(Special.)—Lord Ilyver, opening exhibition organized in London by the Belgium town planning committee, said:

"If there was anything upon which public opinion in this country and," he thought, "in the neutral world was absolutely agreed, it was that those who had brought the evil on Belgium, destroyed its cities and inflicted poverty and misery on its people ought to be made pay to the uttermost farthing for mischief they have done For the deaths and suffering that has taken place, no material compensation was possible. All the world could do was to testify its sense of courage and devotion and its plighted faith of those who had suffered."

ALBANIANS PREPARE TO ATTACK SERBIA

Force Is Collected Under German and Turkish Officers

ROME, April 9.—(Special.)—A telegram from Valona says: Forty thousand Albanians, led by German and Turkish officers, are collected between Elbasan and Tirana for an attack on Durazzo and subsequently on Serbia. This movement, together with the recent attack on the Serbians, is believed to form part of a concerted plan for distracting the Balkan states from united action against Turkey and Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Orders Away German Ship

Vessel Had a Wireless Apparatus Aboard—Must Leave at Once or Intern

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—(Special.)—Sudden activity was caused among the military authorities at Flushing by the discovery of wireless messages that had been sent from a large German ship, the Madiun, which has been interned at Flushing since the commencement of the war? It is said that the presence of a wireless apparatus on one ship has been suspected for some time. The suspicions are now confirmed. In order to preserve the neutrality of the ship while in Dutch waters a body of Dutch soldiers has been placed on board and, it is stated, informed that orders have been issued by the Dutch Government that the vessel must leave Flushing by sunrise Friday at the latest. The greatest interest and excitement prevails concerning the fate of the vessel when she puts to sea.

Casualties Among Canadian Forces

(Canadian Press Special)

OTTAWA, April 9.—Today's casualties:

Fifteenth Battalion: Died of wounds—Pte. Othmas Vartanian, Ericau, Turkey.

London, April 9.—Another extended list of casualties totalling 1,108 names was issued by the British War Office today, and it emphasizes the fierceness of the fighting at the battle of Neuve Chapell last month. The killed in this latest list number 236. The total casualties so far published are 1,068 men, either killed, wounded or missing. Out of the total of 1,068, the killed number 1,231.

SIX MONTHS' HOIST FOR GOVERNMENT BILL

OTTAWA, April 9—Special—A Government bill was given the six months' hoist in the Senate yesterday morning. It was that amending the Supreme Court act to the purpose, as Hon. Mr. Lougheed explained, to allow the Supreme Court of Canada to hear appeals of Provincial controverted election cases from Provincial Courts should the Province ask for such appeal.

Senator Cloran thought the Provincial Courts should be final in Provincial electoral cases.

ALLIES CAPTURE NEW TRENCHES

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 9.—This afternoon's official says: British troops repelled during the night of April 7-8 a German attack. We left unoccupied in the teeth of the enemy German trenches at Eparges which were completely choked with corpses, and we repelled at the close of the day two counter attacks made by the enemy. In the wood at Ailly we captured new trenches and repelled two counter attacks already reported. We also secured six machine guns and two trench mortars. The enemy ceased his counter attacks after mid-day.

CHASED FIFTY-SEVEN MILES BY SUBMARINE

Blue Funnel Liner Theseus from Liverpool Finally Got Away From Aggressor

(Canadian Press Special)

LIVERPOOL, April 9.—The Blue Funnel liner Theseus, which left here March 29th for Java, has sent back word that on March 29th she was chased for 57 miles by a submarine which fired seven shells at her, five of them taking effect. The submarine finally gave up and went after a small Norwegian steamer.

Indemnity, But Not an Apology

Germany Considers Frye's Sinking Was Within International Law

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Special—Germany's intention to compensate the owners of the American ship William P. Frye, sunk on the high seas with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, was formally communicated to the United States Government yesterday.

Ambassador Gerard called a note handed him by the German Foreign office in reply to the recent American communication, submitting a claim for an indemnity of $220,059.84 on behalf of the Frye' owners. The foreign office upholds without qualification the legality under the international law of the raider's action in sinking the Frye and bases the liability of the German Government to pay indemnity solely upon the old Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, which provide that contraband belonging to the subjects or citizens of either party cannot be confiscated by the other and may be detained or used only in consideration of payment of the full value.

In view of this stipulation, the note says, of course the American owners must be compensated for their loss. It is pointed out, however, that the case of necessity must go into a prize court in order that questions of ownership, cargo destination, etc., may be formally established.

The German position is that the Frye's cargo of wheat was contraband because it was consigned "to order" to Queenstown, which is declared to be a fortified port of Great Britain. No notice is taken of the fact that since the wheat was sold enroute to British citizens, the United States filed a claim for the vessel owners, only the question being left for development in the prize court.

Officials here were somewhat surprised at the nature of the German response in view of the bearing it may have upon negotiations now in progress between Washington and London over the mistaken blockade of Germany and Austria, declared by the allies. The United States has insisted that upon the belligerent seizing a cargo consigned "to order" and not the burden of proof that the goods were destined for armed forces of an enemy.

The German note was dated April 1, one day after Ambassador Gerard presented the request for idemnity.

Scottish Minister Helps Make Shells

GLASGOW, April 8.—A call for recruits here to assist in the manufacture of shells brought forth a clergyman who was prepared to answer it. He is the Rev. Stuart Robertson of Pollokshield church, a tall, athletic figure who was seen across a field on the morning until 6 at night in a large engineering shop. His day's work over the Rev. Mr. Robertson attends to his pastorial duties as his evening's recreation.

OXYGEN FOR GERMANY

Socialists Admit Strength Shown is Artificial

PARIS, April 8.—The Echo de Paris from a Spanish correspondent receives interviews with the German Socialists Südekum and Bernstein, both denying considerable doubt of German success. Sudekum began with apparent confidence, but after a lengthy war would be serious for Germany. Bernstein said "We are living on capital; our financial prosperity is only outward show. The German economy resembles an invalid to whom oxygen inhalations give a temporary appearance of strength."

TURKEY'S DEPRESSION

LONDON, April 9.—The people of Europe are expectantly awaiting a renewed attack on the Dardanelles this time with land and sea forces. Turkey has decided to call up all men between the wearing arms, an indication that she expects the allies to bring exceedingly strong forces against her.

AUSTRIANS MUCH DEPRESSED

(Canadian Press Special)

BUCHAREST, April 9.—Despatches from the frontier of Galicia describe the Austrians as much depressed by reported Russian successes farther north. Another heavy engagement on the Dniester-Pruth near Boyan have failed. The troops are demoralised for lack of food,

Within The Military Circle

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

"All articles and notes under this head are passed by the commanding officer of the 39th Regiment and authentic in every particular.

BELLEVILLE

Following is a list of the recruits enlisted in the 49th regiment. These make a total of 213 men to date. They make a good showing on the Armories lawn, under the able instruction of Provisional Lieut. Powell.

E. Ralphe, Stafford, England.
H. Gladding, Hespeler.
A. Dunk, Belleville.
K. McKenzie, Trenton.
H. Stanlick, Maynooth.
P. Perry, Maynooth.
S. Chamerlain, Maynooth.
G. Peever, Maynooth.
R. Chatterton, Fort Stewart.
M. Dartington, Point Ann.
L. Jackson, Belleville.
G. Corteney, Flinton.
P. Dewhurst, Campbellford.
W. Handley, Belleville.
W. Wallace, Campbellford. (W. Walsee is a printefighter, near the top of the lightweight class.)
F. Campbell, Queensborough.
E. Holmes, Cordova Mines.
C. Armstrong, New Carlow.
W. Sheridan, Plainfield.
K. Whitefoot, Bancroft.

Up to the present date 213 have enlisted with the 49th Regiment of Hastings County, for active service. Of this number 11 are officers. This is an excellent record.

There are every prospects that within a few days a band will be connected with the 39th Battalion. There are within the ranks of the battalion many who are able to play instruments, and one member, named Gasnage, who joined from the 49th regiment, has had previous experience as a leader of a band. Instruments are now being procured for those who desire to join the band.

Last evening four young men from the northern part of the county arrived here as enlisters for the 49th Regiment.

Members of the Battalion who a week ago tonight revolted from fear of disease and other imaginary causes are being drilled daily in the armouries.

Two members of the 39th Battalion, who are confined in the city hospital shows signs of improvement.

This morning a large number of the members of the Battalion were subject to a test to ascertain if they were carriers of any disease.

KINGSTON

Some applications are being received for the fourth Royal School of Artillery course, which opens on April 26th. It is not expected that the fourth course will be quite as largely attended as the former courses. Lieut. Ross, D.S.O., returned from Ottawa on Wednesday morning.

The local Red Cross Society have given Lt.-Col. Duff 1,100 pairs of socks for the use of the 21st Battalion in the field.

It is rumored in the city among military men who are in close touch with the overseas service, that Lieut. Maunsell, who has done such excellent scouting work at the front, has been given the D.S.O. Several times the dashing young ex-Cadet has been mentioned in despatches.

Word has been received from Major Riordan and the 22nd Battery, who are at Shorncliffe camp, England. The men and officers are all well and are working hard every day.

The 21st Battalion marched over 18 miles yesterday in thick morning and afternoon marches. All the officers marched with the men. There are no horses left in the city for officers. All have been sent overseas.

Lt.-Col. Hughes has received acts of the officers' despatch care for all the officers of the 21st Battalion. This is one of the neatest and most compact things in the way of equipment that has ever been provided for active service use. The color and material is in keeping with the Web outfit which the officers now use.

Major Etherington, who will command Queen's College hospital corps when they reach overseas, has created the overseas rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Officers of the permanent corps are now compelled to wear their uniform all the time. In peace times they were allowed to wear mufti, and this was a great saving to their uniform. As they are now compelled to wear uniform all the time, it means hard wear, and they feel that they should have some allowance, similar to that given the overseas officers in militia corps.

PATRICIA CLUB HELD A SUCCESSFUL DANCE

An Evening of Rare Enjoyment—Fine Programme of Music is Provided for Dancers

Under the auspices of the Patricia Club of this city, a dance was held last night in Johnstone's new dancing academy on Front street. The committee in charge of the affair left nothing undone to make it a successful and pleasant gathering. The spacious hall looked inviting with the various decorations, whilst the floor was in perfect condition. Whilst the attendance was not as large as anticipated, a goodly number of ladies and gentlemen were present and thoroughly enjoyed the varied programme of dances provided. Music is not appropriate for the occasion was provided by the Sills' Orchestra, and was all that could have been desired. It was an enchanting scene, and a number of the costumes worn by the ladies were exquisite in design. Dancing commenced at a few minutes after nine o'clock, and was indulged in until the wee small hours of the morning. At midnight a dainty lunch was served.

The committee having in charge the dance was as follows:

President, C. S. MacDonnell; Hon. Sec., E. O. Keeler; Committee, H. J. MacDonnell, J. W. Johnson, Jr., and F. G. Caldwell.

The patronesses were: Mrs. S. D. Lazier, Mrs. C. C. Walker, Mrs. J. Doyle, Mrs. H. A. Yeomans, Mrs. T. W. Stewart and Mrs. E. B. Orr.

The following composed the orchestra: Frank Sills, violin; B. Hinchey, cornet; J. Denmark, piano; J. Weymark, clarionet, G. Dobbs, saxophone and W. G. Grand, drum, traps and bells.

Body Found in Sand on Lake Shore

Unidentified Man of About Fifty, Whose Death is a Mystery

TORONTO, April 9.—Buried under seven inches of sand and sixteen feet from the water's edge, the body of an unknown man was found yesterday afternoon on the Lake Shore road some distance west of the city by a number of boys who were cycling on the roads west of the city. There was nothing about the man's person by which he might be identified, except an Ingersoll watch, with the maker's name in it, J. L. Salerno.

As soon as the body had been found County Constable George Simpson was at once notified, and, after an examination of the surroundings, stated that he had come to the conclusion that the body had been buried there by some persons at present unknown.

There were no apparent marks of violence on the body. It was covered with sand, and in an advanced state of decomposition. Until the sand can be taken away, County Constable Simpson stated, there was little chance of the remains being identified. A shell from a shotgun was found near the body.

A post-mortem examination was made today.

TANNER FOR CIGARETTES

Old Lady's Appreciation of Canadian Loyalty

LONDON, April 8.—A touching incident happened in a London street to-day to a Canadian soldier, nephew of a Nova Scotia senator. An old lady entered his conversation with him expressed gratitude at the loyalty and bravery of the Canadian forces, and finished by handing him sixpence with which to purchase cigarettes.

RED CROSS BANDAGES

There are as many varieties of bandages and as many ways of tying them as there are wounds and limbs and more. The usual material for Red Cross roller bandages is unbleached calico, as it has stiffness and substance. White cotton or sheeting is second choice. Linen is seldom used—too expensive.

Flannel bandages are for the protection of the body and rheumatic joints. Gauze is used to retain dressing in position. Domette is useful for keeping bandages or splints in position. Stockingette may be used for various velpe or crossed limbs. Muslin or crinoline are employed in the application of plaster-of-Paris, starch, or silicated bandages.

The regulation widths and lengths of roller bandages may surprise you. Taking the series, finger, arm, leg and body—the widths run from 1½ inches to 6 inches, and the lengths from 2½ yards to 24 feet. Varieties of bandages are: Single-headed, double-headed, spica, capeline, half-capeline, four-tailed, many-tailed, etc.

Has its proper use, and the correct method of binding needs careful study. Generally the limbs are bound from below upwards, but the abdomen must be bound from above downwards. Fingers, toes, arms, legs are all bound differently. Even the position of the nurse while applying them is rigorously defined.

Bandaging is a good deal more than wrapping something round a wound.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

AN ERROR CORRECTED

St. Michael's and Holloway Juniors play to-night in the Sunday School Basketball League, instead of Holloway and Baptist, as reported yesterday.

FALSE RUMORS

Yesterday and to-day rumors were afloat the city that another member of the 39th Battalion, making three in all, had died from an attack of spinal meningitis. Such, we are pleased to state, is not the case.

INTERRED YESTERDAY

The remains of the late Mrs. Edmund J. Sisson were laid to rest yesterday. Services were held at St. Thomas' church, the Rev. Canon Beamish officiating. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery.

ALLOWED TO GO

The two foreigners who were temporarily apprehended here yesterday afternoon as being Austrians, were after an hour's detention allowed their liberty. They had credentials to prove that they were at liberty to go from one place to another without detention. It was also proven that they were not born bred Austrians but were in reality Servians.

CONSIGNED TO TOMB

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mr. Kelley of Sidney, took place and many relatives and friends attended the obsequies. At White's Methodist church services were held conducted by Rev. E. E. Howard, a former pastor of Sidney circuit. Interment took place at White's cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. A. Hamilton, W. Yateman, G. Hadrell, S. T. Ketchenon, A. Donisted and C. Jeffrey.

INJURIES PROVED FATAL

A few days ago Mr. John W. Chisholm who resided at Roslin, was the victim of an accident, which unfortunately proved fatal. He was thrown from a wagon and had wheels passed over his body inflicting severe internal injuries. Deceased was 60 years of age, and was born in Cramble Township, being a son of the late Mr. Allen Chisholm. For many years deceased had lived at Roslin. He was unmarried. Mr. Chisholm was a member of the Methodist church. The funeral will be interred in the Foxboro cemetery.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. W. B. Deacon is able to be out again after some weeks' illness.

M. W. H. Nugent of Coe Hill and Reeve of Wollaston Township, was in the city to-day.

Master Donald Dunn of Brockville, returned home yesterday after a visit with Master Hugh Ferguson in this city.

Mr. George Sisson arrived in the city yesterday from Detroit, Mich., to attend the funeral of his grandmother, the late Mrs. Sisson.

E. H. Oliver of the 39th Battery, C. F. A., Kingston, is in the city to attend the funeral of his grandmother, the late Mrs. Sisson.

THE WAY OUT

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found the way out—and the only thing that seemed to build her up and bring back the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to get an early start I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, and I had pain and despondent. I could not enjoy the things which were a delight for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

This wretched condition continued until I became interested in the letters of Dianna Way, who lives in Ohio and who were being helped by Catarrhozone.

"I had little faith, but procured a jar, and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and contentment. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and delightful. Among my studies was later taught ten months with ease—using Grape-Nuts every day. I think how the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned."

Name given by Catarrhozone Co., Windsor, Ont. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

HOW TO FIT A BELLEVILLE MAN FOR THE JOB OF LIFE

Admirable Address Before the Canadian Club by Dr. Robertson In Y.M.C.A. Thursday Evening

The members of the Canadian Club were treated to an address on the subject of technical education at their meeting last night that was both a revolution and a revelation. Mr. J. W. Robertson, M.A., M.D., of Ottawa, is a pastmaster in the art of technical education, and has been a globe-trotter in its interests for many years. He is a canny Scot, with plenty of burr in his voice, and plenty of sang frold in his demeanor, and a fund of information in his special line, that is inexhaustible.

A fair-sized representation of the Canadian Club members sat down to the supper, presided over by Mr. J. T. Hess, the capable president, who also introduced the guest of the evening in well chosen words of greeting and appreciation. Mr. Hess referred to the fact that there were six ministers present. The ministers certainly seem to have the Canadian Club habit this season with a vengeance. This speaks well for the "cloth," and well for the club, and also for the very excellent range of subjects chosen for discussion this year. Mr. Hess might also have referred, with equal good grace, to the fact that there were three members of the Belleville school board in attendance and they doubtless carried away an assortment of practical ideas that will be useful in the future culture of Belleville's boys and girls. Well-known local educators, school principals, and prominent citizens, were also present and listened with keenest interest to the recital of school possibilities along the lines of technical education. Dr. Robertson gave a thorough resume of the history and progress of technical education in Europe and the United States, and told also of the steps being taken to make it more general and effective in Canada. As chairman of the Technical Education Commission, Dr. Robertson, has travelled widely throughout Canada and the United States, and also in France, Denmark, and the British Isles. He believes that Overseas Canada must not only take a leaf out of their book of education ideals and practical plans, but that we must be prepared to dump in the scrap-heap a considerable percentage of our present, modern school system. He believes also that our present conventional school house and school benches and dunce caps will speedily pass to a well deserved and long forgotten oblivion. Dr. Robertson thinks education as a series of expensive tortures rather than completing a set of studies. He also defined technical education as the idea of occupation and useful production, versus dry theories, and text-book exercises that are laboriously toiled over and then ruthlessly hurled into the waste-basket when the day is done. He referred to a public school in Pittsburg, Mass', where the pupils of 11 years of age, have the following schedule of weekly work: 12 hours of book studies and exercises, 18 hours of making things of commercial value, 7½ hours of physical culture, recreation and singing. At the close of the school year the standing of this school was inferior to that of any other public school, of similar grade, in the city. Statistics showed, said Dr. Robertson that the average school boy and school girl were terribly bored by the theoretical education of today. Out of 500 pupils, who were compelled to leave school to work in factories before reaching the High School, 425 deliberately declared that they preferred the factory, because they were learning to do things, whereas at school they were put to indifferent studies and scolded and called dunces. Speaking of the after 14 age boy, Dr. Robertson said that, for the town school, the ideal was the week about plan, viz: one week at the High School and the alternate week at the shops. He quoted examples showing that in a three year's course, a normal boy had not only earned $500 in cash, and learned a good trade, but also he had passed all his exams at the high school with honors. These co-ordinated high schools are in great vogue in France and Denmark, and are increasing every year in the United States and the British Isles. Speaking of the problem of rural education, Dr. Robertson referred to denmark and declared that vocational education had made this little country the second richest land pro rata, in the world. Her exports of butter, cheese, and bacon are of the finest quality and command the top prices. Dr. Robertson referred to David Fyfe and his efforts at standardizing wheat in Canada and to other forms of cultivating sup-power. He referred to the schools of Winnipeg, and what they have done for technical education in 14 years. He believes that the Dominion Government will make a liberal grant for this worthy object, when times are normal again, and said that if the scheme is carried out as proposed, Belleville's share of this great would be $4,000, and this would be sufficient to start an extensive piece of vocational training in our city. This instruction should have for its object the direct preparation for a career or vocation, of everyone of Ontario's 227,000 happy normal school children of today.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed by the club for this strong address, on motions of Mr. F. S. Deacon, and Mr. Jas. Minns B.A., of the Collegiate Institute, Picton. Mr. Walter Alford, the well known local architect and builder spoke a few words of appreciation for the ideas contained in Dr. Robertson's address. He referred to his own school days in Belleville, and to the fact that he owed his good start in a business career to the practical studies he possessed so as a boy, throughout the gift of a set of instruments. He also urged for a more thorough technical training for the boys of today. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

CAN THE LIBERALS RETURN TO POWER

Or Is It True That the Opposition Faces an Election Lacking New Men, New Blood, But Chiefly New Ideas

(C. W. Cavers, in Beck's Weekly)

Parliament Hill still argues that the Government will go to the country soon, probably during the coming summer, certainly by next fall. Parliament expires by limitation next year in any event. Objection to an election during the war times has been pointed out; not even the Liberals, who were the first to raise the cry of "Truce" now offer any serious objection to an election. The Government, of course, has not declared itself, nor is it likely in the near future. Politicians strategy requires that the Government's intentions shall be concealed as long as possible. And yet there are not wanting signs and portents that an election is surely pending. Both sides are actively getting ready for it. Both sides know that it is coming. The Government is probably awaiting a "favorable opportunity," such as that which would be afforded by a victory of the first magnitude of the Allies, a revival of industrial conditions at home, or the promise of abundant crops in the west.

It is generally admitted that the Government is in excellent strategic position to go to the country. Four years of control have given Premier Borden and his chief supporters an assurance and an aplomb which they could never have developed while in opposition. It has hardened them, made them aggressive and put them in the spirit of self-confidence. The overthrow of Laurier is complete that some politicians were half-inclined to doubt its sincerity. The idea was advanced, chiefly by the Liberals, that the Premier might capitalize the fact that they had been really and truly relegated to the cool grey shades of the Opposition, about which Sir Wilfrid had once been wont to twit the Conservatives. That moments for "now or never" but futile efforts to obstruct the Government and force it to return to the people. The Liberals thought that the people would be only too glad of an opportunity to correct their "error." For two years after the elections whenever the Liberal leaders got together they talked like men who didn't realize the fact that they were actually out of power. "Why, he talks as though he was still the Minister of Finance," declared a young Liberal after listening to a speech of the Hon. Mr. Fielding at a party conclave held in November, 1913. "He doesn't realize that we're in opposition and that it is necessary for us to adopt new tactics." And it was true of more than Mr. Fielding. But the Liberals have changed their minds since then. Developments in Europe have helped them greatly to a new vision. They no longer think they see out of power by grace of a political "fluke." They know that they have before them the most strenuous fight in several generations in the next elections. They consider that the Government is strongly intrenched. They believe that they themselves are obliged to run the Opposition. Some of them are casting up their chances of winning should the contest come before next winter. They doubt that the future is not at all roseate. Most of the Liberals, whose opinions are worth anything, admit that the personnel of the party leaders is better what it was prior to 1911. What is needed, they say, is an infusion of new blood. A host of the old blows have dropped by the wayside; those who remain have lost much of their vigor and others have been replaced by a younger set of men.

WAR CAREER OF EITEL

Covered 30,000 Miles and Captured or Sank 11 Vessels

NEW YORK, April 8.—Eitel was on Wednesday, March 3, with the wireless announcement of her approach, that the Prinz Eitel entered the harbor of Newport News, Virginia, and dropped anchor. She was in search of a voyage of more than thirty thousand miles, having navigated three oceans in seven months and captured or sunk or otherwise destroyed eleven merchant vessels—five British, four French, one Russian and one American. For her last, the Prinz Eitel, sunk in January 28th, the United States Government has demanded payment.

The vessels sunk represented a gross tonnage of 26,000 but 1,246 less than the displacement of the new British super-dreadnought the Queen Elizabeth—while the officers, passengers and crews taken numbered 360, most of whom were on board the auxiliary cruiser when she came to anchor.

With the exception of the Kronprinz Wilhelm, still on the high seas, the Prinz Eitel is the last of Germany's fleet of fourteen auxiliary cruisers which were in operation at the beginning of the war. Aside from the Kronprinz, however, there is the light cruiser Karlsruhe, but she has been reported sunk in the West Indies. The Prinz Eitel is the sixth German war vessel to intern and the third to intern at an American port since the war began.

DENY RUMOR THAT HOLLAND WAS AT WAR

LONDON, April 8.—Rumors were current in London today of a declaration of hostilities between Germany and Holland. They were absolutely without confirmation, and despatches from The Hague received late this afternoon ignored any such development.

The Minister of the Netherlands in London, when questioned, said he had heard rumors to the same effect. He had no information on the subject himself, and he absolutely discredited the report.

LITTLE BOY WEAK AND SICKLY

Mother Tells How Her Little Son Was Made a Strong, Healthy Boy by Vinol After a Severe Sickness.

New York City.—"About five years ago my little boy, then seven years old, was very ill with gastritis, then he contracted measles from the other children, pneumonia soon followed, and they seemed no hope of saving his life. However, we fought off the disease and he recovered, but was in a very weak and delicate condition.

"The doctor prescribed cod liver oil, but his little stomach swelled up like a drum, and he could not retain it or get cure for him. I decided to try Vinol, as I had found myself much splendid results, and it seemed to agree with him, and his physical condition soon disappeared, and now he is a strong, healthy boy, thanks to Vinol."—Mrs. THOMAS FITZGERALD, 1093 First Ave., New York City.

In all cases where the healing, curative, tissue building influence of cod liver oil, or the strength-creating, blood making properties of tonic iron are needed, Vinol gives immediate benefit, for it is easily assimilated and acceptable to the weakest stomach, because it contains no oil or grease, and tastes delicious.

MEETING THE SCANDALS

The determination of the Borden Government to discover any irregularities in connection with the contracts for war supplies receives unqualified commendation from the Toronto Star. As The Star is a Liberal paper this testimony is more valuable than it would be from sources which might not be considered impartial.

When all the circumstances are taken into consideration it is not surprising that commissions were paid to middlemen. The war came on so suddenly; the absence of supplies was so complete; and the necessity for prompt delivery so absolute, that the keen, enterprising political agent found all things working together to advance his schemes.

That confusion, more or less, existed at Ottawa was inevitable. It was astonishing that it was accomplished by the Minister of Militia and his Department. The speed with which the plans were made and carried out for the sending of the contingent rendered a fine analysis of every detail quite impossible. That must be plain to everybody. Some graft was bound to creep in.

It speaks volumes for the discernment of the administration that it was so quickly discovered. It is still more praiseworthy for the Government to take the initiative in having a thorough investigation. There has been no attempt to burk the enquiry. Everything has been opened up as fully as the Opposition desired. The Toronto Star says of it:—

"At Ottawa the Public Accounts Committee of Parliament has exactly the people well. It has discovered a plot to take unfair advantage of the patriotism of the people of Canada, to make money out of supplies for our soldiers, with very little regard for the service to be rendered to the soldier. It has found that the Government of Canada, as we assume that the aim of the Government is to serve Canada, has discovered things which escaped the notice of the Government, saved from all partisan consideration, this process that Parliament at its worst is, or allowed to exercise their functions freely, can help a Government to do its duty; can do things which a Government unaided cannot do. It is a vindication of democracy and parliamentary institutions."

In public affairs it seems that such things must be. But the encouraging feature of the present case is that there is nothing like commission with their brothers by any members of the Government. This frank, open treatment of the charges puts the Government in a strong position before the people of Canada.

FIGHTING FOR TIME

The latest stunt with which Germany is credited comes from Rome in the form of an assertion that the Kaiser's forces are simply fighting for time; and that Germany has already practically agreed to Austria making a separate peace with the Allies. It is difficult to believe that Germany has done anything of the kind. If she has done so, then this is the very policy of despair, and would indicate that she is very much nearer the end of her resources than the world has any suspicion of.

Germany must realize that Austria is in a bad way, and that grave complications will shortly result from the invasion of the Dual Monarchy by the Russian hosts. All she same, it would seem to be the policy of Germany to keep as many Russians as possible engaged with the Austrians, and thus prevent the concentration of the Czar's great armies upon the German forces.

It is true that Austria is the weak point in the German defences, and that the easiest way into Germany would be across the Austrian frontier. It is also true that with Austria out of the war, that way would be closed to the Allies. But a separate peace would at once release vast new forces for service against Germany, and correspondingly increase the chances of an overwhelming victory by the Allies.

The true explanation of the peace talk, says The Montreal Herald and Telegraph, is probably that Germany is snatching at this expedient for the purpose of keeping Italy out of the conflict by talk and promises. Peace talk and "negotiations" might, with skill, be made to go on for months, and in the meantime, Germany, like Mr. Micawber, would wait for something to turn up. It might save Germany from the disaster of fresh complications for the time being, and keep the way clear for her to make one last tremendous effort to wrest victory from defeat.

Meanwhile there is this to be remembered, that it takes two parties to make peace. It is ridiculous to think that the Allies will stop all military operations the moment Austria signifies that she would like to talk peace. There will be no wasting of precious time in negotiations, the chief object of which would be to keep vast armies waiting in suspense on the Austrian frontiers while Germany continued fighting. The only way in which Austria can get a separate peace will be by unconditional surrender. Short of that it may be taken for granted that the Allies will push their military operations with the utmost vigor. Germany is beginning to see the light. She will be dazzled by the full illumination when the armies of the Allies occupy Budapest and Vienna.

CURRENT COMMENT

Montreal Gazette: "Six months in jail and a $500 fine or six additional months was the sentence inflicted in the Recordr's Court on a man convicted of illegally having cartridges in his possession. If severity of punishment counts for much the dangerous character of the offence we have a thing of the past on Montreal.

The Independent Labor party is the first organized body which has arisen in Great Britain to take the German view of the war, to protest against recruiting and to demand peace at once. These Independent Laborite would better not go too far. Kitchener might have a temper and pack them all off to Germany.

It appears that the steamers Paluba and Stella, which the Germans torpedoed, were carrying flour to the famine-stricken people of the Canary Islands. The German colony in the Canaries is in serious danger of being starved. This does the submarine campaign alienate neutral friendship, and what does it accomplish for Germany in return?

Jack Johnson, the colored ex-pugilistic champion, has taken his defeat like a man. He walked in opponent the best of luck and declared that he himself was no longer of any public interest. There was no talk of dragging the chance blows such as some former ex-champions indulged in after they had lost their ring honors. The black fighter is better loser than most of his predecessors.

Curtis Guild died on Tuesday. He was the son of the founder of the Boston Commercial Bulletin and after graduation from Harvard he went to work on that paper becoming eventually editor of Massachusetts for four years. 1906-09, and was made ambassador to Russia by President Roosevelt. He had a commission in the Spanish war, was a friend and accompanied of President Roosevelt and was afterward a friend of Taft.

It is estimated that the war in Europe will bring one week's business dullness worth of business to the United States. Already about one-half this sum has been expended for autos, shoes, harness, saddles, wire, ammunition, food stuffs and other supplies. Canada has had set orders totalling over two hundred million dollars, and if the war lasts another six months, will double the above figures. Canada and the United States are going to profit more from this war than any other countries in the world.

The population of the United States is now estimated to be 100,000,000, which makes the Republic the second largest "white" country in the world. The Russian Empire leads with 164,000,000 inhabitants, 122,550,000 of whom live in Russia proper. The population of the German Empire is 66,000,000, while that of Austria-Hungary is 50,000,000. In the United Kingdom there are 45,000,000, and in France 40,000,000. Italy has 35,000,000. The statesmen at Washington exercise authority over a tremendous constituency.

Those who continually harp about the failure of the United States Government to protest against this and that in connection with the war should not fail to note carefully the American note to Great Britain. It has the effect of a real protest—not a "scrap of paper one"—in that it is mild and even sympathetic in tone and tendency towards England. Germany may read out of it, therefore, logic that her dastardly submarine campaign, involving the murder of non-combatants of both races, is effectively resented by the Wilson Administration.

The Lindsay military situation is beginning to look worse than ever, says the Peterboro Examiner. Not only have the authorities crowded seven hundred men into Lindsay for an inadequate training, but apparently they have been so anxious to get a crowd of men there that the medical examination has not been all it should have been, and the result is that the Government has been paying $1.85 a day for men who are now declared to be medically unfit. No less than eighty-seven of the recruits sent to Belleville have been rejected by the medical officers at there. This is indigestion in Lindsay, where apparently they think they are a law unto themselves.

Tips Their Living Porters Testify

CHICAGO, April 8.—Pullman sleeping car porters went on the witness stand before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations today and told the commission that the tipping system meant bread and butter to them. They couldn't pay expenses on the road with the salaries, to say nothing of paying rents and maintaining families, they testified.

A statement was made that Pullman car conductors do not consider it dishonest to "knock down" on seat sales enough to pay their expenses on the road. These average $30 a month and come out of salaries ranging from $70 to $95 a month.

The first of the porters to testify was Tom S. Crenshaw, who has worked on a sleeper running between St. Louis and Savannah, Ill., for twenty-one years. His salary is $42 a month.

"Well, what do you make in tips?" asked Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of the commission.

"About $75 a month," replied Crenshaw.

"So altogether you get about $117 a month," calculated the Chairman. Have you a family?"

"Yes, sir; wife and four children, two married, and I take care of my mother. The children not married are in school."

The next witness was G. H. Sylvester of New York, a porter on the Twentieth Century Limited of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Road. His salary, he said, was $27.50 a month, and tips averaged about $77 a month. He has been on the present run for thirteen years. He has always earned the small bonus offered by the company, his uniforms are bought for him because he has been more than ten years in service, and no charges have ever been brought against him, he said. His train leaves New York in the afternoon and arrives in Chicago the next morning, and under the rules he is not entitled to any sleep except what he gets during the lay-over.

"But, don't let any of them tell you they don't sleep," he said with a grin. "The man who tells you he don't sleep is a dangerous man. I don't mean that we go to bed, but we nod when we are supposed to be on guard in the aisle. All the superintendents here know that."

"But it is against the rule?" suggested Mr. Walsh.

"They don't care about that; all they care about is that we don't get caught at it. We sit up just to guard the car, anyway they know it, and a breath of air will awaken an experienced porter. It's instinct, and the car really is guarded."

"And yet charges never have been brought against you?"

"No, because I figure there's a spotter on every train."

"But wouldn't the spotter catch you when you nap?"

"I never do so until everybody is asleep."

Commissioner O'Connor asked what would be the effect if Congress passed an anti-tipping law.

"Why, the prices would simply quit. You can see that for yourself. They couldn't live on $27.50 a month.

"But suppose wages were not raised?"

"Well, I want to tell you that if the porters were getting nothing but wages and a passenger with $2 on his clothes got on, he wouldn't be safe."

HOW THE OUTPUT WAS INCREASED

The wonderful increase in efficiency in Russia brought about through the abolition of vodka is only now being realized. At this annual meeting of American Mining Engineers recently held in New York one of the leading engineers recounted a conversation he had with a Russian banker.

"This banker told about the effects at a coal mine in which he is interested. When the troops were mobilized, the management of the mine found that its working force had been reduced by 60 per cent., and this in the face of an unusually large demand for coal. In normal times, said this banker, it was the custom for the men to work intermittently, due to their indulgence in vodka drinking. After the war broke out, and the sale of vodka ceased, the men immediately began to work more regularly, and the production of coal per man increased correspondingly. At the time the banker left Russia, a few weeks ago, the management of the mine had increased its operating force to 50 per cent. of normal. By that time, the production of coal, by half the usual number of men, had increased to 130 per cent. of normal; thus each man was producing 260 per cent. of the former average. Incidentally, it was noticed the men were wearing better clothes in their off-hours, and several of the men who were between the ages of 40 and 50 were beginning to read."

The report of a battle on the eastern front in which only 720 prisoners were taken conveys the suspicion that the observers have lost their adding machines.

Earthquake shocks were felt in Italy Monday. But the big shock is yet to come.

PROVINCE IN DISTRICTS FOR AMATEUR BASEBALL

Local Fans are of Opinion that Association Could be Formed

(Peterboro' Review)

The thinking departments of a few Peterborough baseball fans have been quite busy of late. Although the action of the Peterborough Club in dropping out of the Canadian League almost crushed the game from the minds of all, a few followers of the great summer pastime have been turning over and over in their minds a proposition to have an amateur baseball organization, which would embrace teams from all over the province of Ontario. At first glance this proposition looks almost impractical. The scheme seems too mighty to materialize but history of baseball in Ontario reveals success of plans just as extensive.

Away back in the fall of 1892, numerous ball fans in Ontario had dreams of a huge organization which would cover the province. This usual obstacles had to be fought but they were fought successfully and in the spring of 1893 the plan materialized. The province was divided into four districts. In this district, the towns represented were Cobourg, Lindsay, Oshawa and Peterborough. The teams from Toronto and two from Hamilton composed the district west of us and the middle west consisted of Brantford, Galt, Dundas and Guelph. Cobourg won this group, one of the Toronto teams won its district, Dundas cleaned up the middle-west, and London the western. Cobourg won from Toronto in the semi-finals and London put Dundas out. At this stage of the game the teams were being spotted with professionals. London and Cobourg played home and home games and the result was a tie. The play-off of the championship went to London. Both teams were practically pro. organizations by the time the final game was played. "Doc" Sheppard was on the mound for London and Pat Hall twirled for Cobourg. The latter won.

The next year, 1894, the big organization branched out into what was almost a professional league. The Guelph Maple Leafs won the championship. From it developed what is now known as the Canadian League. The late J. J. Ward, first president of the Canadian League, tried to get the amateur organization going again after professionals had taken over the plans of 1893, but the effort was not successful.

The plan being considered by local fans is something similar to the plans of the fall of 1892. Amateur baseball in Ontario originally is placed on a sound foundation and it is thought that some scheme should be arrived at whereby the amateur championship could be played for. The deputies propose to launch an Ontario amateur baseball association. The various towns and cities all have city leagues. It is the idea to have the winners of one city league, play off with the winners of another town or perhaps do as they did with the lacrosse in years ago, that is to have all the teams go to Toronto and play off. The idea of having the winners play home and home games, however, appears the better one. It would be possible in this section of the province to have a district composed of Kingston, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, Lindsay and Peterborough. Similar groups could be organized in other parts of the province and then the winners of the groups play-off. In this way the amateur championship of Ontario could be decided.

A Governing Organization

It would be necessary to have a governing organization and for this reason the local promoters of the idea will lay their plans before the annual meeting of the Toronto Amateur Leagues to be held in Toronto next week. The fact that the Ontario Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union is putting forth such efforts to purify and cleanse baseball of all professionalism and the fact that many O.H.A. hockey players want to play baseball in an organization which would be purely amateur, so as to retain their amateur standing, should greatly assist the new movement. The result of the steps being taken by the local enthusiasts will be awaited with interest.

Jesuit Organ Deplores Spirit of Hate

Protests Against German Self-Esteem, and Says Each Country Has Mission

LONDON April 8.—A protest against German self-esteem and against the prevailing spirit of hatred for England is made by Stimmen der Zeit, the organ of the German Jesuits, which asserts that each nation has a special mission to perform in the world. The wish is expressed that the rich talents and gifts of the cool, calculating English may become a blessing to mankind, and that for France there may arise her old and precious civilization.

Why Doctors Say "Oranges"

There is hardly a physician practicing today who doesn't advocate the eating of oranges.

1st, because oranges have a beneficial effect on the blood, keeping it pure and clean. This is especially necessary during the spring and summer months.

2nd, because oranges act as a mild and pleasant stimulant for the liver. A disordered liver changes one's whole outlook on life.

3rd, because oranges contain just the right amount of fruit acid to keep the digestive organs in proper working order. Oranges help the digestion of all other foods.

Sunkist Oranges are now at the height of delicious-ness—sweet, tender-meated, firm, heavy with juice—the finest, most inviting fruit that grows.

Serve Sunkist daily—there are countless ways, so you never grow tired of them. Remember, Sunkist are the cheapest fruit you can buy. And they are sold by all good dealers.

WHY I HAVEN'T ENLISTED

Campbellford, April 1st, 1915.
Editor of the Herald.

Dear Sir:—As you will notice by the signature at the bottom of this letter, my name is C. O. Ward. I am a young married man and I informed everybody that, some time ago that I intended to enlist. Now busy bodies are wondering why I am still here, and not at the front. In justice to myself and friends I wish to set myself right before the public. When I said I intended to join the forces I meant, I would do with the 22nd contingent. I wanted time to arrange my worldly affairs before leaving, also to practice with a shovel, digging. Now, Mr. Editor, I am well known here. I can refer you to a number of distinguished citizens, the Bishop, R. Linn and many others. I am a Canadian by birth and came from a fighting stock. My great grandfather took a wooden leg to assist him in the battle of Waterloo, (a horse ran away with him.) If you want proof I can show you his wooden leg. Similar incidents have run in my family for years. My wife's two brothers and my own sister all belong to the army (Salvation Army.) Like my great namesake, Artemus Ward, I am not only willing that all my wife's relations should sacrifice their last drop of blood in the war, but I will go further—I have a very rich bachelor uncle who has no heirs but me and I have repeatedly urged upon him, his duty to his country. My wife, I am sorry to say, refuses to give her consent to my going, she says she can get plenty of work now and won't miss what I eat. She is afraid I might wear myself out digging trenches, and she doesn't want to go to the expense of wearing mourning.

Now my mother-in-law, who lives with us feels quite different. The only things she says, that she is afraid of is that I might accidently get a shot in the back when I get repulsed. She says wounds of that kind are generally fatal but she would be willing to bear with resignation the mysterious blessing of Divine Providence. She also says that if I would go she would offer up a daily prayer that my name would not appear in the Herald as "slightly wounded."

I take a great interest in the brave Canadian boys who have enlisted and gone to the front before me. I always join the crowd of young fellows who see them off at the station. We all carry small union jack flags while we sing "For a long long way to Tipperary"—then we give them three cheers and a tiger.

There is a list of Canadian fellows in this town, who say they are anxious to defend their country but don't get a good chance because there are so many English, Scotch and Irish fellows who are out of a job in this country, who offer to go, and it is only contrary on the part of Canadians to stand to one side and let them have a job.

There are many Canadian boys who are incapacitated through unfortunate circumstances.

Bill Sikes told me yesterday that the only thing that kept him here was a stonebruise on his heel. Even then he was prepared to suffer in silence until he read about the bum boots the soldiers were being served with.

Stumpy Stokes, he says he is short of back teeth. He could shoot all right but he couldn't chew soup, sour kraut or sausage, or even bite a German when he was hungry.

L. T. says his right eye is defective and he would be just as likely to shoot his chum as one of them over Germans.

Finally there are 119 fellows here who couldn't leave (owing to a pool tournament that may last longer than the war.) Others are promised good soap jobs in the summer, and I know of three who are the only sons of widows, and who live with or on their mothers and as long as she is able to work and be around they don't propose to discourage her in any way.

There is quite a number of self sacrificing men here, (27 in, I believe, the number) who have organized into a company. They call themselves, I believe, Suppers and Minors. They are at present engaged in staging an uproarious tussle between Campbellford and Stirling for the championship of the cornmeal district, and in sending relief to the huge army bare receiving them. I hope, Mr. Editor, that this letter will satisfy public curiosity as to myself and many of my friends. We are all burning with patriotic enthusiasm, and hope our fellows who have gone to the front will assist in bringing this terrible war to a speedy end before we are called upon to go. God help the enemy when we get at them—we will show no mercy.

Yours patriotically,
C. O. WARD

Women Go As Nurses at Own Expense

Party of Ten Prominent Socially Will Leave New York for France on Friday

MONTREAL, April 8—Ten Montreal women, members of families which are wealthy and prominent socially, will sail from New York on Friday for France where they will nurse French soldiers. They are paying all of their expenses themselves, and they will do voluntary nursing until the war is over. Their work will be their reward they think. In their trunks are nursing caps and aprons. A Maple Leaf badge with the word "Canada" written through it is on each apron. The rest of the room in their trunks is filled with bandages and dressings for the wounded and with clothes and comforts for refugees at Cannes.

The ten ladies are in charge of a chaperone—a Westmount woman of high social standing who also hopes to do her "something." Among the ten is a girl of twenty years; another is an American woman whose sister lives at Dorval; a third is from Halifax; the rest are from Montreal and Westmount. Some of them have a special interest in the war. The fiance of one is at the front, as is the brother of another. A Saskatoon woman whose husband and two sons are fighting the Germans was one of the ninety others who applied to go when only the ten were needed. She may get a chance shortly.

Hopes For Lost Explorer

Schooner Sachs Hay Have Stefansson. Northwest Police Think

Special to the New York Times.

TACOMA, April 8.—A letter received at Dawson from Inspector Phillips of the Northwest Mounted Police, dated at McPherson on Feb. 13, says in regard to Explorer Stefansson that if he reached Bank's Island or Prince Patrick Land, he in all probability was picked up there by the crew of the Mary Sachs, which left last summer for Bank's Land in search of the missing man.

If he is possible, Inspector Phillips writes, that Stefansson may have found land in Beaufort Sea, but in any event it would be impossible to hear from him before the opening of the Arctic.

If Stefansson drifted eastward, the Inspector said, the chances are that he will not be heard from again.

Inspector Phillips, referred to in the above despatch, is well known in Belleville, and is a son of Mr. Norman Phillips, of Charles Street.

HOW SOLDIERS LIVE AND FIGHT IN THE TRENCHES

London, April 8.—When it rains the trenches are half filled with water. The cold is always of the damp, penetrating, dreadful kind that can be the very marrow. Hot food is served three times a day to the men in the trenches by other soldiers, who scurry like rabbits through long uncovered trenches running back from the works concealing the guns.

These men in the trenches must have good food in order that they can have good blood, and if they have good blood, they have good courage, they keep warm because their circulation is good and their extremities are warm from exercise. Many men are invalided, however, because their blood and their stomach were not right to withstand the awful hardships of this winter campaign.

When you do not properly digest your food your blood becomes thin and every organ of the body soon feels the effect. The result is—headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness and many other symptoms—due to accumulation of poisons in the body. Unless the stomach is given air at this stage more serious illness follow. Now is the time to help your weakened stomach—now is the time to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (in tablet or liquid form). It has the same power to set you right as it has been proved to have in thousands of other cases. It will help your stomach so that the food you eat will nourish and sustain you and make good reviving blood. It will enable you to get rid of that sluggish liver and irregular bowels have permitted to accumulate in your system.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is composed of known native vegetable medicinal roots and herbs with no alcohol nor narcotic drugs to give you foul habits. It can now be obtained in tablet or liquid form from dealers, or send 50 stamps for box of tablets.

U. S. Census Claims 100,000,000

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Somewhere in this big country there was born on Friday last at 40 clock p.m. the one-hundred-millionth American, provided that at the precise time his place was not taken by some immigrant from Europe. The Census Bureau is responsible for the computation.

The Government endeavors to take account of all its people and counts native born and foreign born alike with perfect impartiality, but the rate increase by immigration and by birth has not been determined, and this year, the census officials say, is an especially bad one for percentages of migration. This fact is responsible for a slight academic quarrel between the Census Department and the Department as to the time when the population passed the 100,000,000 mark.

The Western Actuary of the Treasury Department, Mr. McCoy, several months ago computed, with all the involved and intricate uses of calculus, that the moment when the one hundred millionth native should appear, and his moment was set for 2.30 p.m. February 17. This computation, however, was repudiated by the census officials, who in long experience with population statistics, have evolved a great degree of accuracy. They maintain that Mr. McCoy did not take into account in his calculations the fact that the war in Europe and its effect on immigration to the United States, and that the estimated allowance for the arrival of the interesting individual in question did not come until yesterday.

The manner in which the Census Bureau computation was worked out was simple. The estimate was computed under the direction of C. C. Sloane, geographer of the Census Bureau. The process was to take the population of the United States on April 15, 1910, which was 91,972,266, and subtract from that the population of States on June 1, 1900, which was 75,-994,575, the days named being the official dates for the actual census of the years named. The difference, which is 15,777,691, when divided by 1155, which is the number of months intervening between the two census dates, gives as the actual increase in our population for one month 134,828.4.

This being accepted, it is not a difficult task to find out that the increase for one day is 4,494.21 and for one hour 187.2 Necessarily the increase for one minute appears to be 3.11. And with this result coming hot from the Actuary's pencil, it follows that three native-born Americans, to say nothing of the fraction of eleven-hundredths, must dispute for the honor of being the one hundred millionth.

When the Irish Are Impossible

(Beck's Weekly)

An able and affable French-Canadian business man came to Toronto a few days ago to try and do a little missionary work. He interviewed all the leading editors and left a couple of pamphlets entitled "The Truth, Nothing but the Truth", and copies of petitions to be signed. He'd encountered a former Montreal newspaper man and expressed his pleasure at the courtesy with which he had been received everywhere. The editors listened politely to his remarks and gave him a kindly shake of the hand. His old friend in Montreal laughed.

"Well, it won't do you any good. You'll never get the Protestants of Ontario to mix themselves up in this matter. The only thing you can do is to strike some compromise with the English-speaking Catholics and then go to the Government with a proposition."

The French-Canadian visitor threw up his eyes and shrugged his shoulders. "Ah, that is impossible", he said. "we can do nothing with the Irish!" "Well, if you can do nothing with your co-religionists you will do nothing with others," said the old editor. "The only thing the rest of us are considering is that this is an English-speaking province, or if it is not it ought to be."

Before the week end most of the pamphlets which the Montreal visitor left in the journalistic sanctums were on the way to the paper mills with the rest of the waste that comes out of large newspaper offices.

STEEL OF CANADA ORDER

HAMILTON, Ont., April 8.—The Steel Company of Canada today received the order from Ottawa for shells that hundreds of men were idle there, awaiting material from Hamilton that would permit industries there to work full blast on war orders. The following statement was issued:

"The first order for steel for high explosive shells for Winnipeg was received March 31st. The material is in course of manufacture, but owing to the great time necessary to produce the special steel of a grade suitable for high explosive shells, a large number of both physical and chemical tests must be made. Shipments cannot be made until the full requirements of the War Office, respecting specifications, are met."

COBALT SHOWS UNMISTAKABLE SIGNS OF "COMING BACK".

The Cobalt Camp, says Hamilton B. Wills, of Toronto, is showing unmistakable signs of "coming back" with a vengeance and with the chance for scoring a sharp advance in silver 1915 now promises to compare favorably with the most productive years of the camp. As a matter of fact, my Cobalt engineer declares, future prospects on Timiskaming, Beaver, Nipissing, Cobalt Townsite and Kerr Lake were better, also that the two former mines have at present more high-grade ore, running in value from 4,000 to over 10,000 ounces to the ton, in sight than ever before. Crown Reserve is another mine, I am advised, to be heard of to a marked improvement as the mud is removed from the bo-untered section of the company's ground in Kerr Lake.

Pretty Soft for New Champion

NEW YORK, April 8.—Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion will get $5,000 for his first week on the stage, after winning the title. A contract calling for that amount was closed by Hammerstein's Victoria last night with Lawrence Weber, home representative of Harry H. Frazee, Jack Curley and Tom Jones, joint managers of Willard, who approved the deal by wire. Willard's engagement begins Monday. His sparring partner Jim Savage, will box with him, and a dramatic sketch, containing only brief speaking parts for the champion is being prepared. The contract gives the theatre an option to extend the engagement a week at a time.

"Dry" Canteens

C. E. F. Canteens Will be Dry and Conducted Under Auspices of Regiment

Orders authorizing the establishment of "dry" canteens for the active service battalions now being organized throughout the country have been issued. It is expressly provided that these canteens shall be under the direct supervision of the regimental officers, and that the privileges shall not be sublet.

The establishment of dry canteens for each unit of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and also for each unit of the active militia during the period of training is authorized.

"These canteens to be organized, administered, and carried on under the supervision and direction of the officer commanding the unit, or by a committee appointed by him. They are to be inspected daily by an officer, and once a month by the commanding officer or by an officer appointed by him, at which inspection the books, accounts and vouchers, and also an audited cash statement are to be submitted.

"These canteens are to be maintained solely for the use and benefit of the unit and are not, on any account, to be sublet or handed over to any person or persons. They are to be managed by a member of the unit, and no one else is to be employed in connection with the canteen unless he is an enlisted soldier of such unit. Any profits arising from these canteens are to be applied for the use and benefit of the non-commissioned officers and men of such unit.

"Garrison, regimental or corps regulations governing such canteens and also the hours for opening and closing of the same will be published in regimental or corps orders for the information of all concerned."

Such a canteen has been established in connection with the 39th Battalion, which is stationed in Belleville.

DEATH OF AGED LADY

Mrs. Nathan Denyes, an aged and most estimable lady, who resided with her son, Mr. H. F. Denyes, of Thurlow Township, passed away at an early hour this morning after a brief illness. The cause of death was senile decay. Week ago Mrs. Denyes was visiting relatives in the country and upon returning to her home appeared to be bright and cheerful. Yesterday she was taken ill and died after a few hours illness. Deceased was in her 86th year, having been born in Huntingdon Township in the year 1829. She was a daughter of the late Mr. Henry Ketcheson. For the past 62 years deceased had lived in Thurlow Township, where she was well known and much respected. Mrs. Denyes had been for years a member of Zion Hill Methodist church, and was the only surviving member of the church in that neighborhood when it was dedicated. She was a devout Christian lady. She survived by one son, Mr. H. K. Denyes, and one daughter, Mrs. H. H. Dafoe, of College Hill, in this city. Two brothers are living, namely Mr. W. Ketcheson of Coulton and John V. of Thurlow.

Excellent Lecture By Dr. Robertson

His Subject Pertained to the Red Cross, and was Admirably Handled

Dr. Robertson's lecture at the High School yesterday afternoon was attended by a very appreciative audience. Mrs. Wills opened the meeting, suggesting that all sing O Canada, after which Dr. Robertson took the platform. He spoke intelligently on his subject, "The Red Cross Society," and held the attention of his audience from the first.

The Red Cross, the speaker said, helps to preserve a spirit of humanity. The men who seek to make money out of this war are equal to that monarch who said to Belgium's King, "See, now you have lost everything." A love of domination is inherited in man. Those who seek to dominate by force are usually very selfish men. However, love of power takes different forms—physical, mental, moral, money power, power of the soul, and so on. A great man in England once said of the Franco-Prussian War: "I admire the offensive quality of the Prussians, their unhesitating statesmanship, but I fear it and detest it. I feel certain that no good will come of their victory." That was forty years ago. That man had command of his soul.

Emperor William, at the beginning of the war, said to his troops: "Remember that the German nation and people are chosen of God. I am His sword, His vice-regent, His heir. Woe to the coward and the traitor." That is a spirit of diabolical pride that dominates will.

But because of the wrongs and cruelties of other nations, do not think that Britain has always done right. The Red Cross Society in Canada has a lot to do. There are the families of British reservists and the families of 30,000 men of the first contingent. They there are the comforts and necessities of these men, socks, mittens, cigarettes, blankets, medicines, etc.

The Belgian refugees also are dependents on the Red Cross, and it is our duty to look after them, for they saved our country millions in men and money and probable defeat. If they had stood aside the Germans would have got Paris and Calais, and then it would have been easy to land millions of men in England to sack and devastate that country instead of Belgium.

Miss M. Campbell

Still, thousands of Canadian families didn't give one cent in money, food or clothing. The Belgians should get continued help.

Florence Nightingale was the great pioneer of this Red Cross work. She used to talk a lot of England's duty to itself regarding children. The first meeting was held in Geneva. Sixteen Governments were represented. They agreed to train and supply bodies of men and women to lessen the horrors of war." Germany alone has violated that treaty.

The Society now has some 511 hospitals, 300 motor ambulances, 150 motor lorries, 3 hospital ships, and six or seven thousand men working in the field. A man who is wounded on Tuesday morning is in bed in England by Wednesday noon.

The need of the Red Cross Society will be greater in four or five months than ever before in the history of the world. Then, after the war there will be new duties. Every step upward brings new problems. We are trustees for life of the next generation. Success is not the act of a strong man collecting others' properties and goods, but the act of making life easier for those who follow us; therefore, we should do a little more towards the Red Cross, Belgian Relief Fund, Patriotic Fund, etc., for as the Bible says: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord."

Mrs. Mikel moved a vote of thanks in a few appropriate words, and Mrs. Sneyd seconded it. The singing of "God Save the King" concluded the meeting.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 640 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or cultivation of the land in each of three years, unless absolved from residence duties as hereinafter provided. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also must cultivate fifty acres extra. A pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

MEN IN THE RANKS PROUD OF OFFICERS

Command Courage of Their Leaders Who Share all Dangers—British Tommy Unemotional Fighter

Heavy artillery fire compelled us to abandon a short section of trench, which was afterwards reoccupied.

In some such bald phrase an official communique summed up the desperate resistance that was offered by a single brigade of British light cavalry holding some trenches a little south of Ypres to the attack of 2,000 German infantry, wrote a correspondent of the London Daily Mail. The three regiments forming the brigade were much reduced in strength—one of them counted only 104 rifles in the trenches; they were 400 at the most, against eight times their number, and the men who came out of the fight say that they had never known anything so terrible.

The German guns had the range of the English trenches to a yard and sent shell after shell that burst on the very parapets. Germans came on in extended lines; they have learned to abandon their old habit of attacks in column and dense masses. They lost enormously, a man for almost every English bullet, and the English fired as fast as fingers could load and press the trigger. But when at last they were a hundred yards from the trenches they fixed bayonets and came on at a rush, still five or six to one. The English troopers stood their their ground until the Germans were already inside the first line of trenches, and then, as one of them told the story, "we sloped."

It was after all, the sensible thing to do, and when British reinforcements had come up to make a counter-attack it was not long before the temporarily victorious Germans did the same.

"I've had some narrow shaves," said a lancer who was there, "but I never thought I'd get out of this one alive. You had to creep over dead bodies to get out."

Entire Absence of Emotion

To a soldier talk of the men killed in an action by their names brings to one a keener realization of the grimness of it all than the longest casualty list or the most vivid description. "There were five chaps in a small firing trench in front of the main one," went on the trooper. "Old Clarke and Tom Johnson and Brown and young Jefferson and another chap" (these are not actually the names he gave)—"they were firing like mad up to the very minute the Allymans jumped into the trench. We never saw them again. They wouldn't stand much chance of being taken prisoners."

There is entire absence of emotion about the way in which the British soldier speaks of his friends who have been killed. His tone is as carriers and casual as it might be if they had just gone home on leave. It sounds callous, but it is only the habit that comes from rubbing elbows with Death with a prospect of sharing his neighborhood for many months more.

"I've chaps cod each other," said a soldier. "Old Bills gone under," they say. "Remember him awankin' along here? Lucky 'e's other day!" Copped it fairly this time, he has."

"It's not that they don't care," explained the trooper, who had the clay of the trenches still upon his spurs, "but you either get potted or you don't, but it soon don't come to matter a bit after war."

Army Short of Nothing

There is a magnificent spirit in these men who have been hardened by months of the most terrible and most continuous war in history. Danger and hardship have become for them the normal conditions of life. "You just get used to it," said one of them. And the best symptom of all is that they are thoroughly pleased with themselves, with their officers, their food, their clothes—with everything. It is not the false confidence of vanity. The army has been tried by fire, tried and not found wanting.

"What do you miss most—what are you most short of?" I asked a soldier met in a railway station. "The British army's short of nothing," he answered, almost aggressively. "We've everything we want and plenty to spare—from horses to jam."

The hundreds of young men to whom the War Office has given commissions will find that they have a very high standard to live up to when they come over here. The British officer is the most highly paid, the keenest critics—the men he leads. "The best officers in the world, sir, and that's what makes the British army what it is."

Physical courage and a readiness to share to the full the hardships of their men are also the qualities that most commend an officer to English soldiers. The men take among themselves about one officer in a regiment, another's monocle, the lisp of one's subaltern, the silk undershirts of another, and his anguish at being unable to get a bath—all strictly reported in his soldier-servant; but these very characteristics that under normal conditions provoke proletarian ridicule only throw up the officer's soldierly qualities into higher relief.

"They're good sorts," a cavalryman said. "They'll come along the trenches from one booby-hutch to another to see if you're all right and they'll lay down right alongside you in the mud without thinking about their clothes. They'll let you have a look through their field glasses and follow you with a fag—if you've any to spare. If the trenches all night they stay with you, share and share alike."

War Booms Old Business

England's oldest industry, the flint knapping business, which is still carried on in Brandon, Suffolk, is experiencing a brisk business as a result of the war, the flint knappers being busy fitting up tinderboxes for the use of the "Tommies" at the front.

General Otter evidently did not want to enter into any controversy when he supplied the Canadian soldiers.

BULGARIA WARNED TO MAKE NO MISTAKE

PARIS, April 8.—The farcial nature of Bulgaria's reply to Serbia—a tissue of shrieking improbabilities, The Journal Des Debats calls it—has caused a marked change in the attitude of the French press, which previously was inclined to consider the incident as devoid of serious significance. The Temps says: "It is with literal stupefaction we see the Bulgarian apology concerned into a complaint of Serbian ill-treatment of Turkish subjects. The document takes its place among the least satisfactory ones of the war. Recalling those of Berlin, with whose clutch it is difficult not to see Bulgarian complicity.

"The frequency of the attacks on the Salonika-Dedeagh Railway raises the matter above a mere incident. Let Bulgaria remember that hostility to Serbia means war with France, Great Britain and Russia. The affair may be a plot of the Radoslavof Cabinet to prevent rumored changes. If so, it shows how greatly the changes are needed. If the present Cabinet is incapable of wisdom, let it resign or take the consequences."

KING ALBERT'S BIRTHDAY

Letters of Sympathy and Admiration from Canadian Statesmen

The Woman's Canadian Club, of Ottawa will hold a celebration of the birthday of King Albert of Belgium to-day (April 8), the purpose being to aid the Belgian Relief Fund.

Mrs. W. T. Herridge, the president, has received letters of sympathy from a number of men in public life:

Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden wrote as follows:

"My Dear Mrs. Herridge.—The purpose of the Woman's Canadian Club of Ottawa to celebrate the birthday of King Albert of Belgium by a special effort towards the relief of his stricken people is one that is peculiarly fitting. No Canadian can fail to do honor to a King who has so signally proven his title to leadership, nor to respond to an appeal on behalf of those who have unhesitatingly followed him in counting no cost too great to preserve, against the assault of an unscrupulous ambition, their ideals and their land as a nation. Their cause is ours; they have stood at the very forefront of the battle, and because they have so greatly dared they are to-day literally a people bespoiled of home. Our people who have happily been spared so grim a sacrifice have not been found lacking in meeting our duty to aid and succour them. I cannot doubt that continued efforts are worthy of that of the Woman's Canadian Club will meet their deserved response."

Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, said, in his message: "I am pleased, indeed, to hear that the Woman's Canadian Club of Ottawa propose to specially celebrate the birthday of King Albert of Belgium, on the 8th of April. For faithfulness and heroism the Belgian Monarch has made for himself a place in history equal to anything preserved even in the Hellenic records, and amongst the world's noble figures in modern times his life entitles King Albert to admiration and affection scarcely second to our own revered Queen Victoria. The service rendered by this leader of a brave people last August to France and her Allies ensures him and them the imperishable gratitude, to say the least, of every British citizen."

Hon. G. H. Murray, premier of Nova Scotia, had to say: "King Albert's birthday will be honored wherever men sympathize with devotion to duty and admire the finest courage. His beautiful country has been ruthlessly devastated but the spirit of King and people is still undaunted. The welfare of the Belgians lies close to the hearts of all loyal Britons; their stand against overwhelming odds saved our Empire from a more disastrous war. Can we Canadian do too much for those who for our sakes sacrificed all?"

SPEAKER ON STRIKE, SENATE IN A FLUTTER

Question of Jurisdiction Has Created Situation Without Parallel at Ottawa—Senator Lougheed Opposes Government Appointee—Physical Force Suggested

OTTAWA, April 10.—(Special)—A situation has arisen on Parliament Hill unprecedented in Canadian parliamentary annals. The speaker of the Senate has gone on strike. Yesterday the committee on internal economy in the red chamber brought in a report, and Senator Power moved its adoption. Senator Landry moved the motion out of order on the ground that all changes in connection with the internal economy of the Upper House must be initiated by the Speaker. Senator Power appealed from the ruling and the appeal was upheld. Senator Lougheed, the Government leader voting against the Speaker. Speaker Landry, of course, is an appointee of the Government, and the situation was thus created of the Government leader opposing the Government's own appointee.

This happened in the morning. When the Senate met in the afternoon Speaker Landry was absent, and on motion of the Government leader, Senator Boldue was elected temporary presiding officer.

Last night there were rumors in the corridors that Speaker Landry had gone on strike, refusing to act until his status and jurisdiction were established beyond question.

This afternoon there was a meeting of the Senators, from which press and public were excluded, and, according to reliable reports, the situation created by the absence of Speaker Landry came in for some red-hot eloquence, one Montreal representative suggesting that his honor be "dragged into his place by the sergeant-at-arms." This suggestion was not acted upon. After a sultry 15-minute session the press was admitted. Then Senator Choquette asked Senator Lougheed if the rumor of the Speaker's resignation were true. He was told that the Government had no information as to the Speaker's intentions.

It is reported that Speaker Landry has written Sir Robert Borden, setting forth his position in detail.

Last night Speaker Landry explained that there was nothing personal in the dispute. "It is just a matter of the respective jurisdiction of the Speaker and internal economy committee. I hold that under the Civil Service Act I have the right to make all suggestions to the Senate in respect to appointments, etc. If the Senate rejects my suggestions, I would make new ones, but the decision should remain with me."

His honor hinted that unless his views were acceded to the deadlock or strike would continue.

FURTHER ATTACKS ON REMENAUVILLE

Germans Claim Repulse of French on Heights of Combres.

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 10.—A German official statement says: "Between the Meuse and the Moselle violent engagements continued yesterday. Between the River Orne and the Heights of the Meuse the French were severely defeated. All French attacks from the heights of Combres, north of St. Mihiel, and on the Ailly-Apremont front near Flirey, have been repulsed. Near the Flirey, in consequence of former heavy French losses, the fighting yesterday was less violent. Further attacks on the Remenauville front and in the Forest of Le Petre and an attempt to capture Beznage la Grande, southwest of Chateau Salins, resulted in failure. Five Belgian officers and 122 soldiers, two French officers and 101 soldiers were taken prisoners by us, together with seven machine guns. In the Vosges there has been no change.

DESPERATE BAYONET FIGHTING

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 10.—This afternoon's statement says there is nothing to add today to the official communication of last night, except the report last night of supplementary reports relating that two attacks which yesterday made us masters of the last German position at Les Eparges led to desperate bayonet fighting.

CANADIANS WILL BE QUIETLY PROSPEROUS

MONTREAL, April 9.—Mr. E. C. Pratt, general manager of Molsons Bank, who is just back from an extended trip through the West and down the Pacific Coast, says that business out there is dull at present but that with a record acreage to be planted this year Westerners are hopeful for a return of better times next year. There was a good covering of snow on the ground throughout the prairie provinces this winter so that the seeding will be done under the best possible conditions. Estimates as to the increase in acreage run as high as 40 per cent., but this figure, of course, is hardly conservative. In the cities dullness is accentuated by the lack of all "boom" operations. However, as Mr. Pratt points out, this is something for which the country should be thankful as real estate speculation has been most overdone.

AUSTRIA TO SOUND RUSSIA ON SUBJECT OF PEACE TERMS

(Canadian Press Special)

GENEVA, April 10.—The Tribune says Austria will remain on the defensive against Serbia in order to send additional army corps to the Italian frontier. The Tribune also asserts that Vienna has decided to sound Russia on the subject of peace terms. The Russians have made important captures of guns during the recent fighting in the Carpathians. Austrian losses on the battle on the Dukla-Eperies front are placed at 26,000 men.

SCANDAL IN ARMS ORDERS

Allies' Agents in America Said to Have Accepted Bribes

LONDON, April 9.—The Cologne Gazette prints the following:

"The Allies recently found it necessary to replace the Commissioners who were in North America looking after deliveries of arms because they worked too much for their own pockets. They had demanded such high commissions that in order not to work at a loss the armament factories had to deliver bad material. This was openly admitted by the manufacturers.

"It is said English, French, and Russians all shared in the bribes, so that they have no grievance against one another. In many cases Commissioners of different countries even cooperated.

"The investigation is still going on, but probably will soon develop into a pretty scandal."

ICE GETTING SOFT ON LAKE SUPERIOR

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 9.—Active preparations for the opening of navigation are in evidence at this point. The lighthouse tender, Clover, steamed up yesterday and broke up a great deal of the harbor ice. The Canadian canal is ready for the first boat at any time. A telegram received from Lighthouse Keeper Carlson at White-Fish, gives the condition there as follows:

"The ice-field in Lake Superior moved off about 10 miles. The ice in the bay below the point is getting soft but is still intact. It is very tough for a distance of two miles below the point."

Child's ice in the lower river also are becoming more favorable. Weather is improving and has been warm for the last two days, with indications of further warm temperature.

FRENCH MASTED SHIP SUNK BY SUBMARINE

(Canadian Press Special)

LE TREPORT, France, April 10.—The French three-masted ship of 2,000 tons, Chateaubriand, from London for New York, with a cargo of chalk, was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight Thursday morning. The crew was saved. They were given ten minutes by the German commander to launch the boats. The ship was then torpedoed.

Actions Indicated A German Spy

Offered to Help Toronto Lady Until He Found Out Her Destination

TORONTO, April 9.—The officers of the Education Association Convention which concluded its sessions yesterday are wondering which of the association's members or guests happens to be a German spy travelling in the guise of an educational expert.

The story went the rounds of the convention today, and is vouched for by one of the officers of the association that a Toronto lady, wife of a commercial traveller in this city, while returning to Toronto yesterday, encountered on the train a gentleman who got on at Syracuse, who let it be known that he was on his way to the convention in Toronto, and who talked pro-German doctrines to his fellow-passengers all the way to Buffalo.

When the passengers alighted to change trains at Buffalo, this gentleman offered to carry the lady's grips for her. As they were walking across the platform he chanced to ask her destination.

"I am on my way home to Toronto," replied the lady.

A look of consternation crossed the face of the supposed educational authority, who dropped the lady's grips at once, and departed hastily, and without explanation or apology. He was not seen on the train for the remainder of the journey to Toronto, and it is believed that, if he came at all, he must have waited for a later train, rather than risk having himself pointed out to the police by his chance acquaintance on arrival in this city.

STRUCK BY A CAR MAY NOT RECOVER

Man Supposed to be Samuel Moffatt of Desoronto Seriously Injured

TORONTO, April 10.—Special—A man supposed by the police to be Samuel Moffatt of Desoronto, was struck by a west bound Bathurst street car on Front street, near Bathurst, at 6 o'clock last night and is now in the General Hospital suffering from a fractured skull from which he is not expected to recover. He was unconscious at a late hour last night.

Motorman Smith, and Conductor Brotherton avenue, who was in charge of the car, told the police that Moffatt was struck by the G.T.R. freight shed across the street and in front of his car. He stepped his car within a car's length. The rails were wet and Moffatt struck a glancing blow by the front of the car, was whirled around and, it is believed, received his injuries by coming in contact with the rear portion of the street car. He was rushed by the police ambulance to the General Hospital. In his pockets there was found a letter addressed to Samuel Moffatt, Desoronto.

Both Leaders Have Similar Grievances

Sir Wilfrid and Sir Robert Complain of Critics Who Censure Attitude of Recruiting

OTTAWA, April 9.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier on a question of privilege in the House of Commons today called attention to what he said was a leaflet published by the Conservative Publicity Bureau. It referred to his former statement that if the people were run in peril would stump Quebec to raise recruits, but added that now that peril had come he had not stumped Quebec.

This statement, Sir Wilfrid declared, was "a falsehood and a malignant libel and slander." He had attended a big recruiting meeting in Montreal, and would have attended more meetings if it were necessary to secure recruits but the Premier and Minister of Militia had said that the French-Canadians were recruiting well.

Sir Robert Borden replied that this leaflet had not come to his attention, but Sir Wilfrid was not the only one on whom animadversions had been made. Last fall, when he (Sir Robert) was working 16 or 18 hours a day at his post at Ottawa, Opposition organs in Ontario criticised him for not having spoken in public to encourage recruiting. Dr. Michael Clark, "Did you say that was in a newspaper?"

Sir Robert—Yes, and a very prominent organ of the hon. member's party.

"Then when I did go out and make public addresses which contained nothing whatever of a controversial nature those same organs which had accused me of holding my peace declared that I was conducting a political campaign."

The matter was then dropped.

IRISHMAN ARRESTED ON SEDITION CHARGE

DUBLIN, April 9.—John Hegarty, described as a clerk in the employ of James Bodger, a journalist, was arrested today under the defence of the realm act, charged with sedition. It is stated that notices alleged to be in Hegarty's handwriting, were found posted in conspicuous places, declaring that when the Germans landed in Ireland they would come as friends to abolish English rule, and appealing to the Irish people to help Germans, who would pay for any stores taken.

Dominate Plain Of Woevre

LONDON, April 10.—Special—Many days of fierce fighting on the part of the French forces in their drive upon the Metz were recorded yesterday with a most important victory in the Woevre region. After a brilliant attack the gallant troops of Les Eparges, which dominates the Woevre plain and which the Germans have held stubbornly, is now wholly in the hands of General Joffre's forces. Many prisoners were taken, according to the French official reports.

TUG TRIED TO RAM A GERMAN SUBMARINE

SOUTH SHIELDS, Eng., April 10.—(Special)—The tug Homer, towing the French bark Colonel Fomin, off St. Catherine's point yesterday, was attacked by a submarine, according to reports brought here today. The tug attempted to ram the submarine in the heavy sea, but missed her by about three feet. The German then sent a submarine against the side of the bark, sinking her. The Homer escaped.

WARSHIPS AND LAND FORCES TO COMBINE

(Canadian Press Special)

ROME, April 10.—Admiral Battolo, former Minister of Marine, expresses the opinion that the Dardelles can be forced by a proper combination of naval bombardment of the forts followed up by operations adequate on land.

QUIET IN THE DARDANELLES.

London, April 10.—(Special)—The allied fleet bombarded the forts in the Dardanelles all day Sunday and during part of Wednesday, but on Thursday everything was quiet in the straits, according to The Daily Telegraph Mitylene correspondent.

GIRLS FOUGHT GUNMEN IN FACTORY ROBBERY

Male Employees Cowered Before Desperado's Gun—Took $1,500 From Office—Resistance of Stenographers Saved $700 —Men are Still at Large

TORONTO, April 10.—(Special)—While the male employees of the factory of the Sterling Actions & Keys, Limited, Noble street, cowered under the revolvers of two gunmen yesterday afternoon, the only occupants of the factory office, Miss Alice Robertson, 1,308 King street west, and Miss May Helsprott, saved their employers several hundred dollars by making one of the pluckiest fights yet recorded on the police registers. Miss Robertson is now at her home suffering from the effects of the brutal treatment and choking which she received, and the no-lowest escape from death that she has ever experienced. During the fight one of the gunmen fired at her as she was escaping from the office. The bullet lodged in the door case directly over her head.

That the hold-up was carefully planned was borne out by the details of the story furnished by the manager of the factory, Mr. F. T. Quirk of 261 Beaconscourt road. Yesterday was pay day at the factory. The employees' salaries were much lighter than usual owing to the enforced holidays which have occured during the past two weeks. Quirk knew this, and, in order to get their business through the nearest branch of the Royal Bank, and usually receive the money to pay their employees by the bank messengers. Owing to the fact that the bank automobile broke down yesterday morning, Mr. Quirk was forced to carry the cash from the bank, amounting to some twenty-three hundred dollars. Of this sum the daring gunmen obtained fifteen hundred dollars.

That the men were in full touch with the affairs of the company was also shown by the fact that they did not cross the railroad tracks to the factory until Mr. Quirk and Mr. Shapley, the President of the company, had left for the central part of the city on a business errand. They were seen approaching by the foreman of the factory.

While one man stood outside the office which faces Noble street, the other two entered. After asking for the manager, and receiving a negative reply, the men produced revolvers, and warned the two stenographers that they would shoot on the slightest resistance. The sight of the firearms stirred the women to action. Their screams were heard through the partition which separates the factory from the office and brought the Yokes hands and a traveller from the Yokes Manufacturing Company to their assistance. Stepping to the doorway, one gunman ordered the employees back into the factory. The men reluctantly obeyed. When the gunman started for the object of their visit, the pay envelopes he found the women standing between him and the money. Miss Robertson and her companion refused to hand over the money. The gunman seized Miss Helsprott by the throat and threatened her to the floor. When Miss Robertson went to the assistance of her companion she met with similar treatment. During the scuffle the money which was held in two baskets fell to the floor. One of the baskets turned up side down without the envelopes falling out.

Jumping to her feet as the gunman started to gather up the envelopes, Miss Robertson started to the door which led to the factory. In an effort to stop her flight the gunman fired at her, but fortunately missed by inches. She then ran into the factory, Miss Robertson hurried to the street and reached a neighboring house, where she communicated with the Police Department. In the meantime the gunmen swept fifteen hundred dollars into a black club bag and reached the railroad station by jumping a fence on Noble street. Although they were on foot they had little difficulty in escaping through the railroad yards.

The lack of proper equipment for the Police Department was seriously felt when the report was transmitted to the Detective Headquarters. The first report of the hold-up was sent to Cowan Avenue Police Station and was answered by Detective Nicholls. Owing to the lack of an automobile Detective Inspector Kennedy was forced to jump into the nearest street car to the vicinity. They reached the factory thirty minutes after the trio had escaped with the money.

Both Mr. Shapley and Mr. Quirk spoke highly of the action of their stenographers, and not slightingly of the male employees when they learned the particulars of the case on their return.

"They saved us seven hundred dollars," said Mr. Quirk. "The basket which fell to the floor contained this sum, and was missed by the men in their efforts to escape."

Mail Accuses Herald of Libel

Obtains Warrant Also to Search For Manuscript of Articles

MONTREAL, April 10.—Special—On the complaint of M. E. Nichols, on behalf of The Herald Daily Mail Company, a summons was issued yesterday afternoon by Judge Choquet, calling upon J. Gordon Smith, managing editor, and H. C. Leitheal, Secretary-Treasurer, of The Herald Publishing Company, to come before the court to answer a charge of criminal libel. The court also granted a petition for a warrant to search The Herald premises for the original manuscripts of the alleged libelous articles which The Herald is said to have printed in connection with the purchase by the Dominion Government of the Carslake Hotel property, opposite the Grand Trunk station, St. James street. Two detectives of The Daily Mail sold the property to the Government, and The Herald charged that an excessive price was paid for the property.

WANTS MOUTH ORGAN TO PASS AWAY TIME

TORONTO, April 8.—An auto valve mouth organ is a desire of Leonard Peer in a letter received by the editor of the trenches, and in a letter to his sister, Mrs. William Wyles, he asks her to send him one. He says it is pretty quiet in the billets. We have just got back to our billets after doing four days in the trenches. There's not much doing along the line just now, a few shells now and then with a bit of sniping off and on, although we expect to start to advance any time now as the weather is opening up fine over here."

GERMAN RESERVES CALLED TO OVERAWE HUNGARIANS

Civil War Threatened Behind Armies Now Facing Russians, May Force Von Hindenberg to Readjust Whole Plan of Campaign

PETROGRAD, April 10.—(Special)—Already there are remarkable signs that the more serious purpose of the large German reinforcements now assembling the augments of the Hungarian Government is to overawe the rural population, which was beginning to threaten revolt.

Should the Hungarian crisis burst into a civil war behind the armies now facing the Russians, it is certain Von Hindenburg will immediately abandon his lines facing Narew from the north and bring the main German army into Western Poland, sending Mackensen's forces south again to try to get below the Russian position in Hungary. The Germans in the north have only one officer for about 400 men.

German Spy: "Dot Laurier bandt couldn't blay in harmony mit us letter had it been made in Germany."

GERMAN DYESTUFFS OUSTED BY AMERICAN MANUFACTURED GOODS

Twelve Millions Formerly Spent in Germany, Remains in United States —Could Supply World—Wastage from America's Coke Ovens Worth a Hundred Millions Every Year

WASHINGTON, April 9.—American Chemical Companies are bending every effort toward supplying textile mills and industries using artificial dyes with home products to replace German dye-stuffs, shut off by the European war. Reports to the Department of Commerce made public today show that at least six plans are in course of construction for the manufacture of the coal tar derivities upon which the colors used in both manufacture, varnishes and other products are based.

Independent of Germany

Approximately, $6,000,000 is to be expended, and within a few months it is estimated that much of the material for the simpler dyes, which heretofore was purchased in Germany at a cost of $12,000,000 annually will be turned out in the United States. A report of the dyestuff situation, called for by a resolution of Congress, was given out today by the department. It was compiled by Thomas H. Norton, a commercial agent of the Department, who recently served as Consul in Germany and is familiar with the industry.

Wastage Would Supply World

Mr. Norton estimates that American ovens are wasting annually $1,000,000 in by-products that could be saved and employed in other industries, it having been preferred heretofore to depend upon German chemicals rather than develop an American dyestuff supply. The American coke industry the report states, could produce twenty times as much coal tar as the world needs for dyes.

In his report Mr. Norton calls attention to the fact that England has already taken steps to free herself of dependence upon the German dyestuff trade, and that similar steps have been taken in France, and are contemplated in Russia.

U. S. Too Good To The Allies

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Special —Germany has sent to the United States Government a note complaining that the latter has accomplished nothing in its diplomatic correspondence with the allies to obtain for American exporters the right to ship foodstuffs to the civilian population of a belligerent country. The communication intimates that the United States has virtually acquiesced in the British order in Council prohibiting commerce with Germany.

In view of these considerations, the German Government then calls attention to the fact that the allies are daily obtaining large shipments of arms and ammunition, from dealers in the United States, and declares that the American Government, while insisting on its legal right to ship arms to belligerents, does not with equal energy pursue its right to ship foodstuffs and non-contraband articles to the civilian population of Germany.

Municipal Bonds are Paid out of Taxes. Taxes are a First Lien on Property.

Municipal bonds are therefore a prior lien to first mortgages. If a municipality should be so foolish as to refuse to pay its debenture interest or principal, the sheriff could be sent in. He has power under such conditions, to levy and collect by enforcement proceedings a special tax sufficient to pay the bonds.

Municipal Bonds which, normally sold to yield the investor from 5 per cent to 6 per cent we are now offering to yield from 6 per cent to 7½ per cent.

Isolation Hospital Now in Operation

Military Authorities State of Fact at Camp Valley-field—The Facilities and Treatment

Interviewed by an Intelligencer representative, this morning, the authorities of the new Detention Hospital on Church street, explained that there was absolutely no need of fear on the part of the public as to the isolation of disease. The men are merely sent there for observation and treatment. Patients will be examined by capable physicians, and if found to be seriously ill will be sent to the General Hospital; but ordinary cases, such as colds, and minor complaints, will be attended to in the Detention Hospital, and subjected to examination by experts for any disease. In the meantime no intercourse with outside life will be permitted.

The building is conveniently arranged, steam heated, lighted by electricity, and has 25 or 30 beds, about 12 of which are in the general ward, 11 in the convalescent ward, and one or two for the more serious cases.

There are two nurses, one physician and several orderlies in attendance, besides two cooks, also a housekeeping staff.

Carbolized water and other disinfectants are used liberally, while the cooking and eating utensils are sterilized continually. No baker, butcher or milkman visits the place, all supplies, including medicines, supplied by the army service corps.

It is purely a military hospital under the most scrupulous sanitary rules, and the people of the neighborhood can dismiss the slightest fear of contagion.

British Arrest 3 on Espionage

One a German, Another English & Third American

LONDON, April 9.—Charged with sending military information to Germany by means of invisible ink, three persons have been arrested and will be tried in a civil court. The authorities intimate that the case is one of the most important. One of the suspects named Anton Kneppler, has lived in the an American. Another, Muller, claims to be a naturalized British subject, while the third, Bohin, bears the name of Hahn, does not deny that he is a German subject.

Kneppler's case came from the United States, first stirring Bohin and then coming to London, where he is said to have been awaiting passage home. It is said that Bohin admits he had a faked United States passport. He is said to be regarded by the British as the most dangerous spy they have had to deal with since the war started.

Kneppler is found tonight to have in his possession an American passport which gives his address as 1,664 DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Calgary Soldiers Threaten Libel

CALGARY, April 9.—Because of the published report that soldiers here were drinking immoderately and were responsible for he alleged immoral conditions, over two thousand members of the 31st and 50th Battalions encamped here refused to attend drill yesterday and ordered that their officers that steps would be taken to secure an apology from the ministers and other citizens who signed the reports of that failing in such an apology actions be instituted against the signatories to the same. The soldiers held a mass meeting in protest yesterday and declared that at the most not over three per cent. of the men encamped here had been guilty of misconduct.

There was today a large attendance upon the market, and prices paid for all produce was exceptionally good. Fresh dairy butter sold at from 32c to 35c. per pound; fresh eggs from 18c. to 20c. per dozen. Dressed poultry was rather scarce, and chickens sold at 65c. to $1.50 per pair, according to size and quality. Potatoes sold at 65c. and 70c. per bag. Maple syrup was quite plentiful, retailing at $1.40 per gallon.

FIRE AT MADOC

On Thursday a residence at Marmora Village was destroyed by fire. Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Potter have been residing in the house, but both were out of town when the fire occurred; the former being away on Monday and the latter on the 3 o'clock bus on Tuesday. The contents of the house were all destroyed, the fire being today advanced when first discovered on or anything out of the building. The building is a total loss. The contents are said to have been insured, but we understand the sum was not large one the building.

Hydro-Electric Railway Scheme

A District Meeting to be Held in This City—Many Delegates Will be in Attendance

Mayor Panter this morning received the following communication from the City Clerk of Peterborough in reference to the proposed meeting to be held in this city re. Hydro-Electric Railways. It will be noted that the date mentioned will be satisfactory and arrangements for the meeting will proceed. The communication was as follows:

Clerk's Office,
Peterborough, Ont., April 9.

Mr. Wm Panter, Esq., Mayor,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir —At the last meeting of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association of Ontario the Province was divided into a number of districts, among them being the Trent Valley District comprising the counties of Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Northumberland and Peterborough. The officers of the association are anxious that the district should be organized at the earliest date to develop and plan a system of railways to the eastern portion of the province.

At the time the deputation waited upon the Ontario Government in Toronto on March 20th a meeting of the delegates of the deputation from the Trent Valley District was called and the question of holding a meeting of representatives of the district at a central point especially suitable was decided that Belleville would be the most central and convenient point at which to hold such a meeting.

I am directed by Mr. T. F. Mathews, the President for the district, to ask if the meeting may be held in your City Hall, and whether you would consider the 11th of May next a suitable date. If your answer is favorable he proposes to arrange for calling the meeting in Belleville for that date.

Yours truly,
S. R. ARMSTRONG.

LONDON, April 10.—(Special)—Discussing reports in circulation of a casualtie in the Dardanelles, the Morning Post Christiana correspondent says:

"The Norwegian newspapers conclude that a German submarine was observed and pursued by a British cruising squadron, and that it was either destroyed or forced to disappear.

"No credence is given the report that a squadron of German ships escaped from the British squadron watching in the North Sea."

MONTREAL MEETING OF THE RED CROSS

The monthly meeting of the Red Cross of the Women's Patriotic Association was held on Tuesday evening in the Lions Club rooms, with the absence of the President, Mrs. Easton, the first vice-President, Mrs. MacColl presided.

The treasurer's report showed receipts for March of $48.40, expenditure, $29.70, with a balance on hand of $19.18. The following donations have been gratefully received: Proceeds of a concert in the Liberal Club room by Mr. O'Flynn, $7.00, Mrs. Paisley, to pay express charges on box, $1.00, Miss Alder, $5.00.

Mrs. O'Flynn, Convenor of supply committee, reported on hand, 240 pairs of socks, 188 prs. wristlets, 436 scarfs, 30 health bands, 14 house wives, 13 helmets, 6 prs. knee caps, 32 night shirts.

Miss Willis, Convenor of the Press, reported having had three meetings and 8 new families had been added to her list.

Miss Grant, Convenor of Hospital supplies, reported all ready to be shipped to Bridgeville Hospital.

Mrs. Ray reported for the "Ys" 60 pairs of socks sent in since January.

Mrs. H. E. Yeomans, Convenor of the Rainbow Circle, reported 363 pairs of socks since last meeting and $63.35 in money.

A communication was read from Mr. Major of Kingston, wife of Prosper of Malta and Mrs. Ross, offering the association one hundred copies of Miss Barr's story "Johnnie Canuck's children's story for her self, to be sold at twenty-five cents, the proceeds to be devoted to Red Cross work. The offer has been accepted, and as the words are very patriotic, and the music catchy, we feel sure that every one will want a copy.

CHIEF OF DETECTIVES IS SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Charged With Inciting to Crime Ferguson Call Him Head of Gang

SASKATOON, Sask., April 10.—(Special)—Chief of Detectives W. H. Springer was sent up for trial today on a charge of inciting to crime. This morning at Springer's preliminary hearing Fred McMillan, alias Burton, and Charles Pierson, two men under conviction for a series of jogging jobs in both Alberta and Saskatchewan, told circumstantially of inciting Saskatoon the haven from which they attacked safes at Sutherland, Prince Albert, North Battleford, Scott, and Edmonton, the latter place forming their downfall, as they were arrested there.

McMillan, who at the police investigation denied all communication with Springer, said this morning that he had been told that he wanted to save Springer, and he made the raid with the knowledge and approval of Springer, on the understanding that no one to share the profits. He said that Springer was really the operating head of the gang at work in Saskatchewan.

GIRL LIFE IN TUNIS

Sold Into Slavery Usually if Not Married at Fourteen

Life in the bazaar-lined streets of Tunis is almost indescribable, so wonderful is the wealth of color and so picturesque the throngs that pass and repass the tiny shops without front walls, in which the merchants sit cross-legged, smiling and bargaining. Not more interesting than any other feature are the Arab children who occupy the first row in the story teller's circle, crowd around the soak, charmer and, every one, in silence the amiable curiosity and adorable faith in humanity typical of children the world over. They are a happy, carefree lot, these handsome, cinnamon-brown youngsters with their black or brown eyes—large and snapping white teeth and dark, heavy hair. If they get a square meal a day nothing else seems to matter.

An Arab girl's carefree life is cut short at a pitiable early age. It is not thought necessary for her to go to school, and unless her family is well enough off to afford slaves, she must begin, when 8 or 9 years old, to carry water and to learn to grind wheat and knead bread. The grinding is very hard work and only grain enough for one meal is prepared at a time. Arab girls marry at 14 and those who do not marry are nearly always sold as slaves by their parents for sheep, camels or mules. Arab boys, unlike the girls who are absolutely without "book learning" attend school for a few years.

Like the little Arab lads and lassies, who up to a certain time know the joy of living, the children of wealthy Tunisians live a care-free existence. They are beautifully dressed, have slaves to wait upon them, and as they grow older usually become indolent and indifferent, especially the girls.

The Science of Bathing

People who bathe several times a week in warm water may find that sufficient for cleanliness but if they would wash the body every morning with a cloth and cold water they would find a big improvement in their health and ability to do a day's work.

To retire withered flowers plunge the stalks in boiling water and leave them in it until it becomes cold. Then cut about one inch from the ends of the stalks.

Potatoes on Vacant Lots

A definite proposition for the utilization of vacant city lots for growing potatoes on vacant lots was discussed by a committee of prominent citizens of Toronto. Mr. James C. Forman, Assessment Commissioner, reported that there are 2,870 acres in vacant lots, two thousand acres of which represent good cultivated land once used for vegetable farming. The estimate is that at a conservative figure these could produce between $300,000 and $200,000 worth of potatoes, yearly enough to feed the city.

Vigilance the Price of a Good Complexion

To retain the natural beauty of the skin only proper care and treatment is needed. As the skins are naturally clear and healthy, but the demands of every day life and unnatural living quickly spoil the freshness and beauty of it. So necessary is this care that not-woman can afford to neglect it. Special attention to the blood is very important if good results are to be obtained. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are unsurpassed for this purpose. They keep the blood pure, the kidneys healthy and active, the liver in good working order, and the bowels regular. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the result of years of careful study and experiment by Dr. A. W. Major-General Hughes in City

Made Hurried Review of C. N. R. Depot and Resumed Journey

Major-General Hon. S. Hughes, Minister of Militia, this afternoon arrived in this city per C. N. O. R. train going eastward. At the station the Minister of Militia, accompanied by his aide de camp, reviewed the members of the 39th Battalion, which was drawn up in parade form and presented a most creditable appearance. Col. Preston and Col. Major Ponton were in command. The battalion marched under marshalled past the Major-General in a creditable manner. After the march past the Minister, after a few friends, boarded the train for the east.

AN IGNOBLE ENDING

Following a stupendous four week's bluff at the American port of Newport News, the career of the German cruiser, Prinz Eitel Friedrich, after a voyage of over thirty thousand miles, comes to an end by submitting to the conditions of internment for the balance of the war period, obviously to avoid the utter destruction that awaited her at the hands of waiting allied warships should she again turn to the open sea.

It was a moral certainty on the day when the Eitel Friedrich entered Hampton Roads that she would not again get to sea while the war was on. But so long as actual internment could be avoided the Eitel Friedrich could hold several British and French cruisers off the port and thus prevent them from doing any mischief to Germany elsewhere. It was, therefore, the game of the German captain to pretend that he was going out, to secure all the time possible for repairs and to preserve the status of a belligerent just as long as he could. He certainly played the game well. It was March 10th when he entered the port and he avoided internment till the evening of April 7th. Much the the same thing happened when the Geier was interned at Honolulu, so it appears that she officials of the United States have fallen twice for the same bluff.

The case of the Eitel Friedrich was becoming quite perilous for the United States, for if she had actually gone to sea again that Government would certainly have been charged with a breach of neutrality in permitting her to outfit in an American port, and the Wilson administration would probably have been held responsible for any damage she might have done. Moreover, if she had gone out to be attacked, she would have been apt to manoeuvre so that shells might fall within the three-mile limit, if possible, and thus create another neutrality problem.

But now that she is tied to a neutral dock for the balance of the war, nothing more can be accomplished by the renegade; but just the same there are numerous commanders of Johnny Bull's rugged sea fighters who would appreciate the satisfaction of sending this imp of the ocean to the bottom.

RESTS WITH GREAT BRITAIN

Inability to secure German dyestuffs through the customary channels has brought about a critical situation in the American textile industry and, unless there is immediate relief, employers and employees will suffer. When the German supply was cut off at the outbreak of the war, an effort was made to produce dye stuffs in the United States but it will require some time, probably several years, experts say, for this country to produce dyes in sufficient quantities to meet the demands of the textile mills.

Great Britain, says the Buffalo Express, holds the key to the situation and a committee representing textile manufacturers has appealed to the Washington government in hopes of securing relief. According to these men, the supply of dyestuffs in this country is practically exhausted and mill operatives must soon lose their jobs or have their earning capacity materially reduced. Their report, based on communications from 28 States, indicates that mills employing over 400,000 operatives will be compelled to close their doors within a month or two if the British order prohibiting the exportation of all goods of German origin is permitted to stand.

The Washington officials who heard the plaint of the manufacturers has promised to consider the question. Here is a case requiring immediate action and no time should be lost in ascertaining Great Britain's attitude. It is to be hoped that satisfactory arrangements can be made, although the temper of the belligerents may prove a stumbling block, and England is a trade rival.

CURRENT COMMENT

Another intimation comes from Japan that German intrigue has much to do with its difficulties with China. That is quite probable.

L'Action Sociale: "The act of King George is the most direct blow ever struck against absolutism in the British Empire."

Montreal News: "Whatever Canada is to-day, and whatever the future may have in store for her, she owes it all to the British navy. France had Louisiana as well as Canada; she also lost command of the sea and Spain lost Florida for the same reason."

Would you like to do something to help in the war, say, for example, to bear the burden for a brief time? Mr. Herbert Samuel, in a recent speech in England, said that one who subscribes five thousand dollars pays Britain's war bills for just a minute and a half.

Some of the German newspapers say that the recent American note to Great Britain appears to be against Germany rather than against Great Britain. Unfortunately, Germany's course has been such that any paper based on established principles of international law would necessarily be more or less against Germany.

Montreal Gazette: "The crew of the raider Prinz Eitel Freidrich professed to be awfully cut up when Captain Thierichens informed them that the ship was to be interned for the period of the war. Probably by this time their sorrow is the same. The 20,000 bottles of beer on board should help to console the sailors somewhat in their grief at not being sent to Davy Jones's locker, by a French or British shell.

Women in the capital of the United States who approve of equal suffer evidently do not admire the proposals of the British suffragettes. Less strenuous methods of impressing the masculine mind are to be adopted. Suffragette advocates in Washington agreed to plant big beds of yellow flowers in their yards this year to show all passers-by that they favor votes for women.

From L'Evenement: "The Governor has now put the whole administrative energy into the search for truth on the subject of the scandals alleged by the Liberals for the honor of the leaders that they suffer in the eyes of all the honest public. Parliamentary inquiries were not held in this way when the Liberals were in power. They granted the inquiries reluctantly and then when finally enlightened on everything had the impudence as in the case of 'Lancelot the Painter,' to guard the guilty from punishment."

Some bureaucrat in New York is charged with sending a circular letter to street sweepers asking them how much they spent for clothes, including underwear and nightgowns; for rings, handkerchiefs and other things. They were also to itemize the expenditures of their wives. Some of the listed items were dresses, petticoats, corsets, corset covers, garters, hairpins, and belts. The children's expenditures were to be itemized also. Information was desired as to amusements, the money spent at Coney Island, on the movies, trips to parks, and in regard to the cost of lessons and other board hold utensils. Alderman Dowling, the Tammany leader, is justified in his sarcastic indignation over such paternalism as that.

Kingston Standard: "Mr. Timothy Michael Rice did wisely to clear out of Kingston before his removal was hastened in the manner it deserved. Mr. Timothy Michael Rice did not belong to Kingston, and, if Mr. Timothy Michael Rice dares to return to the city, Mr. Timothy Michael Rice will be shown that Mr. Timothy Michael Rice's presence is not agreeable to the citizens of Kingston. With such a plan placed upon his carcass, it is not at all probable that Mr. Timothy Michael Rice will return to Kingston.

From La Patrie: "If the inquiry has proved anything, it is the entire good faith and zeal of the Government. It is difficult to conceive that a Minister can, when circumstances demand quick action, purchase in several weeks fifty million dollars' worth of supplies without making somewhat dearer than may be reasonable for one or other of the contractors. The investigation has shown that on the whole, the Government has defended itself against the 'appetites'' of the contractors. One of them who succeeded in selling goods at a high price was forced to go and turn the over charge,' which proves that the Department has been watchful and has exercised a severe control. Sir Rodolphe Boivin declared in Parliament that the plunderers, if they were discovered, would be severely punished. Under any regime, they are deserved to block the light and hide the guilty."

ROBERT E. KEMERER
108 BAY STREET TORONTO
MAY WE LETTER

Toronto, April 10th, 1915

The markets during the week have continued to evince a remarkable degree of strength and material advances have been scored throughout the list. The removal of minimum prices by the committee of the New York Stock Exchange was made the basis of an attempt to force prices to lower levels but the attack was a total failure from every point of view.

The action of the market since the removal of this last remaining restriction would seem to show that, not only is the financial situation at large well in control, but that the stock market is in a position of such fundamental strength as to be well able to take care of itself. Such foreign selling as was encountered was easily taken care of. Future selling from abroad is unlikely to have any noticeable effect on the gold position. In any events both Canada and the United States are in a position to meet a much greater volume of foreign liquidation than is liable to be encountered.

The ease of money, Coupled with improving industrial conditions and reports of better earnings by railroads, has been the preponderating factor of the week in centre-distinction to last week, when the possibility of an early peace was made the main basis of arguument by those looking for higher prices. This lightness means, to be taken as an abandonment of the expectation of an early termination of the war, but may be looked upon as a evidence of the importance of those other factors which are contributing to the underlying strength of the markets. Nance will have little to do

The Canadian markets became broader and more active, to a marked degree on the partial relaxation of restrictions and prices showed a decided tendency toward an upward move. Though there are still, of course, many securities which cannot be carried on margin, the banks have shown a certain degree of willingness to lend on the better class of stocks. The Canadian situation is reflecting the general improvement of financial which were encountered and it is safe to assume that activity will increase and prices advance as confidence is restored. The difficulties of financing which were encountered at the outbreak of the war, and the general demoralization which was prevalent at that time tended to make both speculators and investors unduly timid; a feeling which has not yet been entirely eliminated though the general trend is very optimistic. It appears, now, that the public is shaking off its feeling of pessimism and is beginning to realize that the soundness of securities are selling far below their intrinsic worth.

Summing up the whole situation it may be said that the past week has brought forth a greater degree of improvement than any week since the beginning of the war.

Brazilian Traction—Though there was no special news during the week on Brazilian Traction, the shares were in decided demand, and declared to above the minimum price on the headstrait finding that there has been for some months, apparently investors and speculators are paying little heed to the rumors regarding a cut in the dividend, which may or may not have been inspired by self interest on the part of "bear" manipulators. This is a most opportune time to average.

Barcelona Traction—The stock of the Barcelona Traction Company has been strong and active during the week, and it is reported that the company's affairs are rounding into satisfactory shape. It is a notable fact that the beginning of the "bull" market always produces a large demand for low priced shares which can be easily handled, and as Barcelona is in this category, a continuation of the active demands of the week may be expected. Barcelona should be an excellent speculation at around current levels.

Binocular Case To Ottawa Courts

Justice Department Will Take Action in Birket Affair

OTTAWA, April 9.—The Justice Department will take action against the parties which through misrepresentation sold the Government binoculars at an excessive price. Hon. Dr. Reid, acting for the Government, made a motion before the Public Accounts Committee today recommending this procedure. The motion was as follows:

"That in view of the facts and after consideration the purchase of binocular glasses for the Canadian expeditionary forces, and to beg to report to the House the evidence and documents in connection therewith."

From the evidence it appears a number of them were of poor quality, and low range and inferior efficiency, but passed Inspection and were paid for at an excessive price; and this was due to misrepresentation and inadequate inspection. The committee therefore recommends to the House that the said evidence and all documents connected therewith be referred to the Department of Justice, with instructions to enforce restitution, and to take such proceedings as the law will permit.

The case in which action will be taken will be the sale of 166 binoculars by Thomas Birkett, of the Keystone Supply Company of Ottawa, and which were inspected by Col. Hurdman, who has since been suspended.

The motion carried without discussion.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Them Quickly.

Here's a chance! Miss Freckleface, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does you'll get a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is. Even the worst of the ugly freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

HORSE DEALER A HORSE DEALER EVEN IN WAR TIME

Nova Scotia David Harums Not Ashamed of Selling Old Horses to Gov't —Some 20 Years and More—Horse Rejected at Time of South African Among Aged and Infirmed Animals Passed on Government Agent

OTTAWA, April 8.—Evidence of a unique conception of the morality involved in selling horses to the Government for military purposes in the prosecution of the war was forthcoming this afternoon at the meeting of the Public Accounts Committee, when information as to the purchase of mounts in Nova Scotia was secured from a number of farmers and liverymen who had sold them. Two witnesses admitted that they had consulted with H. H. Wickwire, Liberal M.L.A. for King's, in regard to their evidence as to sales to the Government. Then one of them, A. B. Harvey, of the same county, brazenly admitted he had sold twenty-year-old horses to the Government agents.

"Did you not know that men's lives depended on these horses?" he was asked.

"Yes, but I knew they wouldn't die sooner on them long", was the reply, and the committee, which had been moved to mirth over some of the revelations as to the horse deals, was moved to quite another kind of emotion as they contemplated the ethical viewpoint involved in a statement of the kind just made. A Conservative member of the committee asked the witness whether he had not been an opponent of the Government in politics, a question to which Liberal members of the committee, for their own good reasons, immediately and unanimously objected.

The evidence given this afternoon tended to show that horses in the Methodrana class as regards age, horses that were spavined, foundered, ringboned, and had practically "all the blemishes coming to them", as one witness phrased it, had been offered and in some cases sold to the Government agents. The two witnesses, both in connection with Mr. Wickwire, M.L.A., has been established, claimed that Dr. Chipman, the veterinary who had assisted in the buying, had given practically no examination to the horses and that the Government agents were not paying the price for good animals, as in one farmer who had brought a good one along had afterwards "telephoned home to have them send up the old mare." It developed later that he intended to shoot the mare if he did not succeed in selling her.

On the other hand there were a number of witnesses who testified that they had given good value in their sales to the Government and that the purchases had been well looked over from a veterinary point of view.

Mr. Harvey was again on the stand at the opening of the afternoon session.

"You put one over the Government", said Mr. Nickle of Kingston.

"You approached it from the viewpoint of a horse dealer?"

"There is no use in you being sarcastic."

"What was wrong with the first horse you sold to the Government?"

"Could not have her long enough to find out."

Asked as to another horse he had sold the witness stated that all she had was "view and sparkin'."

Mr. Nickle then asked whether another horse he had sold was old.

"Her was not a colt."

"How old was he?"

"Old horses are hard to tell."

"How old was she?"

"Well, he was crawling up."

"He was a very old horse?"

"Yes, I think so."

The witness said that Dr. Chipman, the veterinary who was present at the purchase of the horses, had not examined them closely.

"Did Chipman make you exercise the horse at all; make any effort to find whether it was wind or not?"

"No, he looked in the horse's mouth. I didn't see him do anything else."

"He took the horses by looking in to their mouths, asked no questions and you made no representations?"

"Not a bit."

"Did you give anyone any money to get these horses accepted?"

"No."

"The deal was a straightforward one?"

"It was a David Harum deal", said Mr. F. B. Carvell.

Mr. Nickle—"You made a good sale utterly regardless of the consequences to the men who might use the horses?"

"The men who bought them were supposed to know what they wanted."

"You knew that men's lives depended on these horses?"

"I knew they wouldn't depend on them very long."

Mr. Davidson—"You are not a supporter of the Government?"

Mr. German—"I hope he is not."

Mr. Davidson—"I hope to be in a position to show that gentlemen of his political stripe are the only ones who would engage in this kind of horse to the Government."

The witness then gave evidence as to one of the horses he had sold to the Government. It had been a sorrel, owned originally by a Mr. Newman, who had sold him to Daniels, who sold him to Balcom, who sold him to Mader, who sold him to the witness.

Sold a $10 Horse

"How much did Daniels get for him?" asked Mr. Nickle.

"$10."

"How much did Balcom get for it?"

"$15."

"Mader then traded him with me for a bay horse."

"You got it for $30?"

"Yes."

"How long did you own the horse?"

"About ten minutes", replied the witness amid roars of laughter.

There was further evidence in regard to the horse he had traded for. No one he had sold the Government. At one time in its career he said it had been headed for "W. Drake and two ducks. I only had him a little while. He was sprung in the knees. He was a very fast horse." When explained, while the committee rocked with laughter again.

"Can you give any explanation of how nearly all these horses were put over on the Government?" asked Mr. Nickle.

"No."

Some Good Horses Too.

"The horses you sold are fairly representative of the class Chipman passed?"

"They were good samples."

The witness then told Mr. Davidson that Mr. H. H. Wickwire, Liberal M. L. A., had asked him to make a statement of his horse deals with the Government, and he had done so. He had been paid for his horses in cash and had signed what might have been a receipt; he did not know.

S. S. Selfridge, farmer, told Mr. G. W. Kyle that he had in September last met Dr. Chipman, Mr. G. H. Oakes and W. P. MacKay at Berwick. He had taken a pair of horses with him and sold them to these parties. They were a good pair, six and seven years old and well broken. He had been asking $450 a pair and had received $375. He considered them good value for the money.

"Did you see many horses at Berwick?" asked Mr. Kyte.

"About 200."

"What would you say as to quality?"

"There were good and bad there."

"Any blemishes such as ringbone, spavin, etc?"

"I saw about all the blemishes coming to them there."

"Did you see any old horses?"

"All ages, some 20 years old, some were 25 years and looked all of it."

"Thirty years?"

"Well, I did, but not many horses live that long." (Laughter).

"Did the veterinary make any inspection of the horses?"

THE BLOOD IS THE STREAM OF LIFE

Pure Blood Is Absolutely Necessary To Health

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" PURIFIES

These Wonderful Tablets, Made of Fruit Juices, Are The Best Of All Tonics To Purify And Enrich The Blood

Pure, rich blood can flow only in a clean body. Now, a clean body is one in which the waste matter is regularly and naturally eliminated from the system. The blood cannot be pure when the skin action is weak, when the stomach does not digest the food properly, when the bowels do not move regularly, when the kidneys are strained or overworked.

Pure blood is the result of perfect health and harmony of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their wonderful action on all these organs, keeps the whole system as clean as Nature intended our bodies to be clean.

"Fruit-a-tives" tones up, invigorates, strengthens, purifies, cleans and gives pure, rich, clean blood that is, in truth, the stream of life.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, or 6 for $2.50 trial size, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"Not what I would call inspection. He walked around and looked at them and then passed them."

The witness then told Mr. Kyte that Dr. Chipman had also sold a horse to the Government.

"Was he sound?"

"No."

"What was wrong with him?"

"He had a spavin on one hind leg and was foundered. His wind was broken, I think, and McGarvey told me himself after he was sold he had 'kneed.'"

"Mr. Ingram Bowlby's horse was sold. How old was it?" asked Mr. Kyte.

"She would be seventeen to eighteen last spring and very bad at the knees. He had another one, a very good horse, he didn't sell that one."

"Why?"

"He took him down to sell him first, but then he said that wasn't the kind they were buying, so he telephoned home for them to send the mare down." replied the witness, while the committee shrieked.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

RAW, DAMP WEATHER STARTS THE PAIN BUT THE TROUBLE LIES IN THE BLOOD.

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, from raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting his time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements. Mr. J. Routley, Sydney, Man., says: "I was so badly crippled with rheumatism in my hips and knees that I could hardly go about. I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I took steadily for a couple of months, by which time all tricks of the trouble had disappeared. I can mostly strongly recommend the Pills to all rheumatic sufferers."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Of another horse the witness said he "had known her for a great many years." She was 16 years old, bought for $50 and sold to the Government for $130. That was Abner Woodworth's horse, and he told me if he didn't sell her he was going to kill her."

The witness stated that Mr. G. H. Oakes, organizer of the Conservative party in King's, had helped to buy the horses. He stated that the Government agents would not pay the prices for good horses—that horses were selling for $200 to $225, whereas the highest price the Government was paying was $190.

The witness admitted he had seen no horses over 20 years actually sold.

Rejected For Lost War

Mr. Kyte—"Were any horses turned down during the South African war and this time?

"Yes, Howard Spur's mare was turned down during the South African war. She was sold this time all right."

The witness also admitted he had been in conference with Wickwire, M. L. A., in regard to his evidence.

Mr. John W. Selfridge, of Grand Pre, told of selling a horse at that place to the Government for $170. He had asked $200 originally, and considered the animal good value for the money.

Thomas Hutchinson, of King's County Intervale, stated that W. P. MacKay, Dr. Chipman and T. C. Woodworth had been buying horses to them at an average price of $195, though he had paid as high as $195 in some cases for them. He had offered thirty horses, but only the six were found suitable after examination. He stated that he gave good value for the money, and that he had signed a receipt for the $195 he got that particular price and had received all the money himself, there being nothing crooked about the deal.

G. N. Robinson, of Halifax, liveryman, stated he had offered seven horses to T. C. Woodward, a veterinary from Halifax, and a number from Montreal. They had bought two of them for $170 and $150, and they were the best in the lot.

Henry Clute, of Berwick, stated he had sold a mare to Dr. Chipman and W. P. MacKay for $165, after having paid $150 for it. He said that J. L. Elliott Smith, secretary of the Liberal party, in King's County, had also sold horses to the Government.

Malone Now Sees Plot to Embroil U. S.

N. Y. Port Collector Finds Organization Was Formed to Frame Charges Against British Ships

NEW YORK April 9.—Collector Dudley Field Malone laid bare today the facts in his possession concerning the charges that supplies had been sent to British warships from this city in violation of the neutrality laws. The collector's statement put a different light on the case, for, according to him investigations he made in March convinced him that the charges were part of a plot to involve this country in trouble with Europe.

His secret service men informed him he said, that an organization had been engaging tug captains, engineers and crews, with the object it was said of supplying British fleet with provisions outside Pire Island. None of these men received any money except wages, Thomas Wilson, who received $10 a day for bringing men to the organization.

General tugboat men applied for places and were told that preference would be given to those who had previously taken provisions out to the British ships, and were prepared to swear to a statement to that effect. The contract which was attached to the statement did not contain anything binding upon the part of the organization hiring the men, but simply set forth the fact that the captains were willing to work for $140 a month. One of these agreements read:

"——being duly sworn, deposes and says: I am a licensed pilot and captain while on the boat Peerless. In the month of February, 1915, I delivered supplies to the British cruiser Essex and a converted-merchant ship carrying guns and tying the British flag several miles off Sandy Hook. I am willing to make similar deliveries for $140 a month in advance."

Underneath, the description of the man who signed the agreement. The collector said he thought at first that this was a plan to violate the neutrality laws by some agents acting for the British navy. Then he discovered that the organization was collecting affidavits from tugboat men and having his own agents watched, so he set secret service men at work to find out who was back of the organization.

The trail led through Captain Wilson to his employer, G. B. Means, who had a suite of rooms at the Hotel Manhattan, where he lived with his wife, and he, in turn, it was discovered later, was the representative of a well-known detective agency.

The tugboat men were engaged to start work on April 1, and when the days passed and no money or work was forthcoming they went to see Captain Wilson and the men who kept the office of the organization and asked what was going to be done about it. By this time the organization realized that its game was known to the collector and gave up the room and was seen no more along the water front.

The attention of the federal authorities was then focussed upon G. B. Means, who finally called at the Custom House and admitted to the collector that he was employed by the detective agency and handed over the affidavits he had received from the tugboat men regarding the charges of neutrality at this port. Mr. Means refused to tell who had employed the agency.

The collector said tonight that he was still trying to find out the names of the men who were back of the detective agency, because their plan was evidently to injure him by showing that the laws here were being violated and that the United States Government was favoring the Allies.

When asked if he really believed that British ships were being supplied with stores from this port since September, Mr. Malone said that he had affidavits to that effect, but did not think that anything had been done since he put the dockers on guard at Quarantine and above Hell Gate in the Sound.

The general impression among shipping men today was that German agents had been at work through a detective agency to make trouble between this country and England and that the movement had been financed from St. Louis, as a similar movement in Washington had been.

With regard to the statement of Sir Courtney Bennett, the British consul-general that he had allowed himself to become entangled with German agents who were here to stir up trouble between the United States and Great Britain, the collector said:

"At no time throughout my investigation, covering a period of at least one month, did I ever become entangled or have any relations with German agents or British agents. I know the British consul-general only in his official capacity, and I am not interested in his unofficial criticisms."

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy solid flesh should try eating a little sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure your arms. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again to see a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say, and think, the added flesh the tape measure will tell their own story, and treat any thin man or woman who easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following the simple direction. And best of all the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it forms like fatty sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, red blood corpuscles—nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form with the blood can readily accept. Like the nourishment now passes from your body as waste. Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. J. S. McKeown and other leading druggists in Belleville and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

HAIR TONIC IN MOSES' DAY

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—Professor Camden Coburn, who is lecturing here on the wonders of the ancient world, has seen a papyrus prescription, preserved since the days of Moses, for making the hair grow. A marginal note quotaned this emphatic indorsement of the recipe by the writer: "And it does the work, too."

One physician writing to a brother in the medical profession gives the following advice to the younger members of his profession:

"If you have a nervous patient who says she has a pain in a certain part of her body, place your hand upon the part and tell her she has no pain; whereupon she will have no pain."

According to the laws of Moses the face was named for the surgeons who performed a successful operation, but at the same time the law specified that if the surgeon blundered in the operation he should have his right arm cut off.

Then, as to contractors, they also came under the law, and the building inspection was most rigid. The law provided that if a building was improperly constructed and fell killing any person, the contractor must pay the penalty of his negligence or his cupidity with his life.

Burglaries were reduced to a minimum because the law held that if a burglary occurred in a community the chief officials (the Mayor, and the Council in our case) with them) were held accountable.

All of this Professor Coburn gleaned from letters on papyrus that have been buried in the earth thousands of years.

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

By Elizabeth Thomas

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of cytrace in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Germans to Resort to Poisonous Gas

Kultured Teuton Apparently Discovers Pumping Blazing Oil on Enemy Ineffective

LONDON, April 9—The following account of events of the British front by "official eye-witness," writing under date of April 6th, was issued by the Press Bureau last night:

"Today our guns acted several hits on the home which shelters the German headquarters. Afterward we could see the wounded being carried from the house. On that day a bomb was dropped on Armentieres. During the day the enemy's guns opened fire on a section of our trenches lying to the left of the centre, and Friday our trench mortars were kept busy with good effect in the neighborhood of Prospect Wood.

"We blew up a length of the enemy's trench facing Givinchy on Saturday. The gallery had been driven forward and the charges fired in the early morning. The extent of the loss in live is unknown, but pieces of timber, steel loopholes and plates were hurled about 100 yards into the air and the trench was utterly destroyed, leaving a sniper's post in the field exposed.

"In regard to this operation the Germans bombarded our defences around Cuinchy very heavily, sometimes pouring over one thousand shells of various calibre at a time. There was also considerable sniping on Saturday, and we shelled hostile working parties with success. On Sunday the Germans in the front line tried to lure our men into exposing themselves by beating flags and putting up their heads.

"It is reported here that the Germans in the Argonne have pumped blazing oil and pitch on the French forces on several occasions. According to the statements of some of our prisoners, they are preparing a yet more novel reception for the fresh ranks of our line. They propose to asphyxiate our men, it is said, by means of poisonous gas which is stored under pressure in steel cylinders. Being of a heavy nature, this gas will spread along the ground and cannot be quickly dissipated.

"Near Neuve Chapelle the Germans have posted a notice which says: 'Von Hindenburg is coming. We come to our brother; 500,000 men welcome their brother.'"

LOWER HAY PRICE EXPECTED

Wholesale hay-buyers report that they expect a decline in the price of hay in the near future. At present it is selling at about $16.20 wholesale, but there is absolutely no demand as the price of American hay is around $10 a ton. The Canadian Government is purchasing nearly all the hay needed across the border and until the Canadian price is somewhere as low as American price the Canadian farmer cannot expect to dispose of any of this commodity to the Government.

Esser Suspected Of Being a German Spy

Man Who Served Sentence For Stealing Plans of Bliss-Levitt Torpedo

WAS 30 FT. UNDERGROUND

Map of Fortifications Along Colonge River Discovered by Detectives Who Searched His Home

NEW YORK April 9.—After working with frantic haste all night, the gang of men employed in the Building Department succeeded, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, in locating the body of William Esser, who was buried 30 feet underground by the caving in of the sides of an old well at the rear of his home in Flatbush on Wednesday evening. He died from suffocation.

After finding the body, an investigation by the police disclosed the fact that Esser was the same man who was convicted in 1909 and sentenced to serve six months on Blackwell's Island for stealing the plans and parts of the Bliss-Levitt torpedo from the E. W. Bliss Company, manufacturers of projectiles. Esser was employed by the firm as a mechanical draughtsman in the plans department and his arrest followed the finding of parts of a torpedo buried in a barn at the rear of his home.

The developments in the case caused a country-wide suspicion, in which there were repeated suggestions that Germany or agents of its Government were concerned in the theft of the torpedo plans. It was openly charged that Esser was a spy employed by the German Government. In the indictment against Esser was the charge that he intended to sell the plans of the Bliss-Leavitt torpedo to the German Government.

At the trial of Esser, John Hurtell, proprietor of a tin shop, testified that Esser told him that he had an offer of employment from the German Government at a salary of $10,000 per year.

As evidence against Esser, a letter was produced which was found in his room at the time of his arrest. It was from the Marine Department of the German Government, and was dated January 17, 1905. Esser was notified in the letter that the department, under the conditions named, could not accept the proposition regarding the torpedo. He was finally convicted of grand larceny in the second degree and served his term.

Esser was considered "A Man of Mystery," by his neighbors. They declared that he was friendly with was Gustave Messeberg, a florist, who said to-day that he often heard Esser referred to by neighbors as "German spy", but said that he did not believe that there was any ground for the accusation. He declared that Esser was not a spy, but for the reason because he did something that was not right and feared the consequences.

When detectives went to Esser's home to-day, Captain Boettler, of the Flatbush precinct, found hidden in a drawer of a dresser, a pen and ink map of the city of Cologne, Germany. The map contained cryptic marks which showed the fortifications along the river at Cologne and for some distance on either side of the city. Where he got the drawings of the German city or what he intended to do with them is not known.

Esser's widow was prostrated after the discovery of the body. She had a marriage certificate which showed that she was married to Esser in Chicago a year and a half ago. She said she did not know whether or not he had secured a divorce from his first wife.

Avoid Detroit When in Uniform

Orders Prohibiting Soldiers in Khaki Crossing to States

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—The Canadian Militia Department has put the ban on Canadian soldiers in uniform entering the United States. Orders to this effect were forwarded from militia headquarters and received today in Windsor. The orders go into effect immediately it is said.

According to military authorities in Windsor, the new ruling is the result of protests by many Detroiters last week, when hundreds of soldiers in uniform crossed the river and in many instances remained in Detroit for three days.

It was charged that a violation of neutrality had been committed, as no soldier in uniform had the right to enter a neutral country. Lieut.-Col. J. S. Wigle, who was in the city agreed that the soldiers were allowing no favors against his will, though he declared he had no authority to issue orders to the contrary.

In case of extreme necessity the proper authorities may issue a special permit to uniformed soldiers who wish to cross the border.

To see that the order is carried out in detail, sentries will be placed at the Windsor and Walkerville ferry landings. It is expected at least 12 more guards will be recruited to fill the command.

A cable received dated April 8, says Lieut. Griffin is "struck off the sick list."

CHILD LOST AND FOUND
The police yesterday afternoon were informed that a child had strayed away from its home on Alexander street. After some hunting around the little one was found on Dundas street, having wandered some distance from the parent's home.

REMAINS INTERRED
Yesterday afternoon the remains of Elma May Copp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Copp, residing on Mill street, took place. Rev. R. C. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church, conducted the burial services. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery.

LICENSE PROHIBITED
Captain Alf. Hunter, fishery inspector of Belleville, was investigated a complaint a few days ago of a license being granted for the visiting of billboards in Stone Creek, found the complaint established and has ordered that no more license should be issued.—Brockville Times.

BRIDGE STREET WINS AT BASKETBALL
Bridge Street practically clinched the Intermediate Championship of the Belleville Basketball League, last night, when they defeated West Belleville. It was a splendid exhibition of this popular game. Actual weight with the good playing of French and Barlow, was too much for the light West Side team, who with a team of their weight could win hands down. Wheeler played a splendid game and did his check to charge at all times. Wells had to be warned by the referee for "rough stuff," but it was no doubt unintentional on the part of the player. Mershaw was the star goal-getter for the Bridge street team, while Wheeler played a splendid game on the defence. Ross at centre, is the smallest man against him on the floor, and only supprective words are due him. Herity and Dooeberry were the mainstay of the strength to their team and played an absolute faultless game. "Twigg" Woodley may lack several inches of Ross, but he makes up for this deficiency in his knowledge of the game and ability to play it. Russell Woolley does not shine out brilliantly at any stage of a game, but he is a good defence player and also a good foul shot.

There is some doubt as to whether or not Bridge Street did the proper thing when they played Barlow on their team, as he is not a member of regular member and attendant at another Sunday School League. This seems to be the only stage of a purpose of the league. The matter should have at least, been brought to the attention of the executive in the case of Ross and Hitchon. This is the most regrettable incident in the whole league. League.

Bridge Street—(2)—French centre; Barlow, Wells, forwards; McCullough and Wheeler, defence.

West Belleville—(1)—Ross, centre; "Twigg" Woodley, Dooeberry, forwards; Russell Wodley and Herity, defence.

In the only Junior game, St. Michaels walked away from the West Belleville team by a score of 29 to 5. St. Michaels have shown the most remarkable improvement of any team in the league, and have a team of fine clean players. Meagher starred for winning team, and scored at will. Sandy Wiles and Harold McNeil assisted to great advantage in the great combination play, while Hurley and Young, who make a splendid pair of the game, played for all they were worth. Bateman and Fred Woodley were the whole team for the losers, but had little assistance from the other members of the team.

Canadian Northern Railway System
WAR TAX ON ALL RAILWAYS AND STEAMSHIP TICKETS BECOMES EFFECTIVE APRIL 15TH.
The special War Revenue Act 1915, more commonly known as the War Tax, becomes effective April 15th.
Important features in connection with its application on railway and steamship tickets are:
The Act provides that the tax must be paid by the purchaser of the ticket, and that anyone refusing or neglecting to pay it is subject to a fine of not exceeding $50.00.
The amount is 5 cents on every parlor car seat, and 10 cents on every sleeping car berth.
On railway and local steamship tickets it is 5 cents for each $5.00 or fraction thereof, according to the value of the ticket, and there is no charge on a ticket costing $1.00 or less. That on ocean steamship tickets varies according to the value: $10.00 and under, no tax; $10.01 to $40.00, $1.00; $40.01 to $65.00, $3.00; $65.01 and up $5.00.
The Government directs that under no circumstances may the tax be refunded, and further instructs that it applies on all tickets reading between or from points in Canada, whether such tickets are sold in Canada or in a foreign country.
In accordance with the Act, Railway and Steamship Companies will act as collection agencies for the Government and every ticket seller is required to collect the tax at the time of issuing the ticket.
Further provision is made that war stamps will not be used in connection with railway and steamship tickets. The Transportation Companies will collect the tax and will account for same to the Government in the manner prescribed in the Act, or as directed by the Minister of Finance.

BANISH BILE!
A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in a nasty attack of biliousness, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.
Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and intestines, the contraction of its muscles from its pour out its bile, when it is immediately conducted downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog the system and cause the headache.
Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestines will be restored and as little can accumulate in the system.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 640 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

W. W. Cory is entitled to receive $10 per acre for coal lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, but not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. There are, however, certain conditions under which a further area may be leased. Rental not less than $1 per acre shall be collected and royalty at the rate of 10 cents per ton.

W. W. CORY, C.M.G.
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

MONOTONY REIGNS IN PARIS' SUBURBS

Gay Little Villas Closed up in Many Cases—Men at Front, Women at Work Hard.

Life in the suburbs of Paris in wartime is described by a correspondent of the London Times who usually writes on the fashions, but in this case finds another topic of timely interest.

The Paris suburbs are very melancholy just now, she says. All the young men have gone away and all gaiety is in abeyance. Many of the fantastic villas are closed. From each house, one man has gone and from many several, for large families are not unusual in the suburbs. The woman and children, left alone, have in some cases found life unendurable, and have put away their household goods, closed their shutters, and gone back to the mother's, or the father's home in the provinces.

The closed houses only accentuate the loneliness of those which remain open, and nowhere is there any air of normal life. The days pass in quiet monotony; all work and no play is the rule; and it is not unusual for the mistress of the house to find herself charged, not merely with the care of the family, but also with the responsibility of her husband's business. This, with the supervision of her children's education, is no mean task, and with the added anxiety for the men in danger or the cruel certainty that death has passed, the already serious middle-class Frenchwoman has become yet more serious.

In some of the suburbs the question of the household marketing has become quite a weighty one, for not only are things expensive, but they are more difficult to get than in the centre of the city. The butchers have been municipalised, and the cook and housewives have to get the day's supplies before mid-day from the one and only authorized butcher. They are finding the prices very much higher.

The middle classes in the suburbs suffer much from the increased cost of living and the stagnation in business. Many of them have but few savings and some have none. Where the men of the family have gone and business has stopped, misery is left behind, and it is not easy for people of this class to join the working woman and apply for State grants and soup at the Mairie.

Even when there is no war, there is not much haphazard visiting in the Paris suburbs, for do class in France is less given to chance hospitality than the middle classes which inhabit these fantastic little villas. Neighbors have no claims on each other, and only kinship or very old friendship opens the front door. Each family, with its own particular little circle of friends, has no social ambitions beyond that to which it was born. The older women have renounced their lounging expeditious, their theatre parties followed by a little supper at a restaurant, the girls have given up their cinemas, their slinging lessons and their finery, and all are knitting or crocheting as fast as they can. Even the children try to do something for the soldiers, and many of them have sent toys to the refugee children. Red Cross nurses come from many of these quaintly constructed houses, and boy scouts over-run them in the holidays.

The Collision Mat

The collision mat, which is carried by all warships, is a very valuable part of the vessel's equipment and often prevents a ship sinking when she has been badly hit by the enemy.

The mat varies in size from 10 to 16 feet square and is made of sailcloth into which has been interwoven a number of "thrums," or pieces of rope yarn, closely knit together. In case of the vessel being damaged by shells or collision the mat is lowered and held over the hole by the ropes which are attached to it. The pressure of the water forces the mat closely over the gap and thus temporarily stops the leak till it can be closed from within.

When Poland Drank Hard

Poland was a great country for hard drinking in the olden days. Its last King, Stanislaus II., was entirely warped by the Grand Hetman Branicki that he never ceased to drink. In some popular unless he got drunk at least twice a week. Pan Komarczewski, who could empty a bucketful of champagne at a draught without noticing the slightest influence, once in company with Pan Sosiejkowski, High Chamberlain of Volhynia, disposed of a whole butt of old Hungarian wine at a single sitting. One held his beaker under the bung hole until it was filled and then drank while the other filled his beaker, and so, turn and turn about, they achieved the feat.

Tommy's Good Heart

It is quite a common sight to see in hospitals little soldier children sitting beside the mother, munching a large slice of bread-and-jam, while the mother carries the bit of bully beef given to her by Tommy Atkins, said a letter written by Corporal Gilbert, R.A.M.C., to his mother. I have known numbers of such—myself included—who have gone without food for a day, or days, on purpose to cheer some homeless refugee. The people every where adore the British Tommy. Corporal Gilbert was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal by King George personally.

London's Alien Enemies

When the war broke out, and the registration of aliens was completed, there were no fewer than 4,966 alien enemies employed in the hotels of London.

The entire white population of the British Empire is less than the population of the German Empire, and rather larger than that of Japan.

Turning to look, Jack Johnson was not turned to a pillar of salt, but he got something quite as effective.

THE PARTY DRESS

Some Hints For the Mother Who Has a Daughter of School Age

It should be white and simple and fine—the young girl's party dress. Youth in itself is so charming, so winsome that it needs no gaudy colors, no "latest fashion" tricks to adorn. The girl adorns the gown, the gown should not presume to adorn her.

So the gown she will wear to part's or to young people's dances should be simple. It should fall in folds as straight as the mode will permit, have short or elbow sleeves and either square or round neck.

The end of the neck should not be decolette or "low neck," but it should leave the throat bare. A fussy or overtrimmed party dress robs the young girl of her chief charm—that of youthful freshness.

But for all its simplicity, the party frock should be carefully chosen, and as carefully made. Sheer muslin and lawns are prettiest for it. Persian lawn being particularly good because it launders so well. Swiss muslin and organdies are very pretty.

In shopping for sheer materials, beware of the knotted and uneven cotton threads. The inferior threads always appear in the woof, or cross threads, if at all, when the cross threads are as fine and well twisted and even as the warp, the material will be firmer and keep its lines unimpaired.

Barbed Wire Is Deadly

In war barbed wire is used in various ways, but its main object is machine-stopping. It is interlaced with ground pegs in front of trenches for the purpose of tripping charging troops; it is draped across hedges and main roads to prevent the passage of cavalry; and it is used for fencing in camps to guard against rushing tactics on the part of the enemy. Barbed wire concealed is undergrowth is particularly deadly where cavalry is concerned, for it at once grips the horses' hoofs, causing them to fall on the spike-strewn ground.

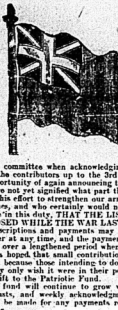
LET THERE BE HARMONY IN THINGS ESSENTIAL—LIBERTY IN THINGS NOT ESSENTIAL—CHARITY IN ALL.

Vol. 48 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1915. No. 279

Belleville Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Association



The committee when acknowledging the detailed list of the contributors up to the 3rd of April, take this opportunity of again announcing to those citizens who have not yet signified what part they intend taking in this effort to strengthen our army and protect our homes, and who certainly would not like to have no share in this duty, THAT THE LIST WILL NOT BE CLOSED WHILE THE WAR LASTS.

Subscriptions and payments may be sent to the Treasurer at any time, and the payments may be distributed over a lengthened period when so desired.

It is hoped that small contributions will not be withheld because those intending to donate them feel that they only wish it were in their power to send a larger gift to the Patriotic Fund.

The fund will continue to grow while the need for it lasts, and weekly acknowledgements will continue to be made for any payments received by the Treasurer.

The united results of the earlier efforts to raise money for this purpose, together with the recent campaign, amounted on the third of April to the following totals:—

Subscribed	$40,182.50
Paid in to date	20,908.49

There are several donations which have not yet been realized on, viz.:—a Holstein calf, a green parrot, with cage, trez and stand, the grinding of 5,000 bushels of grain; $25 worth of machine knitting; the use of Mr. T. Ridley's dancing academy for a "Patriotic Dance," and the use of Pipe-Major Albert Johnstone's Hall for a similar purpose.

The actual cost to the fund of the recent campaign, through which so large a part of the above sum has been subscribed, was very moderate, thanks to so many donations, including free headquarters, heat, and telephone, free light, fixtures and furniture, free automobiles, services, typewriting, etc., and the very generous terms under which the local papers gave such liberal services and space, and then handed in subscriptions for practically their whole accounts, though their outlay for wages, material, etc., must have been very large.

A Page Of Interest to Women

Thoughtful mothers do not hesitate to let the little ones make a full meal of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, because every one knows that corn contains great food value.

RENOVATING CARPETS

Floor Coverings Brightened Up by Dyeing or Washing Them

Perhaps you were planning to buy new rugs or to re-carpet the floors—and perhaps, you have changed your mind about it and decided that the old rugs and carpets will do until the cost of living isn't quite so high.

But this won't be so bad after all if you invest in a little dye, which fortunately is not expensive and brighten up the faded floor coverings. To do this successfully you must first scrub the rug and then rinse it. Mix the dye and keep it well stirred in the vessel, so that the color will be even. While the rug is still wet, apply the dye with a clean whitewash brush. It colors evenly this way. If the rug is dyed on the floor, place a great many newspapers under it to absorb the moisture. It should be thrown double over a line to dry, or else allowed to dry on the floor. It will shrink slightly.

For a cotton rug which turns a dirty white use such colors as dark greens, mahogany, red and delft blue. Jute rugs may be dyed in a similar manner, but the dye in this case should be applied to the dry rug.

If a carpet is almost all wool, the color may be brightened or wholly restored if washed with a pail of water containing three gills of ox gall. If necessary to use fresh ox gall, procure it at the butchers, cut it into small pieces, cover with warm water and allow it to soak for several hours. Dilute the liquid and wipe the carpet off with it. It makes a lather and should be rinsed off with clear water.

TWO KINDS OF TYPHOID

Both Are Dangerous Although the Effect is Different

People differ in the way they have diseases as much as in the way they do things. For instance, some people have typhoid fever and go to bed with it. Others have typhoid fever and walk around with it. We say they have walking typhoid.

The strange part about it is that the typhoid bacillus in these two classes of individuals suffering with the disease, may be the same in virulence, just as poisonous, just as active in growth, just as prompt in getting into the blood. It is the effect is different.

Perhaps it may be a surprise to some people to know that it is just as dangerous to have a case of walking typhoid around the milk house as it would be if the patient were serious ill.

Possibly some people will wonder how they are to tell when a person really has typhoid if he can walk around and still have a serious case. That's where the skill of diagnosis comes in. Most cities have laboratories now where tests can be made free of charge.

These include the blood tests and especially the Widal tests and the bacteriological blood examination. The ordinary test only requires a drop of dried blood in a clean piece of glass.

A few pieces of gum camphor kept in the boxes in which silver is packed in wrappings will prevent its turning black.

FOR YOUR RECIPE BOOK

Baked Onions

Select onions even in size. Cover with salted water and simmer 30 minutes without removing outside skin. When ready to bake carefully remove the thin skin, place onions close together in baking dish. Add 2 tablespoons of butter for 16 onions—and bake until tender. Baste often with melted butter. Onions must be thoroughly done, but should not lose their shape. Serve with fried rice ball.

Pound Cake

Cream 1 pound of butter with 1 pound of sugar, 1 pound of eggs. Beat yolks of eggs until lemon color, add to butter and sugar and beat thoroughly. Add ½ teaspoon of grated nutmeg and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice. Have whites of eggs beaten to stiff dry froth. Weigh 1 pound of flour. Add to butter and sugar a little at a time alternating with the beaten white of the eggs, beating lightly.

The batter should be very stiff. Bake in steady oven an hour.

Peanut Butter

Roast two pounds of raw peanuts until the meats are delicate brown. Remove shell and all skin and grind in food grinder, using finest knife. Put through six or eight times, or until oily enough to spread. About the fourth time add salt to taste. Pack tightly in closed jars.

Steamed Boston Brown Bread

Mix thoroughly 1 cup of graham flour, wheat flour, and corn meal and stir in 1 even teaspoon of salt. Pour over the mixed flour a cup of boiling water. Heat 1 cup of milk, add 1 cup of molasses just slightly warm. Add to this 1 even teaspoon of soda. Pour this onto flour and water. Beat hard and long. Turn into well greased mold, with perfectly fitting top. Set mold in kettle of boiling water. Cover kettle.

Dainty Frock With Sash

An attractive feature of this frock is the sash caught up to the corsage in front, its ends dropping gracefully almost halfway to the knee.

The dress here shown is of white tulle, daintily trimmed with pink roses. The sash is of chiffon, and the ends are prettily embroidered to match the pink rose trimmings of the dress.

Steam Cleans Lamp Chimneys

To clean lamp chimneys hold them over a jug of boiling water until well steamed, then polish with a dry duster. It is far less trouble than washing, and the glasses very rarely break.

Quaint Fashion Revived

With its square bodice and skirt falling in stiff straight folds this evening gown is a reminder of the quaint fashions of 1850. The gown, which is of white taffeta brocaded with silver, and a stiff band of white taffeta makes a prim, old-fashioned trimming for the bodice.

UTILIZE VEGETABLES

Many Have High Food Value as Meats and Easily Cooked

All vegetables have possibilities, and can be made most savory by the woman who really knows how to cook.

Peas, beans, and lentils are all equal to meat in nutrition, and can be made into many appetizing dishes—purees, stews, soups, etc. And in planning your menu don't forget rice, especially the natural brown rice, which contains more nutriment than the polished rice. In a curry with salmon or shrimp, or as a border with warmed-over meat and gravy, or as a vegetable with butter sauce, rice is a very valuable article of food.

Soups should be made from the liquor of every vegetable cooked, with a little milk, oleomargarine or butter added. The water from the vegetables, which most housewives pour down the drain, contains the mineral salts or the vital element of the vegetable, and should never be wasted. Rice water also, which is mostly discarded, forms a valuable base for soup.

Swiss Marriage Customs

In remote Alpine hamlets and villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of proposing marriage by the language of flowers. If a maid accepts a bouquet of edelweiss from a man she at the same time accepts him as her fiancé, the idea being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves. Another method which exists in the Canton of Glarus is for the young man to place a flowerpot containing a single rose and a note on the window sill of the girl's room when she is absent from home and wait—perhaps days—for a reply. If the maid takes the rose the young man boldly enters the house to arrange matters with the parents, but if the rose is allowed to fade away the proposal is rejected without a single word having been exchanged between the couple.

To Relieve Hiccoughs

To stop hiccough, give the patient a teaspoonful of granulated sugar and vinegar. If this does not afford instant relief, repeat the dose.

Stand 60 Years of Experience and Progress

THIRTEEN years before Confederation John Redpath turned out "Ye Olde Sugar Loafe"—the first sugar refined in Canada.

In 1880, thirty-five years ago, the Redpath Refinery brought out Canada's first Granulated Sugar, known ever since as the best.

Again in 1913, the Redpath Refinery introduced the third great improvement in Canada's sugar supply—the Redpath 2 and 5-lb. Cartons.

DURING all these years of leadership, the Redpath aim has been QUALITY—the quality on which the national preference for Redpath Sugar now rests so solidly.

Such quality is the result, not of modern machinery alone, but of experience, modern methods, and a fixed determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name Redpath—to maintain in every pound of our product the reputation of "Canada's Standard Sugar". 120

Get Redpath Sugar in Original Packages Then You Are Sure of Genuine Redpath.

2-lb. and 5-lb. Cartons and 10, 20, 50 and 100-lb. Cloth Bags.

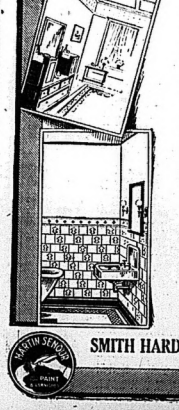
Still, that vernal urge to the soil abides in the passionate soul of the man who has ever spaded up a field to the moisture.

Troops have been stationed on all roads leading to the Chinese capital. Evidently they still object to letting the Japs Pekin.

Hudson Maxim has a new invention to reveal submarines. Soon he'll be putting electric lights in Davy Jones' locker.



Handy Helps for Spic and Span Homes

Of course, you are going to "Paint Up" this spring. There's the bedroom, parlor or dining room wall to be re-finished.

There are Floors to be painted, stained, varnished or waxed. There's the Oil Cloth or Linoleum to be made Spic and Span.

There's the Furniture and Woodwork to be brightened.

Here are six "SPIC AND SPAN" FINISHES that we can freely recommend for this work:

"NEU-TONE" FlatTints for the walls
"WOOD LAC" Varnish Stains
"MARBLE-ITE" Floor Varnish
"LIQUID WAX", for hardwood floors
"SENOUR'S FLOOR PAINT", the old reliable
"VARNOLEUM", to beautify and preserve Oil Cloth and Linoleum.

We know that these Finishes are the best of their kind. They are "Made in Canada"—and we guarantee that you will be perfectly satisfied with the results you get when you use any, or all, of them.

You'll soon be putting up Pickles and Preserves. You'll need labels for the jars. Come in and get a set of Fruit Jar Labels—printed and gummed. We give them free to our friends. 71

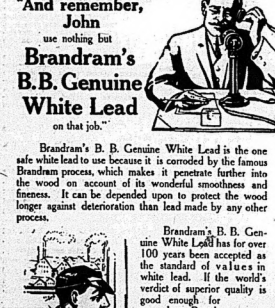
Brandram's B. B. Genuine White Lead is the one safe white lead to use because it is corroded by the famous Brandram process, which makes it penetrate further into the wood on account of its wonderful smoothness and fineness. It can be depended upon to protect the wood longer against deterioration than lead made by any other process.



Brandram's B. B. Genuine White Lead has for over 100 years been accepted as the standard of value in white lead. If the world's verdict of superior quality is good enough for you, buy Brandram's.

THREE GERMAN KINGS

Rulers Over Millions Are Subordinate to the Kaiser

Wilhelm II., King of Prussia, in his position as German Emperor, so overshadows the other kings of Germany that we almost lose sight of their existence. The king we hear of is the King of Prussia, who also bears the title of Deutscher Kaiser and in whom is vested the supreme direction of the military and political affairs of the empire.

It was the successes of the German armies in 1870 that removed every obstacle to the carrying into effect that union of Germany which had been the dream of enthusiasts for years, not the least among these enthusiasts being Bismarck. The fact that the victories gained had been the direct result of German unity of action under the guidance of Prussia, forced itself on the mind of every thinking man in Germany.

Various small conventions demanded by several states to save their dignity were granted, but the principal articles—those especially which demanded one diplomatic representation, one assembly for all the states of the union, and one supreme command of the army—were insisted upon by Prussia. Its chief was to be the King of Prussia, with the title of German Emperor. Thus—particularly since the beginning of the great war—we have heard much of the king who reigns over Prussia with its area of 134,616 square miles and its population of 40,165,219. But there are still other kings in Germany—three of them—their titles unchanged though their power may be less great than in the old days.

Ludwig III., prince over the German kingdom of Bavaria with its 29,282 square miles and 6,887,291 population. Ludwig III., now seventy years of age, became regent in succession to his father, Prince Luitpold, who died December 12, 1912, and he was proclaimed king on Nov. 6, 1913, in succession to his cousin, King Otto, who was declared incapable of ruling owing to mental infirmity. The king's son, Prince Rupprecht, is now commanding a German army.

Over the kingdom of Wurttemberg with its 7,534 square miles and 2,437,574 population reigns William II., who is now in his sixty-seventh year. He is the son of the late Prince Friedrich of Wurttemberg and ascended to the throne on the death of Karl I., Oct. 6, 1891. The king is now with his troops in the field.

Frederick Augustus III. reigns over the kingdom of Saxony with its 5,789 square miles and 4,806,661 population. He is fifty years of age and is the son of the late King George and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, Oct. 15, 1904. He was married in 1891 to Princess Luise of Tuscany, but the marriage was dissolved in 1903. The king occasionally visited his troops in the trenches in Russia.

SOLDIERS' NIGHTMARES

Dreams of, Live Shells and Night Alarms Disturb Fighters' Rest

The terrific strain imposed on the nerves of fighting men, which nowadays is rendered greater than the deafening explosions of high-powered shells, causes soldiers, and especially those wounded, to suffer from distressing nightmares. An ambulance worker who has studied the subject of soldiers' nerves states that a common form of nightmare is for a soldier to dream that he is wandering through endless trenches as complicated as an artificial maze, or that he is picking his way through forests whence all but him had fled. At night the slightest noise during sleep calls up visions of exploding shells or the tramp of armed men to the unnerved soldier, and he will cry out in terror, although when actually in the firing line he displays great courage. Dreams of night alarms trouble his sleep, and in connection with the soldier's nerve-racking visions of being unable to find his clothes or weapons when the imaginary call to arms flits across his troubled brain.

Another common night terror to the soldier is to dream that a live shell is lying in his bed and about to burst, and with such nightmares the victim imagines himself powerless to move his limbs in getting rid of the projectile.

One of the most terrible nightmares which afflicts the nerve-shattered soldier is that in which he imagines that he is unable to withdraw his bayonet from an enemy's body, although he desires to use it to keep off menacing forms all around him.

Won Coveted French Honor

Private A. V. Sworn, R.A.M.C., was only seventeen years old when he won the Legion of Honor, and is the youngest soldier on whom the decoration has been bestowed. It was awarded to him for saving a French officer under fire.

Making Over a Dress

Before the old dress is cut into it should always be very carefully brushed and sponged or cleaned before you start to make it over. Cleaning will freshen it so that you will feel as if you had a new dress and not a made-over one. Dying is worth considering if the old color is out of style. Hooks and eyes, patent fasteners and buttons should be gone over carefully, frayed skirt braids should be replaced, and worn laces, chemisettes, etc., discarded. You may find that you need a fresh waistlining if the old one is badly worn, too tight at the waist, etc.

FIGHTING IN THE DARK

Tremendous Strain Upon Men In Engines Room of Warships

Deprived of the steadying satisfaction of at least seeing the enemy, the men in the warships are necessarily conscious of the struggle which may be going on without.

Blinded, they are not deaf. The open artillery fire full well the significance of the signals which the bells announce and the dial records, and this knowledge makes the greater the strain of fighting "in the dark." The recorded experiences of an artificer in a vessel which has seen much action prove how accurately the engineer may follow the course of a struggle.

"As you know," said the engineer, "we encountered a submarine attack. We had a great time, and it fairly took it out of us. You want a special breed of men for a job of that kind, for the strain is something to remember. We came out of it all right, however, and I am trying not to be too proud of being one of the boys.

"We had a good notion of how the racket was going, albeit left as we were in our little world. First it was 'Full ahead,' and we opened her out and let her go, perhaps her best. We don't know that staff, and nobody did the other side. (Those of them who were left to make calculations might be wrong when their research were doing—and they nearly 'are' themselves trying to get away—might arrive at within a few knots of our speed, but they would still be a long off.) reckon we had hit a bit up our sleeve when the first gun went, for after which we got a hint not to overpress her.

"That meant that we were comfortably within range with our left, so to speak, and could keep shelling her as long as we chose, and hit. And hitting we seemed to be and no error. I could feel quickly quiver a bit as the big guns fired, but the drone of my turbine and the gauges on the dial were my chief attention. At least, they should have been, but I confess, however, that from first to last I was on the 'gutter for more signals, and it was a good deal that we had the gauges, and the dial, and the signals upon which we might attempt to concentrate, for the strain was absolutely tremendous. It was the absolute horror of something coming to disable our engines. My ears were a-cock all the time for the report of a steam 'main' bit and carried away, for the shot that might wreck a bolt or, for the rattle of sinering gear gone."

UNLOOKED FOR PRAISE

Bravery of Britons Admitted by a Famous German Editor

A Russian colonel, who was serious ly wounded in the legs at Warsaw, ordered his men to place him on a stretcher from which he led his troops for the attack of an important position. The enemy were dislodged but the brave colonel died at the moment of triumph.

The Die Zukunft, a political review edited and published in Berlin, by Herr Maximilian Harden, printed the following:

"The British army has distinguished itself by the bravery of its troops. Many of the predictions of the facile lans against mercenaries. In the British isles there are plenty of professions bringing in good money. If a man voluntarily joins the army instead of becoming a clerk, agent, games-professional, or jobber, then he has done so because he likes it. It is pleasure in his work that takes a man's achievements above the average. On German soil England is still poorly hated, but the German warrior spirit, just in its appreciation, has over and over again praised the courage, determination, and shooting skill of the English.

"The beggars are artists. Show them two fingers above the edge of the trench, and they hit the mark. Dumdum bullets? Certainly. Still, such things as bombsplitters, arrows from the earth, bows, 'Minenwerfer' hardly appertain to the armory of chivalrous knights. Tommy has amazed us. We thought that something ridiculous was on its way to us from the other side of the water. Now every one takes him seriously. Twice, three times astonished, in faith on. And when in a hand-to-hand struggle he has reached the end of his tether, he tears open his tunic and with bared breast flings himself on the glittering steel. Such fighting is worth the doing."

WEALTH FROM THE WAR

A Bright Idea Has Brought Gold to Many a Merchant

Many new fields of enterprise were opened without any warning when the war broke out, and many persons have been enabled to seize a chance and make a comfortable fortune.

There is a prominent hardware merchant in Birmingham who has thrown to be successful in the manufacture of gas burners. A man of less intuitive ability would have allowed this accustomed groove. But at the first hint of what was happening he bought and erected metal was obtainable, and began to produce every ally, and sympathetic smaller buttons for his children's suits, have been produced in large quantities, and scattered far and wide at a gratifying profit.

Makers of patriotic postcards have reaped a rich harvest, all the more satisfactory because hitherto it was the practice of Britons to buy patriotic cards in Germany to a large extent. Anyone who has chanced upon a trifle that looks useful for a soldier has not gone without reward.

A simple article, modest in itself is the thing for an enterprising person with a short intelligence to look for A boot polish, a lighter, a pistol brooch for someone left at home, these are the lines that make a man fortune in two of war, says the London Daily Mail. Their more are ready with these hits and turning the penny here into gold.

In other spheres the war has been made a source of revenue. The war correspondent has become a regular serve the King, and the war photographer has become many of the warriors in all the radiance of a new smile.

"THE FAMILY CANDY"

FIRE'S GOOD WORK

How a Great Forest Conflagration Proved a Blessing in Disguise.

BY JAMES HARRISON.

Elmer held Watson guiltless of his innocent-but-offence against him because of Watson's wife.

In the southwest, where men are quick to avenge insult, Watson dwelled unashamed, mouthing imprecations against Elmer, holding him up to the scorn of the township. No one was braver than Watson when chatting with his cronies in front of the Westwood hotel and boasting what he would do when he next met Elmer face to face. But Elmer only laughed at Watson's threats.

The men were neighbors. Elmer owned five hundred acres and herded his cattle upon the government ranges. Watson was a sheep man, and that would have been enough to cause a quarrel, had not the long feud been settled by a line drawn clear across the state, separating the spheres of the two antagonists. Elmer, on his arrival at Westwood, had gone to call upon his neighbor to talk over their boundaries. But he found Watson in a drink stupor and a sadeyed girl of twenty-two cooking upon the cheap oil stove in the wretched cabin.

"Mrs. Watson?" asked Elmer, doffing his hat. "I am Elmer; I have taken the neighboring range. I came to talk over matters." Then he paused in embarrassment and saw the wounded pride on her face.

"Mr. Watson shall see you tomorrow," said the girl quietly, and Elmer, blushing, wondering and amazed that such a girl should be married to such a man.

He halted at the back of the cabin to fix his boot. Watson, thinking that he had gone up on the trench.

"You—" he yelled, uttering a vile oath, "you've trapped you at last. You thought I was sleeping, didn't you, and that you could bring that man into my home! I know that you've been meeting him while I was tending sheep on the range. I'll—I'll—"

He staggered from the cabin toward the girl. Elmer heard the cheap tin ware clatter upon the stove, and strode back into the cabin. Watson was standing over his wife in an attitude of impending assault. Elmer took him by the shoulders and ran him out of the room.

"I don't believe in interfering between a man and his wife—ordinarily," he said. "But if you ever lay a finger upon this lady I'll shake your teeth down your rum-soaked throat, you hound. Do you hear?"

Watson fell back with a groan and anger, realizing his disgrace and the sudden realization of the folly of his quixotic action. It would go hard with him now. He dared not look at her as he passed out of the door.

The next time he met her was when his cattle had strayed near Watson's boundary. She was seated upon the ground in the lush grasses, almost hidden by them. Elmer's keen ears had heard her sobs before he saw her.

He dismounted from his horse and went toward her awkwardly, and stood looking down at her. She sprang to her feet and faced him; her face was scarlet and the tears were still on her cheeks.

Elmer stretched out his hands and grasped hers closely. "Mrs. Watson—" he began, but she said. "It just makes my blood boil. If ever I can help you—"

"No, you cannot help me," she said, turning her face away.

"But you are only a girl," he exclaimed. "You cannot have been married long. You have all your life before you; you cannot endure to be locked in this hideous way for years. You—"

"You must not say any more," Mr. Elmer, she answered coldly. "My troubles are of my own creating. I must bear them alone. I—"

She paused and her face blanched. She looked round and Elmer's eyes followed hers. Ten yards distant Watson was lying in the grass, regarding them, a sneer on his face. Elmer hesitated a moment, and then strode away.

He learned something of her story a few days later from some of the townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had ruined himself in chance at his impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamefully abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the men met Watson would quail, or incline down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer was deliberating. If he interfered again he would take some irrevocable step. But he knew that Watson's instructions were true; he loved Emmeline Watson, and in the few short meetings which were all that he had discovered in her own heart an extraordinary inclination toward him. But he knew, also, that so long as Watson lived she would be true to him.

He had controlled his rising passion though it went hard with him. At night, lying in his lonely cabin, the thought of Emmeline's beautiful face and clear eyes, the knowledge of her truth and honor maddened him She was the one woman for him; so long as he lived. But he knew

NINETY-MILE FRONT ON HUNGARIAN SOIL

Plain is only 20 Miles From Russian Positions--Fighting Through Snow—Enemy is Counter-attacking to the East Near Siryl.

LONDON, April 12—Special—While the reports from Petrograd confirm the steady advance of Russian troops down the Carpathian slopes of the Carpathians toward the plains of Hungary, the rather dispiriting information comes through from official Russian circles that the enemy is counter-attacking in the region of Stryj, in eastern Galicia, south of Lemberg. With the last of the Beskid positions in their hands, the Russians now are advancing on Hungarian soil along an unbroken line of nearly 90 miles. Below them, 20 miles distant, lies the Hungarian plain. The mountain passes are still covered with snow, softening under the warmth of returning spring, and fighting is carried on with great difficulty. The Russians are approaching, if they have not already operated in, the Uzok Valley, south of the Uzok Pass. The enemy is still bringing up reinforcements to check the Russian invasion, but the Muscovite hordes are sweeping down with irresistible force on the valley below, which, where Austria has some of her greatest arsenals for the manufacture of munitions of war. Simultaneously with the advance into Hungary, Russia is keeping up her active offensive waged in northern Poland, where both sides claim a victory.

Submarines Prove Difficult Problem

Former French Minister of Marine Calls Attention to Previous Warnings

PARIS, France, April 12.—(Special)—M. Pelletan, former Minister of Marine, writing in the Radical, calls attention to the fact that in spite of the disdain heaped on submarines by former admiralty authorities, they are proving a most difficult problem to deal with than the large armored battleships which, it was affirmed, would alone count in a naval action.

The spectacle is one seen, remarks M. Pelletan, of the German fleet of dreadnoughts on which hundreds of millions have been spent, hidden in the home ports while the little submarines are challenging Great Britain, the queen of the seas. Some of her ships have been sunk, and she is at a loss how to protect her commerce. It is therefore the submarine which has become our enemy's weapon, when it ought to be ours, for the submarine is incontestably a French invention.

At the time when M. Pelletan was Minister of the his advocacy of torpedo boats, submarines and the smaller war craft had won him the name of the "National Danger."

THAW IN OLD HAUNTS ALLOWED OUT FOR AIR

NEW YORK, April 10.—Harry K. Thaw, held in the Tombs Prison awaiting a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on his appeal from an order of Justice Cage to send him back to Matteawan Asylum may be ordered to his first stroll about the streets of New York in many a day, under order of Supreme Court Justice Mullan, obtained by Thaw's counsel. Sheriff Grifenhagen was permitted, within his discretion to allow Thaw to take "reasonable exercise at reasonable hours." The nature of this exercise depends upon the Sheriff's judgment.

Reports that Thaw would be seen in places he formerly visited here were denied by Abel I. Smith of Thaw's counsel, who said that there will be no parties or joy rides, theatres or any of that kind. Thaw, as far as the law is concerned, is an innocent man, and he has a right to proper care, and should not have his health impaired. That is the reason the Justice signed the order to allow him exercise."

War Brides Real Heroines

Future of the Race and of the Country With These Girls, Outweigh all Other Considerations

LONDON, April 10.—The thousands of pre-battle field marriages in Britain since the war began are not only honorable, but patriotic and the girl who accepts her soldier lover in marriage and sends him to the slaughter should be an example for others, according to Dr. C. W. Saleeby, eminent London physician.

"It is a stupendous problem—keeping up the race," said Dr. Saleeby today, "We should do more to encourage such marriages."

Prominent London society approves, too. The girl who dedicates herself to bring up the next generation alone if her husband falls to return from France, or to care for him to the end of his days, if he returns maimed and broken, is England's real heroine, they say.

"Certainly, it is better for a man to marry, even though he has, perhaps, but a week's happiness with the woman he loves before he leaves for the front," said Lady Cynthia Sir Herbert Tree. "When one thinks of the future of the race, it is to be deplored that not more of the brave fellows who have been killed ever married before they left for the battle-fields."

England's future should outweigh every other consideration, said Lady Mond.

"It is a very difficult matter indeed," she said, "to advise in these days. Everything is under taking. There is a war fever and young girls are volatile. They should not be permitted to be carried away by enthusiasm and then left to repent for the rest of their days."

"Not only among the lower and middle classes have war marriages preceded the departure of recruits for the battle front. In smart circles in London many weddings have found the groom garbed in Kitchener's khaki—and the "war-bride" in tears.

Belgian Relief Ship Sunk By Germans

Harpalyce Sent to Bottom of North Sea Without Warning—Over 25 Lives Lost

ROTTERDAM, April 12.—(Special.)—The British steamer Harpalyce, the first relief boat of New York State, and under charter to the Commission for Relief in Belgium, has either been torpedoed or sunk by a mine in the North Sea.

The Dutch steamer Elizabeth, on its voyage from Rotterdam for New York on Saturday, picked up 22 of the crew of the Harpalyce seven miles northeast of Nordepinder lightship and brought them back to Rotterdam. The Dutch steamer Constance Catherina picked up five men and took them to Nieuwe Waterweg. The steamer carried a crew of 53 men, 26 of whom, it is feared, have been drowned.

Those rescued by the Elizabeth include the second mate and the second engineer, the latter in a wounded condition.

The Harpalyce, under its charter to the Belgian Relief Commission, had a permit, securing immunity from attack.

The Harpalyce, 3,631 tons, was a comparatively new steamer, owned by J. & C. Harrison of London. She sailed from New York on March 7 with more than 11,000 useful gifts for the relief of the Belgians and arrived at Rotterdam on March 19. Seven members of the Harpalyce was on her return voyage. She was commanded by Captain Frank Secker.

LONDON April 12th—(Special)—The Daily News has the following from Rotterdam:

The latest act of German frightfulness is the sinking today without the slightest warning of the Belgian relief ship, Harpalyce of London, when near the North Hinder Lightship. So far only 27 of the crew of 42 have been brought into Rotterdam, but it is feared practically all the remainder have been lost. There is a possibility that perhaps one, perhaps two, have been picked up by the American ship Ruby.

2ND CONTINGENT HELD AT KITCHENER'S REQUEST

Premier Says Canada Has More Than Hundred Thousand Men Under Arms—Canadian Mounted Rifles May go to Egypt

OTTAWA, April 12.—(Special.)—In the House of Commons Saturday night Sir Robert Borden spoke at length on what has been accomplished since the outbreak of the war by recruiting, mobilizing and equipping them to the front. Canada now has over 100,000 men under arms. The force, according to the prime minister, quadruples the number of British troops under Wellington at Waterloo and largely exceeds the entire force on either side at that world famed battle. In this connection he called attention to the fact that the first contingent had taken more guns from Canada than was possessed by the allied forces at Waterloo.

No Needless Delay

The prime minister said he desired to lay at rest comments and speculation respecting the delay in forwarding the second contingent. The contingent was ready to sail last December, but the British war office requested that they be not sent to England until a date not yet arrived, which it was not then at liberty to give to the house. The reasons for this decision were given by the war office and explained to by the Dominion Government. For one thing the war office was already greatly overtaxed in providing for the huge military force already in training in the British Isles. It was also desired that the second contingent should not be exposed to some of the unavoidable hardships endured by the first contingent during the past winter at Salisbury Plains.

A Fine Response.

Sir Robert spoke in eloquent praise of the generous and patriotic response to the call for enlistment. The young men under training in Canada as well as those already sent overseas were a credit to the Dominion and our troops already at the front had behaved with the greatest of gallantry. The general program already announced has been carried out to date and should the war last for another year, Canada would have at least 100,000 on the plains of Europe, and 50,000 more in training in Canada.

The total number of officers and men now enlisted amounts to 101,540 which included units of the active militia on active militia on active service in Canada of 9777; units recruited and organized for service but not mustered, 3500, and permanent force in Canada, 2340.

The remainder, classified as the overseas forces, amounts to 85,753.

The troops are distributed as follows: In Bermuda, 952 officers and men; at St. Lucia, 100 men; in England and at the front, 35,429, and in training for overseas service in Canada 56,000.

Canadian Bayonet Medium in Length

Those of Austria, U.S.A. and Belgium Shorter Than Ross Rifle

OTTAWA, April 10—The following memorandum was issued last night by the militia department, apparently in reply to comments in letters received from Col. Currie, M.P., at the front:

"Articles have appeared in the press recently attempting to point out the disadvantage of the Ross bayonet, with which Canadians are armed at the front, in comparison with other makes, particularly on account of length. The following information will, no doubt, be of general interest:

"Length of rifles and bayonets used by the principal British at war are:

"Germany—Rifle, 4 feet, 1.3 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 9.95 inches.

"Austria—Rifle, 4 feet, 2 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 11.5 inches.

"Turkey—Rifle, 4 feet, 6 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 6.6 inches.

"Belgium—Rifle, 4 feet, 2.25 inches; with bayonet, 4 feet, 11.75 inches.

"France—Rifle, 4 feet, 3.12 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 11.34 inches.

"Russia—Rifle, 4 feet, 3.87 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 9 inches.

"Great Britain—Short Lee-Enfield rifle, 3 feet, 8.5 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet 1.17 inches.

"Canada—(Ross) rifle, 4 feet, 2.5 inches; with bayonet, 5 feet, 1 inch.

"It is interesting to note that the American rifle is 2 feet, 7.2 inches long and with the bayonet, 4 feet, 11 inches.

Work Starts on Trunk Highway

Nearly One Thousand Men Will be Employed on Toronto-Hamilton Road

TORONTO, April 10.—The frost being now fairly out of the ground, a continuance of the present mild weather will enable the real heavy construction work to go ahead on the Toronto-Hamilton Highway. An employment office has been opened on Jicott street, and additional camps have been established, one about four miles west of Clarkson, one four miles east of Oakville, another at Oakville, and one four miles to the west. Accommodation will be provided in all for 1,000 men. A railway for which three locomotives, fifteen miles of track and eighty steel dump cars have been ordered, will convey the material from the point of delivery on the Grand Trunk Railway or other point to the sport desired. Even the dump cars have been got in Canada. They are of a special design, drafter by the engineering department of the Commission. Unhaged, and holding about 1½ cubic yards of material. The track is in fifteen-foot sections, each of which can be transported by two men, so that the track can be quickly laid where desired. Two crawes will be used for loading purposes.

This method of distributing the material means not only greater efficiency but a saving of $6,000. For the grading and other work along the road some 2200 teams will be used. The total tonnage of cement, bridge material, and other supplies will run to about 250,000. Only some 200 men on the average have been working on the highway this winter. As the number increases, each municipality, through its representative in the Commission, will have its own men employed in proportion to the amount of its participation in thevotal cost.

DIED IN TAXI-CAB ON HIS WAY HOME

TORONTO, April 10—Charles McCurry, aged 35 years, 103 Wardell street, died in a taxicab early today while on his way home from a meeting at the Labor Temple. Deceased, who was employed by the Cooper Brewing Company, King street east, was under the influence of liquor, according to the chauffeur, when he entered the taxicab after coming out of the Labor Temple at midnight. The man gave his address as 109 Wardell street, but finding this to be a wrong address, the driver notified Patrolman Sergeant Johnston. The latter boarded inside the taxicab and found that the man was dead. His right address was afterwards discovered. The chief coroner was notified, and ordered the body to be removed to the man's home.

Kitchener's New Army Campaign

Members of All Political Parties Endeavour to Stimulate Recruiting

LONDON, April 12—(Special)—A great patriotic campaign to secure recruits for Field Marshal Earl Kitchener's new army was opened in London today and the campaign is to be carried on for a fortnight.

Meetings addressed by Liberal, Conservative, Labor and Irish members of Parliament were held in Hyde Park, Trafalgar Square, and other centres of the capital, while recruiting sergeants distributed pamphlets showing the pay, separation allowances and other advantages given to soldiers of the King. As the result of the Trafalgar Square meeting 200 recruits registered at the chief recruiting offices nearby.

During the fortnight's campaign 1500 meetings will be held, while troops will engage in street marching.

COAL ON PACIFIC COAST

LONDON, April 12.—(Special)—Although coal has been shipped to Europe from time to time from Eastern Canada, important mining developments are now taking place in British Columbia, though the high freights will prevent exportation to this side of the Atlantic.

The enterprise involves the construction of a railway from the seaboard through the Rocky Mountain region. The coal found in the district is said to be the only hard smokeless kind in the world, outside of South Wales, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, and the possession of the field will give control on favorable terms to all the markets on the Pacific Coast.

EIGHT HUNDRED FEET LONG

NEW YORK, April 12.—A Tribune report from London says Britain has laid down a battleship which will mark a change in naval construction surpassing that marked by the first pre-dreadnought. The new monster will have a length of eight hundred feet, a speed of forty knots and will carry 15-inch guns.

Films Burned Loss is Large

Hundred Thousand Dollar Fire in Childs' Richmond Street Building

TORONTO, April 12.—Special—Seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of moving picture films were destroyed and thirty thousand dollars' worth of theatre in Toronto will be without their regular programmes today as the result of a sudden outbreak of fire in the offices of the Canadian Universal Film Exchange, Limited, above the Childs Restaurant, Richmond and Yonge streets, at 6.30 this morning. The total loss is estimated at nearly $100,000 and affects the following:

The Canadian Universal Film Exchange.

The Ramo Films, Inc.

Harry Rosenthal, manufacturers' agent.

The Waterbury Button Company.

The New Method Employment Agency.

John Parkinson Engraver.

The Childs Restaurant.

Ambrose Kent and Sons, regalia manufacturers.

Sam Wilson, fire inspector in the Robert Simpson Company, on the upper floor, saw the first smoke issuing from the ventilator of the Canadian Universal office and turned in the alarm from the corner of Queen and Yonge streets. One of the engineers employed in Simpson's says he saw a young man and a young woman emerge from the Richmond street door of the building after Wilson had gone to turn in the alarm, but who they were could not be ascertained last night. An investigation is likely to be made by the police and fire authorities.

GURNSEY GOES TO BOTTOM

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 12.—It is reported that the British steamer Gurnsey, belonging to the London & Southwestern Railway, was torpedoed off Cap La Hogue this morning. There is no news of her crew. The British steamer Harpleye, loaded with Belgian relief supplies, donated by New York State, has been torpedoed in the North Sea. Twenty-two of her crew of fifty-three were saved.

A despatch from Paris states that north of Regieville the French have consolidated their positions and are extending their advance. A charge by the French on the German lines at Montmartreya resulted in the capture of a line of trenches.

Casualties Among Canadian Forces

OTTAWA, April 11—The casualties among the Canadian Expeditionary Force announced by the Militia Department, are as follows:

2ND BATTALION

Wounded—Lance-Corporal Carpenter, March 30 (returned to regimental duty April 2.) Next of kin, Mrs. J. Carpenter, Chambers, 2 Grecian street, Maidstone, Kent, Eng.

13TH BATTALION

15TH BATTALION

Wounded—Sergeant Hugh Rose, April 1. Next of kin, Mrs. Jane Rose, 170 University avenue, Toronto, Ont.

Sergt. Rose is a member of the 48th Highlanders. He has gretriously been unofficially reported wounded.

32ND BATTALION

Seriously Ill—Private Thos. Phelps Thomas, pneumonia, at Millitary Hospital, Shorncliffe. Next of kin, Carpenter Edith Thomas (wife), Shellmouth, Man.

PRINCESS PATRICIAS

Wounded—Private Wm. Savanagh (formerly 12th Battalion), at No. 11 General Hospital, Boulogne, gunshot wound in head. Next of kin, O. Kavanagh, New Waterford, N.S.

GROUND GAINED RETAINED

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 12.—A despatch from Paris says the War Office announced late last night that all ground gained between the Meuse and the Moselle has been retained and fresh progress is being made. The entire region about Eparges is now in French hands and statements emphasize the importance of this advance. Indications are that the loss of these positions has greatly disheartened the Germans, who have estimated to have lost thirty thousand men in this region during the past four weeks' fighting.

MINNESOTA WENT AGROUND

(Canadian Press Special)

TOKIO, April 12—The steamer Minnesota, plying between Seattle and Japan, went aground last night at Iwajima, near the entrance to the Inland Sea. The passengers and crew are safe. Assistance has been asked for.

FORGED CHEQUES PASSED IN LINDSAY

Marshal Lindsay Will Appear for Preliminary Hearing To-day

LINDSAY, Ont., April 12.—(Special)—Marshall Lindsay, who is accused of passing two forged cheques on local merchants, was arrested Saturday night at the home of James Wilson, East Ward. Lindsay, who is a married man and a bricklayer by trade, has figured in the Police Court on different occasions for infractions of the liquor law. It is said to have forged the name of Thos. Begg to a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for the sum of $32 and passed it at the store of J. Sutcliffe and Sons, where he purchased a suit of clothes. He then made his getaway by securing a ticket for Toronto. Friday morning Lindsay returned to town and remained during the night at James Wilson's house. Saturday morning at 7.30 o'clock, it is said, he presented cheque No. 2 at W. Nicholls' grocery. This was on the Dominion Bank for the sum of $16.25.

The prisoner will come up for a preliminary hearing on Monday morning.

Woman Suffrage

Question May be Submitted to the Electors at Midsummer

HAMILTON, April 12.—(Special)—The legislation and reception committee will meet next week and the most important item of business on the order sheet is the request of the Canadian Women's Suffrage Association for the submission of a plebiscite on the question of votes for women. This request was made to the city last December, but came too late for the submission of the question at the municipal elections.

It is now proposed to submit it in midsummer if any other bylaws are to be submitted. It is stated that the Council is fairly evenly divided on it.

It is also likely that the legislation committee will take up soon the question of a redistribution of the eight wards of the city. They will not be increased or decreased in number, but the boundaries will be shifted in order to make them as nearly as possible equal in proportion and assessment. It is likely that wards one and eight will lose big slices in the shuffle.

Italy's neutrality or lack of it has peeved Emperor William. But like Eva Tanguay, Italy "don't care."

SUBMARINE AT WORK

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 12.—The Harrison Line steamer Wayfarer of 6,000 tons, has been torpedoed by a German submarine, according to a message received at Lloyd's this afternoon. Details are lacking. One report says she sank. Another says she was towed into the Scilly Islands but did not sink, and is being towed into Queenstown. The owners have no informations.

SUNDAY WAS QUIET

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 12.—The German War Office announces that Sunday was quiet on the western front. French attacks in the Argonne, in Ailly forest and the forest of Le Petre were all repulsed.

PRINZ WILHELM INTERNED

(Canadian Press Special)

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 12.—The German cruiser, Crown Prince Wilhelm has arrived here too late to help her consort, the Eitel Friedrich, and will also be interned.

FIRING OFF SCARBOROUGH

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 12.—Reports current here to the effect that heavy firing is taking place off Scarborough, indicating that some kind of naval engagement is in progress.

REPULSED TWO GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 12.—This afternoon's official statement says there is little to add to the communication given out last night. During April 11th engagements continued the whole day in Belgium in the region of Albert, also in Prussian Poland, on the Oise and the Aisne, and in the Champagne district, again no engagements took place between the Meuse and the Moselle after the repulse of April 9th we have devoted ourselves to re-organizing the positions won during the course of that fighting.

On the western fringe of the forest of Le Petre we repelled two violent German counter attacks which failed completely under the fire of our infantry and artillery.

BOB FITZSIMMONS IS MARRIED MAN AGAIN

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Bob Fitzsimons, the former heavyweight champion, was married here on Thursday to Miss Temo Zillon, who has been associated with him for sometime in theatricals. The bride's gift from the groom is said to have been $85,000 in jewels.

DUTCH NOTE OF PROTEST IS HANDED TO GERMANY

THE HAGUE, April 12.—(Special)—The Netherland Government has handed to Germany a note of protest concerning the sinking of the Dutch steamship Medea, which was sent to the bottom off Beachy Head on March 25 by the German submarine U-28. The German Government is considering a reply, and it is thought probable in ministerial circles here that it will offer to pay an indemnity in accordance with international law, but this is dependent upon the judicial decision.

A feeling of the utmost confidence regarding the relations between Holland and Germany is expressed here, and the alarming reports in London are considered inexplicable.

HAMADAN CITY IN PERSIA OCCUPIED BY TURK FORCES

PETROGRAD, April 12.—(Special)—A telegram to The Bourse Gazette from Tiflis, Transcaucasia, says that the Turks have occupied Hamadan, a city of Persia, 165 miles southwest of Teheran.

Hamadan is an entrepot for the commerce of Bagdad, Tabriz, Ispahan and Teheran. It has a population of about 25,000.

BROTHERS SLASH BROTHERS IN 6-MAN BATTLE, 2 DEAD

Several Hundred Men, Women and Children Watch Three Duels —Two Dying, Two Others Seriously Wounded—Fued Began Over Baseball Game Several Months Ago

LETART, W. Va., April 10.—Two men are dead, two are dying and two more seriously—and perhaps fatally—wounded today as a result of the strange triple duel late yesterday, in which six brothers, representatives of two families, acted off as if for nothing more deadly than a dance, drew their knives and faced opponents selected with regard to age.

While knives flashed, several hundred men, women and children stood by, but none dared to stop the battle.

The dead are Earl Shirley, aged 28, and Urson Bosworth, 38, both eldest brothers of feudist clans who were united in the duel. They were the first to meet and cut and slashed until both dropped.

Then Jackson Shirley and John Bosworth, the next in age of the fighting sex clashed, fighting a few yards from the place where their brothers were stabbed to death. Both died.

Jackson Shirley and John Bosworth are dying, physicians said today.

Harry Shirley and Tom Bosworth paired off a few minutes later. They are boys in their 'teens. Both are desperately wounded, but may recover.

The feud began over a baseball game months ago. The crowd which watched the duel had been attending an entertainment at the Howell schoolhouse four miles from here. As the entertainment reared its close those inside heard quarrelling outside. The programme was cut short and the people poured out of the building to see the fight.

MILITARY CROSS FOR PORT ARTHUR MAN

The London Daily Mail reports that Mr. A. C. Innis has been awarded the Military Cross for gallantry at the front.

Mr. Innis was at one time connected with the Alberta Land Co., Port Arthur, and he and Mr. Shirley were the first two to leave Port Arthur immediately upon the declaration of war.

It was for conspicuous gallantry and ability at Cuinchy on February 1 that Mr. Innis was decorated. When all the officers of the attacking company had been put out of action, this officer was sent forward to take command. Leading his men, he captured the enemy's post, and then, advancing a further sixty yards, captured another.

Lieut. Blacker-Douglass is reported in the same paper as killed in action. He was a son of Mr. Blacker-Douglass who owns property at the north end of Port Arthur.

PORT HOPE LADY VOLUNTEERS FOR FRONT

Miss Myrtle McMillan Has Been Accepted

PORT HOPE, April 10.—Among others who have volunteered for overseas service is Miss Myrtle McMillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. McMillan, Brown street. Miss McMillan has been accepted and will be attached to the staff of Queen's Field Stationary Hospital, No. 3.

KINGSTON

The 21st Battalion are packing all their athletic apparatus so as to have it ready for shipping across the sea.

Six members of the 14th guard will ask to be transferred to the remount depot now being recruited by Lt.-Col. Morgan, P.V.O.

Queen's University has sent a greater number of male students to the front in proportion to its strength than any university or college in Canada.

Col. Fee has recruited 300 men for the 39th battalion, and now has 350 more recruits for the battalion that will in all probability be organized and mobilized in Kingston.

The 21st Battalion when it goes overseas will take with it 100,000 cigarettes besides a corresponding quantity of tobacco. This amounts to a package of cigarettes for very man for each of the ten days of the voyage.

SHELLS AND BULLETS WHISTLE OVERHEAD

CODOURG, Ont., April 12.—(Special)—Pte. A. E. Peters, of the first Canadian contingent, in writing to friends at Colborne, says in part:

"Since last writing we have spent four days in the trenches at a different place. We marched back a few miles, spent four days, and are now back in the same place as last time. Rifles and big guns and machine guns are firing continually. I am attached to Battalion Headquarters with four other scouts for the purpose of carrying messages by bicycle when we are in billets. At the trenches we walk, of course, as we have a very short distance to carry messages from the telegraph dug-out in the reserve trenches to the senior officers of the battalion. Shells from our own guns and the enemy's pass over us, and we hear them whistling all day. Rifle bullets sing here as and strike around frequently.

"My section commander, Corporal Newman, was killed in the trenches, also Deanie Earls of Cobourg, shot through the head. When we were here before one or two of my company were killed and some wounded.

While He Shaves

Lieut.-Col. Morrison Plumbs German Works While He Eats

Lieut.-Col. E. B. Morrison, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., and now at the front in command of a section of Canadian artillery does not allow action to prevent him from shaving regularly, as an illustration of how he uses the face scraper and directs his guns at the same is found in a recent letter which Captain Cosgrove of Toronto wrote to a friend. The letter in part follows:

"We have been through an exciting time also we took over the position from a British brigade. Our shooting is splendid and we have done the Germans a lot of harm. Business. We simply bowl with joy in the mornings at the way the guns switch the colonels' conducts, giving his commands for fire during his shaving, or between mouthfuls of bacon. Our infantry are doing fine in the trenches and don't delight out of our ability to drop a shell into the German trenches."

Another letter of interest has been received by a friend from Captain J. A. Beattie of Guelph, which tells of the work the Canadian chaplains are doing at the front. Captain Beattie is still in England and writing concerning the chaplains he also states that despite the mud and hardships, there was a social, spiritual and mutual joy among the men. In the letter Captain Beattie pays a tribute to Major Ashton Leigh riff of this city for his work while in charge of the hospital at Bulford manor.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

A FAMILY JAR

A call was on Saturday evening answered by the police to an apartment on Front street, where a family row was in progress. An amicable settlement of the difficulty was arranged by the office responding to the call.

CASE DISMISSED

Clement Ellis was this morning before Magistrate Ponton on trial on a charge of assault, which was not proven, and in consequence he was discharged. Mr. Carnew for prosecution, and Mr. Sherry for the defendant.

OMISSION OF TITLE

In the list of contributions published in Saturday's Intelligencer, the name of A. Campbell was credited with fifty dollars, should have read "Rev. Alma Campbell". There are two "A. Campbell's" in this city, which frequently occasion confusion, one being the name "F. White" put down for 25 dollars, should have read "A. F. White."

PASTORS EXCHANGED

The pastors of the Protestant churches of this city, made a general exchange last evening, the substitutes being the chosen champions on the Sabbath. While the rain prevented many from attending, those who did go out heard excellent discourses, and much to meditate upon regarding the keeping of the Lord's Day.

GETTING READY FOR ACTION

Those who have launches sail and row boats, are getting their craft ready for the summer's pleasures on the bay, and 'ere long the old Quinte will resound with the cheery spirit of Belleville's young people who depend so much for recreation upon the water. Already boat builders and repairs are busy taking orders and turning out floaters "just as good as new."

FRONT WINDOW LOAFERS

Several Front street business men have complained to The Intelligencer about certain young men (old enough to know better) who make it their business to stand in front of display windows, even to obstructing entrance at the door; not only preventing a public view of articles in the windows, but remarking on passers-by. It is in order for the police to request such an element to "move on".

BACK FROM ENGLAND

George Clarke, son of Mrs. E. Clarke, who resides on Front street, has arrived home from England. Clarke was a member of the 34th Battery and whilst at Salisbury Plains met with an accident. He was thrown off a horse and the animal kicked him upon the right leg. The injuries were such as to confine the young man in the hospital in England for five months. When sufficiently recovered Clarke was sent home. To-day he shows no signs of the injuries he sustained.

We move this place, carload after carload of all sizes from rough deals down to particles of sawdust dirt. That is common also handled or and is assorted by an American Parisian introducer. Mr. Manley believes that the erratic behavior of certain comets, especially the sudden alteration in the tails, may be accounted for by collisions with these gaseous masses, and that recent photographs of comets give evidence of their presence. He also suggests that they may influence terrestrial weather.

"The planets move in a narrow zone, near the plane of the ecliptic," says Mr. Meunier, "while comets have orbits whose inclination to the plane is sometimes great. It varies for the periodic comets from 5 degrees to 163 degrees. Consequently those bodies must, in their course, from time to time, plow, alone, penetrate. They burn; for their spectrum is that of the hydrocarbid flame. The theory that their nucleus is the aggregation of electric ions resolved to oxalids set back when the earth passed through the tail of Halley's comet in May, 1910.

"These incoherent masses, penetrating into new regions, set, so to speak, as explosives. When they are observed, at the time of their return to the sun, they appear greatly as nebulous disks, more or less vague and filter above as tail or only a fan. Then they get paler, the sun by comes more brilliant, and award as it nears under varied aspects. Here are some examples chosen from among recent comets that have been photographed. The first comet of 1908 was discovered on July 14, 1908, with a tail broken into two form or a beyond. The Giacobini comet of 1908 had no tail on the 9 January fully, but on the 11th a convex edge, like an elongated fan, drawn through the air. The next day as if the retarding medium had 4.4 appeared, it spread, and a fan, as it explosively; some days later it sent out two fine rays, which were afterward multiplied.

"The most remarkable comet of 1908 was undoubtedly Morehouse's of 1908. Discovered in September, it first showed variations of brilliancy. At 21 sept., October 16, without any warning, there was developed in it a mass more luminous than its own light. This mass formed an angle like a mass of smoke issuing from the nucleus of a fire when the observer's line of wind strikes it. The following night there was a new surprise—an explosion that drew it out into a luminous cone. On the 18th and 19th the first spiral was seen an incombustible globular mass of gas, forming an obstacle and leaving a well-marked place. This is not due to photographic accident, for it appears also on photograph taken at Heidelberg. In November the Morehouse comet was no less astonishing, on the 15

A POULTRY ALPHABET

A utility bird is rarely worth doctoring, the axe being an excellent surgical instrument to apply to sick fowls.

Balanced rations supply maximum of nourishment with minimum of waste.

Cull closely, for it does not pay to board idlers.

Do not attempt too much to accomplish thoroughly.

Every insect left to mature will decrease the profits of the flock.

Filth breeds all ills.

Good stock is the best foundation but it must be handled with common sense.

Hens are not magicians, so can not manufacture eggs unless given the proper materials.

Indolence and poultry breeding make a combination which would bankrupt a wealthy fancier.

Just a little observation will prove that the know-it-alls never make successful poultrymen.

Kindness shown to fowls pays in increased egg supply.

Lice multiply rapidly in uncleanly surroundings.

May chicks, pushed to maturity, make full layers to fill in the time when earlier hatched birds are resting.

No mixed flock can give the satisfaction of a single breed.

One's favorite breed is usually the best with which to win success.

Pullets should be separated from cockerels as soon as sex can be distinguished.

Quickly kill the chicks which are dwarfed or crippled when hatched.

Rush young birds toward maturity if you wish large profits.

Select breeders early and dispose of all other male birds.

Try to taste no feed, either by over-feeding, careless methods, or one-sidedness.

Removing Grease Spots.

Eucalyptus oil will remove grease stains from any kind of material without injuring it. Apply a little of the oil with a clean piece of flannel, and rub the material gently until the stains disappear.

Tea For Stained Fingers.

Vegetable and fruit stains on the fingers can be removed by dipping the fingers in very strong tea for a few minutes and then washing them in clear warm water.

Tightening Loose Screw.

When a screw becomes loose remove it and fill the hole with bits of sponge packed in tightly. Then replace the screw and it will hold as firmly as ever.

Do Not Expectorate.

Pneumonia is communicated from one person to another by means of expectoration. Don't form the spitting habit and avoid people who do spread infection by expectoration.

Heavy Death List

Since Saturday the grim reaper of death has been busy, with the result that in the city and vicinity a number have been called to their reward.

S. R. GORMAN

After being ill for some time Mr. Stephen R. Gorman, a highly respected resident of this city, passed away on Saturday afternoon. The ultimate cause of death was anemia. Deceased was 62 years of age. For the past 35 years Mr. Gorman had been a resident of this city. He was for some time engaged in the occupations of a commercial traveller and was deservedly popular with his fellow grippmen and with all whom he came in contact. Of late years deceased had been conducting a boot and shoe business in this city. Mr. Gorman in religion was an Anglican, being an active member of St. Thomas church. He was for some years superintendent of the Sunday school, and was a prominent official of the church. Deceased was a man possessed of a kindly and genial disposition and made friends with all who came in close relationship with him. His demise is a loss to the city in which he made his home for many years, and those bereft will have the hearty sympathy of all citizens. A widow, two sons and a daughter survive. The sons are J. L. of this city, and George N. of Calgary, and the daughter is Miss Florence, at home. Three sisters, Mrs. P. D. Goldsmith of this city, Mrs. W. J. O'Flynn of Madoc, and Mrs. H. E. Clarke of St. Catharines, are living; also one brother, Mr. James Gorman of Orillia.

JANE E. DENIKE

At an early hour on Sunday morning Mrs. Eliza Denike who resided at 42 Everett street, passed away after a brief illness. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Deceased was born in Prince Edward County 71 years ago, being a daughter of the late Mr. Hildebrah Vallean. For a number of years Mrs. Denike had lived in this city. She was a life long Methodist. No family survives. Her husband preceded her to the tomb some years ago.

WM. A. ASHLEY

Saturday afternoon Mr. William Ashley of Bancroft, Village, passed away in this city as the result of an attack of appendicitis. He was taken ill a few days ago and came to this city for treatment, but his condition upon arrival here was such that little relief from medical attention could be caused. Deceased was 31 years of age and conducted a store at Bancroft. He was born at Frontenac Lake and for the past ten years had lived at Bancroft, where he was most favorably known. Mr. Ashley was a member of the Methodist church. Surviving is the widow, also his mother, father, one brother and four sisters, all of Bancroft.

MRS. F. L. WICKETT

Mrs. Frances L. Wickett, a well-known and respected lady residing in the Village of Foxboro, died yesterday after two weeks' illness. Pneumonia was the cause of death. On the 26th of July, 1856, deceased was born in Sidney Township, being a daughter of the late D. Y. Sills. She was married to Mr. George Wickett, and Foxboro had been the family home for some years. For years Mrs. Wickett had been a member of the Methodist church, taking an active part in church work. In addition to the husband a daughter, Miss Florence, survives. A sister of the deceased, Mrs. T. Gay, of Foxboro, is living.

Consigned to The Tomb

GEORGE REEVES

On Saturday afternoon the funeral of the late Mr. George Reeves of this city, took place and many citizens attended the obsequies. At the family residence, 212 Charles street, a brief service was held, after which the remains were conveyed to Bridge street Methodist church, where an impressive service was held, conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. S. Osborne, assisted by Rev. Dr. Baker, Principal of Albert College. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. A number of beautiful floral designs were contributed by relatives and friends. The bearers were Messrs. A. G. Vermilyea, J. Williams, J. Taylor, J. J. B. Flint, E. F. Milburn and Col. Stewart.

MRS. N. DENYES

The remains of the late Mrs. Nancy Ann Denyes, who passed away at the home of her son, Mr. H. K. Denyes, of Thurlow Township, were yesterday consigned to the tomb. In Zion Hill Methodist church a service was held by the Rev. Mr. Huffman, pastor of the circuit, assisted by the Rev. H. S. Osborne, pastor of Bridge street church in this city. The attendance of relatives and friends was large. Many floral tributes were placed upon the casket. At Zion's burying ground the body was laid away to await the resurrection morn. The bearers were Messrs. H. Honsinger, W. Garrison, S. P. Bell, S. Wellbanks, H. F. and Wm. Ketcheson.

Captain Acquitted Of Wife Murder

French Cavalry Officer Could Not Make Her Leave Him at the Front

PARIS, April 12.—(Special.)—Captain Jean Herail, an officer in the French cavalry, was acquitted yesterday by a court-martial which tried him for killing his wife at Compiegne last November because she persisted in following the army in order to be near him. Previous to the shooting, orders had been issued by the military authorities prohibiting officers and soldiers from receiving their wives during the campaign. It was brought out today that Captain Herail became mentally unbalanced through worry over the possible results of his wife's refusal to obey this law and leave him.

In effect the court-martial declared that a man's duty to his country is paramount; that it outweighs all ties of home and of affection.

Seldom has a more pathetic scene been witnessed in a Paris court than that when Captain Herail took the stand in his own defence. The soldier wept as he told of the great love which he bore his wife, and of how, when she steadfastly refused to return home and he believed that he would be cashiered because "absolutely and unquestionably" he was driven to the last extremity" of killing his loved one. The court room was crowded with women and officers.

Colonel Jacquillat, who presided over the court, removed Captain Herail sharply for placing all the blame upon his wife, and asked why he did not use some other method than to shoot her.

"I did," replied the Captain. "I tried every means. I was unstrung; I was out of my mind to kill the wife I loved."

TORONTO DOCTOR GETS PROMOTION IN FRANCE

TORONTO, April 12.—(Special.)—Dr. Herbert E. Clutterbuck, the Toronto doctor who joined the British army from England, and is now chief consultant at No. 12 Base Hospital, Boulogne.

In a letter to Toronto spoke highly of Tommy Atkins. "The average soldier is simply wonderful," he says. "The nursing in this hospital is really better than in the public wards of our civil hospitals. The patients are so grateful and appreciative of everything done for them that it is a pleasure to work for them."

LIQUOR SHOPS CLOSED EARLY IN EVENING

Although the official notice has not yet been received, Licence Inspector Arnett, the liquor stores in Belleville are observing the new License Act and closing their places of business at 7 o'clock in the evening. The Royal assent given to the bills passed by the Legislature on Thursday brought them into operation at once, except such as were to come in force by proclamation.

Landry Still Out on Strike

Dispute in Senate May, However, be Amicably Settled Today

OTTAWA, April 12.—(Special)—There is still no change in the situation in the Senate, where the Speaker, Senator Landry, has temporarily withdrawn from his position. The internal economy committee reports to the Senate tomorrow, however, on the matter, and there is a possibility that matters may be adjusted.

On Saturday afternoon Senator Cloran raised the question of Senator Landry's absence from the chair and declared that the Senate had no power to choose a Speaker, but there was no discussion.

EVER TRY CORN BREAD?

When wheat goes up housekeepers look about for some substitute for the "staff of life," and to their rescue comes some tested recipes for corn meal dishes, the cakes and gems and doughnuts that are just as palatable as the white wheat bread and very much less expensive.

Sour Milk Corn Bread

Two cupfuls of corn meal, two cupfuls sour milk, two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablspoonfuls sugar, white or brown, one and one-half teaspoonfuls salt, two eggs, one teaspoonful soda, one tablesp onful cold water.

Cook the meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar in a double boiler for about 10 minutes. When the mixture is cool, add the eggs well beaten and the soda dissolved in the water. Bake in a shallow iron or granite pan for about 20 minutes.

Corn Meal and Wheat Waffles

One and one-half cupfuls water, one-half cupful milk, one cupful sifted flour, three tablespoonfuls melted butter, one tablespoonful baking powder, one and one-half teaspoonfuls salt, yolks of two eggs, whites of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls melted butter.

Cook the meal in the water 20 minutes, add milk, the dry ingredients sifted and sifted, the yolks of the eggs well beaten, the butter, and the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Cook on a greased waffle iron.

A Hatful of Pearls

The wit of Jenny Lind was as charming as was her voice. On the occasion of her second rehearsal at the Paris Opera House, Labiache, the famous singer, was announced as her voice. Hurrying up to her he said, enthusiastically: "Give me your hand, mademoiselle! Every note in your voice is a pearl!"

"Give me your hat," replied Jenny Lind, with a playful smile.

Labiache handed her hat to her. Putting it to her mouth, she gave one of her matchless trills and bird-like snatches of song.

"Here," she said, smiling at the delighted Labiache, as she returned his property, "is a hatful of pearls for you, monsieur."

According to the latest navy estimates, the total number of officers, seamen, boys, mercenaries and Royal Marines is 210,000.

In the savings banks of the Royal navy there are 24,456 accounts, and the amount due to depositors exceeds a quarter of a million sterling.

Steam Cleans Lamp Chimneys

To clean lamp glasses hold them over a jug of boiling water until well steamed, then polish with a dry duster. It is far less trouble than washing, and the glass sees very rarely breaks.

A FRIEND OF THE MONEY-LENDER.

Canada has been hearing a lot from the Liberal party about the wickedness of the capitalist in oppressing the farmer, and the Borden Government has been held responsible. It has been a parrot cry of the Opposition that the Conservative Government were friends of the privileged classes and the enemy of the plain citizen.

Now mark what follows:—

Section 22 of the Government put before the House of Commons a resolution to provide relief for farmers in the Canadian West who had lost their crops, this relief to take the form of seed grain, animal fodder and other goods, and to be secured by liens which would be given priority through provincial legislation.

Here is where the Liberal party showed its love for the farmer. Hon. William Pugsley took strong exception to the security which the provincial governments were giving to the Dominion because it gave the Government a lien which would rank ahead of existing mortgages.

The security in this case was exactly the same as the provincial (Liberal) governments in the West took when they distributed seed grain in 1908, and there is no record of Mr. Pugsley having complained at that time. Now Mr. Pugsley describes it as "an improper thing to do." He does not make this complaint on behalf of the farmer who is getting the relief, but on behalf of the moneyed interests holding mortgages against the property of the farmer. Mr. Pugsley's sympathies in this instance were all for the money-lenders in the West. "People who have lent money to settlers," he said, "and we know that there are vast sums loaned by companies in Eastern Canada especially—have done it under the existing law, knowing that when they did it they would receive by means of their conveyance a first mortgage upon the patented lands of the mortgagor. Now it is proposed to change the law. It is practically proposed to lend money to the settler, and for that loan to take a lien ahead of the mortgage which the money-lender has taken in good faith; and this mortgage of the money-lender may represent the security of widows and orphans in the East, who are very largely interested in trust and mortgage companies. But the Government's lien is to come ahead of all existing encumbrances." And so on.

The situation was expressed in a nutshell by the Solicitor-General, Hon. Arthur Meighen, who followed the friend of the money-lenders. "The only two classes concerned in the subject of this discussion," said Mr. Meighen, "are the mortgagees and the Government, representing the people of Canada. It would be impossible for any hon. member to pretend that in asking the Government to take this security, he represents in any way the desire or interest of the farming community. The farmers of the West would be no better off if they gave a second or a third or a fourth incumbrance on their land instead of a first. To them it makes no difference whatever. Their interest is to get the seed grain and to protect themselves and their creditors. There are two classes, the Government of Canada and the mortgagees, the moneyed interest; and the House will note with very considerable interest that when the interests of these two classes apparently clash—to borrow the phrase of the hon. member for St. John—he is now the champion of the moneyed interests. It is not long since he was on the other side of the fence, when he found very serious fault with this Government for being so closely allied to the interests of big finance."

This is one more Liberal break, in a session which has been full of Liberal blunders. People who know the Liberal leaders know that their professed friendship for the plain man, the poor man, and the farmer was only so much bunk, but it remained for one of these same leaders to come along with a bold plea for the protection of the moneyed interests, the money-lenders of Canada in a case where sufficient security for the people of Canada meant everything to the farmers of the West.

PEACE RUMORS PREVALENT.

The air is full of rumors regarding the plight of Austria, the latest report coming from Rome to the effect that Francis Joseph has appealed to the Vatican to intercede with Russia for honorable terms of peace. The report may not find confirmation, but it has a basis of probability. Hungary is alarmed, for she is in imminent danger of invasion, and the fears of Budapest would weigh upon Vienna. Moreover, there is the Italian menace, and above all the feeling pervading the whole Dual Monarchy that nothing has been gained in the war. Austria has failed in Serbia, she has been defeated and driven back in the north, her cause is hopeless. Austrian pride would suffer terribly if she had to sue for peace, but it would be madness to persist.

Germany's cause, also, is hopeless. From the moment when her whole carefully laid plan of campaign was upset by the failure of the drive against Paris, her defeat has been certain. She fights now because she is not ready to acknowledge defeat, but she fights without hope. That is a situation which must have its effect upon the minds of her people. But should Austria make peace, what would Germany be fighting for? She went to war to support her ally's designs against Serbia. It was a Prussian policy, and when the very cause and subject of the giant affray had been removed, how would Prussia coerce Southern Germany that it would be right and just to shed more Saxon and Bavarian blood? If Austria yields it will not be long before Germany begins parleying.

Bismarck knew when to begin war. He would have known when to end this one. If any part of that great statesman's wisdom belongs to the Germans of today we may be sure they are taking thought how best and soonest they may bring the war to a close.

CURRENT COMMENT

A Salt Lake City baseball team objects to being nicknamed "the Mormons." But "Latter Day Saints" looks so badly on the sport page.

The Tokio, Japan, Mail says: "When a street car is full, it is full." As Lord Byron said to Hennessy: "There is greater understanding beyond the seas, friend of mine."

In the Chicago mayoralty contest, 244,000 women—80 per cent. of those who were registered—cast their ballots. Only 88 per cent. of registered men voted. For once the men outnumbered the women.

Those two Toronto officers who defied and grappled with armed robbers and saved several hundred dollars of their employer's money from the desperadoes are qualified for military service, says a Hamilton exchange.

Hamilton Herald: "The Germans are welcome to all the satisfaction they are getting out of their "hymns of hate" against England. But those same hymns of hate will be matter for amusement after the war is over. How fine it will be to quote them to Germans selling agents who come soliciting orders!"

Kingston Standard: "It is said that this par has set back civilization. We fail to see it. The Allies have shown what real civilization is, and Germany what barbarism is. The contrast is too great for civilization to be set back. The war will civilize the barbarians."

"There is said to be a famine in dyes in the United States since Germany has having a monopoly of them. She is willing to let the States have them if they will undertake to supply no more munitions of war to Great Britain. But Mr. Edison says he can make all the primary colors which the textile manufacturers want. Germany's little scheme will not work. All she will do is to lose her monopoly."

The "made in Canada" movement was inaugurated by Canadians for Canadians. It is based upon confidence in Canada, its resources and people; in a firm belief that Canadian genius, Canadian industry, energy and enterprise are surpassed in no country in the world. It is a movement built upon the infallible truth that every dollar paid for goods made by Canadians remains in the pockets of the Canadian people, provides employment and a decent livelihood for Canadian men and women.

JITNEY BUS IN OTTAWA PLEASES THE PEOPLE

OTTAWA, April 10.—On Monday afternoon the jitney made its first appearance in the Capital, and all those who used it were highly pleased. It is not a common ordinary taxicab or worn out motor bus, but an elaborate McLaughlin-Buick motor car, the jitney. About four o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Charles Levesque of 55 St. Charles street, Hull, who the people of Ottawa can thank for providing such an excellent service, drew his motor car up to the Provincial General Hospital, took on four passengers, and thus inaugurated the jitney bus service.

There will be no mistaking the car as it carries a big sign in front: "Jitney Passenger Service, Bank and Rideau streets. Fare five cents."

Operating from four to seven o'clock the jitney, which carries seven passengers at once, carries about fifty people in the afternoon. To travel from the hospital to the Exhibition Grounds for a "nickle" was highly pleasing to the passengers. They made their journey quicker than by the street cars, in the open air, and saw more of the city than when riding on the transit. The fare for the round trip is 10 cents.

The jitney is a paying venture according to Mr. Levesque, provided the people patronize it. It can make at least 20 round trips in the day and carrying seven passengers at a time one car would bring him $21 per day of ten hours, considering that he has no accidents, punctures or blowouts.

THE WAR TAX

The Post Office Department, having given notice a week or two ago in connection with the War Revenue Act, that all letters and postcards mailed in Canada for delivery in Canada, the United States or Mexico, and letters mailed in Canada for delivery in the United Kingdom and British possessions generally, or wherever the two cent rate applied, should in addition to ordinary postage carry a one cent stamp as a War Tax, and also having notified the public that such war tax, while it should be paid preferably by the postage stamp marked "War Tax," could, if such stamp were not available, be paid by an ordinary one cent postage stamp, is now issuing further notice to the effect that postage stamps may be used for the prepayment of war duties on bank cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, express money orders, proprietary or patent medicines, perfumery, wines or champagne, as well as upon letters and postcards, postal notes and post office money orders, the intention being to provide facilities in those portions of the country where the excise stamps are not readily available. This in view of the fact that postage stamps may be obtained at all points over the whole country, in many places where there is no Collector of Inland Revenue and no Inland Revenue stamps could be obtained, is a distinct convenience to the public, and no doubt will be largely taken advantage of.

NO FRAUD FOUND IN BOOTS ISSUED FOR CANADIANS

Parliamentary Committee Exhonerates Manufacturers From Blame in Report—Made up to Sample—Minority Report to be Presented Charging Bad Material and Specifications

OTTAWA, April 10.—The committee appointed by parliament to conduct an enquiry into the boots supplied the Canadian contingens placed its report upon the table of the commons last night.

The committee reports that the boots purchased after the war began were substantially according to the samples which were given to the contracting firms. A large number of condemned or discarded boots were examined by experts appointed by the committee and the following are their conclusions: Of a total of 1715 inspections there were 144 capable of being repaired, 112 were rendered useless by being burnt and 153 were unrepairable. The causes of the unrepairable boots were: 46 cut by toe nails, 22 cut by knife or spur and of the 83 remaining 68 had not been in the first place equal to sample. They were too light in the backs. The expert inspectors declared the sample to be a "good" boot and fully up to departmental specifications. Accordingly they made their findings, taking the sample as a standard.

Over Seven Thousand Condemned

The total number of boots condemned by the various military boards throughout Canada was 7,307 and of these 6,509 were repairable, 410 burnt, 319 mutilated by cutting and 379 useless owing to other causes.

In view of the fact that in the other months of training no regimental cobblers or dubbing has been provided by the department, the committee finds that the report of the experts, corroborates the view that the boots supplied by the manufacturer were substantially up to sample. The military boot adopted by the department about 15 years ago was similar to the present sample boot. This boot was used by Canadian soldiers in the South African War, where, according to the evidence of Sir William Otter, it proved satisfactory.

British Boot Too Heavy.

Both before and after the South African war the question of adopting the British boot was considered and rejected as being too heavy for wear in Canada. All the soldiers at Salisbury Plain on active service who appeared before the committee and gave evidence favored the Canadian boot, rather than the British boot, but it should be pointed out that the Canadian boot was not at first given a fair chance owing to the impossibility of providing each soldier with two pairs within the limited time. There was no opportunity for drying the one pair which were constantly on his feet, and in the haste of mobilization there were no facilities for making needed repairs.

The evidence shows that a heavy hob-nailed and inflexible boot will impede marching, weary the soldier, and bruise and blister the feet. Also a leather impervious to weather is also inpervious to ventilation.

The committee have come to the conclusion that for active service the sample boot would be improved by a second through sole, instead of a slip-sole, and suggests putting in more screws or nails or quilting the outer sole so as to protect it from wear, making it wider at the toe and protecting the heels by nails or other reinforcement. The committee said they are not surprised that the department did not depart from the sample, which for about 15 years had been approved by the Canadian Government, and which had given satisfaction at South Africa.

Order Filled Hastily

Immediately on the outbreak of the war the director of contracts received a requisition for 50,000 pairs of boots. A week later the contracts were let and the boots were to be delivered in six weeks, deliverance to start in ten days. Further orders were given in September and October. Three firms, Ames-Holden and McCready, Tressalt and Company and Louis Gauthier and Company, manufactured from the sealed samples, but in all other cases the contractors manufactured from the sample which they had made and which was approved of by the department. The samples were found in all cases equal to and in may cases superior to the departmental boot. The contracts were made directly with the manufacturer with the exception of 5,000 pairs which were authorized to be purchased locally at Winnipeg for the men in training there and 441 pairs purchased locally at Esquimalt.

No Commission to Agents

No commission was paid by the government to any middleman or agent. In one case the Gauthier Company made an agreement with Charles and Slater acting on behalf of Gauthier sold boots under this agreement. Slater had represented to the minister that he was a partner of Gauthier. The only material variations made from the contracts were substitution of side leather in some cases for winter or storm calf. This was permitted owing to the supply of storm calf leather having become exhausted.

The great urgency, especially at Valcartier, where the men were still forced to wear their worn out civilian boots prevented as critical and deliberate an inspection as might otherwise have been made, but there was no reason to assume that the boots delivered were any different from the remainder and the manufacturer did not know whether or not they would be inspected.

Not Good in Wet Weather

The boots in dry weather gave fair satisfaction, but when subject to drilling and marching in wet and slush without an opportunity for drying or dubbing they gave way more rapidly till the men were supplies with a second pair.

The committee are satisfied that no boots under the conditions at Salisbury Plain would remain water tight, yet the Canadian boots stood the test well. Col. Currie, M.P., commander of the 48th Highlanders, stated that the Canadian boot stood the conditions better than the British boot.

The committee comes to the conclusion that the standard British army boot is not a suitable boot for adoption as the standard army boot of Canada.

No Fraud Found

No paper or other fraudulent material was found in the construction of the soles or uppers of the boots.

A minority report will be presented to the house, which declares that negligence and want of care were shown in providing boots for the soldiers, and that the sample boots were inferior to the sealed pattern. The report alleges that the recommendation of Slater was made by the minister, and the responsibility is his. The inspection was unsatisfactory, and General Alderson is quoted as declaring that the boots were not suitable for the exceptional conditions at Salisbury Plain, also the cable from Sir George Perley recommending the English boot. In spite of these, no improvement was made.

A MATHEMATICAL TWISTER

"How much money have you got?" asked Willie, who had just added to his pocket money by selling a two-pound box of chocolates for a dollar.

"Half as much as Tom," replied Walter. "How much have you?"

"Well, I would have five times as much as I have," said Willie, "if I'd four times as much as you, supposing you had four times as much as you have."

Now, in order that there may be no mistake whatever over this little matter, let us make it clear that Tom had thrice as much as his sister would have had, had she possessed a quarter of the wealth of her cousin before her cousin spent a third of her pocket money by going halves with her best friend in buying the very box of chocolates which Willie had just sold.

How much money had Willie?

Why Willie had $1.80, of course. Figure it out yourself.

MAKING A LANGUAGE

Some Words and Phrases Change Meaning in Time—Others do Not

A long time ago when Latin was an everyday language used by plain folks as well as college students the word that meant "to go to the market" was—Ambord.

If a man had money he could "afford"; that is, he could go to the market place and buy fine raiment and food; if he had no money he did not go to the market; he did without things. The meaning of the word hasn't changed so very much. Only in these days sometimes "afford" whether they can afford it or not.

Just as dunce once meant a wise man, so it was once upon a time considered rather commendable to be silly.

But that was when the English language was just merging from its medieval to its modern form, and in those days words were not subject to the exceptional conditions at Salisbury Plain, also the cable from Sir George Perley recommending the English boot. In spite of these, no improvement was made.

FOUGHT AN OCTOPUS

Diver Had Tussle While Working on New Breakwater

An exciting fight under water with an octopus was the thrilling experience of one of the divers employed by a contracting firm of Victoria, B.C., when engaged in supervising the laying of the granite blocks which form part of the substructure of the breakwater at Esquimalt Point. In the vise like grip of the powerful tentacles of the octopus, the diver, handicapped to a great extent, but at the same time protected by the heavy diving suit and equipment, swayed about on the sea bed as he fought what at first appeared to be an unequal battle with the hideous fish creature of the sea. Using his knife to good advantage, the diver eventually succeeded in severing the tentacles which were tightening about his body and, giving the signal to the boat crew handling the air apparatus above, was quickly hauled to safety.

Responsibility

The most important point in selecting an automobile is to know the reputation of the Company—"Who is Behind It?"

New makes of automobiles come and go year after year.

Do not buy an "orphan" car, for which you may have difficulty in securing repair parts and service, after purchasing.

The question of service should be considered carefully.

Buy from a well-established company.

The McLaughlin Carriage Co., Limited, of Oshawa, is one of the oldest vehicle industries in Canada—built upon Canadian capital—in business for over forty-five years building high-grade carriages, and in the eighth year of automobile manufacturing.

This company has such an extensive organization that an owner can secure dependable service at any of the twelve branches conveniently located throughout Canada.

Every McLaughlin-Buick has the famous VALVE-IN-HEAD MOTOR, that is guaranteed to produce and deliver more power than any other motor of equal size of any make, and on a lower consumption of gasoline.

Six models ranging from $1,150.00 for a Runabout to $2,250.00 for the famous McLaughlin "Six."

Willard Refuses $25,000 For Bout

Declines to Meet Coffey in a Ten-Round Bout

BALTIMORE Md., April 10—Because he wanted to dodge some moving-picture people Jess Willard, the new champion heavyweight of the world, also dodged big roll of fight fans at Unico Station shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Florida special was over two hours late, but this did not deter the crowd, which grew in numbers as the minutes sped by.

The passengers from the express came upstairs and joined in the crowd to watch the champion step forth. They had no other alternative, for they found themselves hemmed in on all sides by a yelling mob of fight fans.

The last man came up the steps and still no Willard. Then slowly the fact dawned upon the waiting mob that the new champion had put one over on them. He had walked back and gone up the asphalt street steps where his party quickly jumped into waiting automobiles and were whisked to the Belvedere.

The reception given Willard at the Lyric last night was a frost, only about 600 being present in an auditorium that seats over 2,000. Willard gave an exhibition of boxing for three rounds with Walter Monohan, and, for a big man, he showed considerable speed. There were no calls for a speech; neither was the crowd ever-enthusiastic.

The champion will leave the city at 1 o'clock to-morrow morning in a special car on the Pennsylvania Railroad for Philadelphia, where he is scheduled to give an exhibition tomorrow. Later in the day he will go to New York city and show himself at night at the St. Nicholas Rink.

The moving pictures have been sent in bond to Montreal to be developed, and they will be ready for exhibition within five days. As to showing the pictures in this country, Curley added that this part of the program was up to the attorneys.

During the furnishing of information Billy Gibson offered Curley $25,000 if he would allow Willard to box Jim Coffey ten rounds in New York. Frazee spurned the offer.

Sink Oil Wells in Back Yards

Well Just Shot in a Policeman's Garden Yielding 20 Barrels a Day

WARREN, Pa., April 10.—Scenes of eighty years ago when 50 residents of the East Side made small fortunes drilling for oil in their back yards are being duplicated in the residential section of the West End where five wells have been shot this week all of which promise to be steady producers.

Patrolman Joseph Wilfong of the local police force, whose well was shot Friday afternoon in the rear of his home, declares it is a 20 barrel a day producer.

Two other wells which were shot yesterday belong to Edward Morrison.

and Johansen and Hutiberg. Both of them are making good showings. John Fox, another private citizen, today began drilling operations in the rear of his property at 1218 Pennsylvania Ave. West.

Pennsylvania crude has dropped to $1.30 per barrel, the lowest price in 10 years, but the amateur oil men care not a snap for that. They figure that oil sold at any price so long as it comes from their own property is so much easy money. Certain citizens residing in the West End are talking of invoking a borough ordinance, which forbids the transportation of nitro-glycerine within the limits of the city.

Jack Johnson Genuine Outcast

U. S. Refuses Passport and the Ex-Champion Is Debarred From European Countries

HAVANA, April 12—The future movements of Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight champion, continue to be uncertain. There are indications that he will be compelled to remain in Cuba for an indefinite length of time.

On Wednesday Johnson requested the American legation to issue a passport for him, alleging that this was to replace one provided by the American ambassador at London last September, which had been lost or stolen since the pugilist's arrival in Cuba. The secretary of the legation here issued the passport in the absence of William E. Gonzales, U. S. minister to Cuba, who disapproved of the action.

Mr. Gonsales demanded and received from Johnson the passport in question, whereby the action of the secretary of the legation was annulled. Further, the American minister received an order from Secretary of State Bryan to refuse a passport to the pugilist on the ground that Johnson is a fugitive from justice under the laws of the U. S. Johnson is now said to be debarred from entrance into virtually all European countries and, apparently, his only alternative is to remain here or attempt to reach some South American republic.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me very weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. So I had cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit.

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my housework with pleasure."—Mrs. J. F. LAMBORN, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

It is the medicinal, tissue building elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making, strengthening influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.

PREFER DEATH TO GERMAN TORTURE

British Prisoners are Almost Starved, Kicked in Stomachs and Guns Broken Over Backs—Sir Edward Grey Says Stories of Inhumane Treatment Recched Him From Reliable Sources

LONDON, April 20.—A white paper published last night, says the Daily News, gives the correspondence which passed between the English and German Foreign Offices through the United States Ambassador with respect to the treatment of British prisoners of war in Germany. It contains many "painful statements," according to the News, and the following is made by a French priest referring to the treatment of prisoners at Minden:

"The German soldiers kicked the British prisoners in the stomach and broke their guns over their backs. They forced them to sleep out in marshy places, so that many are now consumptives. The British are almost starved. And such as been their torture that others of them asked to be shot."

The testimony is quoted by Sid Edward Grey in a letter dated December 24th. Grey stated that information on the bad treatment of British prisoners had reached him from a variety of sources."

A Russian doctor, who had returned to Petrograd, after being detained three weeks near Ruhleud, said that British officers were treated worst of all, a lieutenant who was in charge.

A letter received by the Speaker of the House of Commons from a Frenchman known to him, contained this statement: "At Minden for a long time the prisoners were camped on marshy ground with no shelter."

Sir Edward Grey also quoted the statement of Major Vandalen, of the First Canerons, who escaped from the internment at Crefeld, the contents which have already been published.

Another report from an American states that the British prisoners were kept on a very short commons and there is a report giving details of the terrible conditions of the beds.

Doctor Smoke While Sick

A letter from the internment camp at Ruhleben says: "The officers utterly treat the prisoners with great brutality, even using personal violence. The men sometimes have not received a scrap of meat for a whole week. The ingredients of the soup seem to be to a great extent condensed stores. The sick walked all day, but no doctor came although he could be seen walking about the square for hours smoking cigarettes."

Sir Edward Grey complained on January 29 that the treatment of officers at Kavalier, Scharnhorst and Madgeburg was such "that there is danger of both physical and mental deterioration." There was some investigation at Ruhleben and since March 7 "a very important change has taken place in the food supply. The canteen has been dispensed with." Notwithstanding this, Sir Edward again complained on March 18 that information from a prominent official of the British Red Cross Society showed that prisoners in Germany "were being kept very short of food, if not starved."

On March 20 he wrote that a communication from the German Government revealed the fact that "there are female prisoners in the German detention camps."

The German reply to the complaint, says the Daily News, was long delayed and when they came were made of denials and excuses such as this, which the newspaper quotes: "It will certainly be admitted by every discriminating British inmate of the camp at Ruhleben that in the face of the attempt of his own Government to starve the German people the lift of fare offered is above all criticism."

A statement forwarded by the American ambassador on March 17, relating to a fund of $100,000 made available by the British Government for British combatant and non-combatant prisoners, says: "The (German) Foreign Office states that there are no objections to this distribution, but it cannot be used in any event for the purchase of tobacco, chocolate, bread or cake from the German and Austrian supplies."

"However, no objection is interposed to sending simple foodstuffs, if need, and so forth, to prisoners from home; but prisoners will not be allowed brexit in excess of the allotment which is the same as that of the German troops quartered among civilians. The allotted rations being adequate for Germans, they are adequate for prisoners, too, who cannot be permitted to live better than the population of the captor."

IN THE DRIFTWOOD

Flooded River Brings Precious Gift to Reunite Husband and Wife,

By MARGARET CAMERON.

John Benedict stood upon the bank of the whirling river, looking on the wreck of his home. His wife, Mary, stood at his side; but even in this extremity of affliction her hand did not seek his, and there was no sign that their common disaster had united them.

Things had not gone well with them during the three years that had elapsed since their marriage. He had been a clerk in St. Louis, and Mary was a school teacher. It was a boy and girl flirtation, followed by a boy and girl marriage; then, spurred by necessity and aided by the inheritance of a few hundred dollars, John had purchased a few acres in the flat lowlands of the western part of the state, where they had struggled almost from the beginning. It was the desperate struggle of the ant-hunger, seeking to maintain their hold upon the precious earth.

Gradually, under the influence of the hard and remitting toil, they had drifted apart. If Mary had had a child it might have brought them together. But because this was not denied to be they had grown to be almost strangers. Mary found the hard struggle intolerable and longed for people, people, intellectual life, such as she had been accustomed to; and John, long from dawn to dark in his battle with nature, hardly had any other life at all.

Then they ceased to hope for a child it seemed as though they must drift apart for ever. In fact they had spoken of a separation. At first tentatively, then hopefully, then eagerly, as something to be anticipated.

"You can have everything except the house and the land," John said to her. "I want to be free, as you do. I'll send you——"

"I don't want your money, John," she flashed out at him. "There isn't anything of yours I want—now. There was only one thing—love—and I don't want that any more."

They were to have separated that very day, John remaining there, Mary returning to St. Louis, to take up her work in the public schools again.

And then, a week before, the river began to rise. And soon came stories of the floods up the country that were carrying all before them, bursting through levees, overwhelming towns, sweeping away houses and churches and bridges. They were but driftwood floating upon the stream, and drowning thousands.

And finally the river rose, and Mary, forgetting for the time her own plans, stayed on by John's side and fought the floods with him. It was little she could do; but all along the banks men were building up the levees, hoping to dam back that roaring tide before it burst through into the fertile fields that they had won from the scrub-covered bottoms of the old watercharanole. And Mary, with a corps of devoted women, ministered to the savage, wearied, toiling men.

Then the worst happened; the river burst its banks, and, when the crest of the flood had passed, the little settlement was a matchboxes. Not a house was left standing. Only logs, shingles, and foundations remained. And down the stream poured the debris from a half dozen states on its wild career toward the Gulf of Mexico.

They stood side by side upon a little knoll and looked at the dull yellow ponds that covered their land. The land was there still but all the fruits of their works had been carried away. They looked into the turbid river, and then into each other's eyes.

"What are you going to do, John?" asked Mary.

"I'm going to move west," he answered. "And you?"

"I shall go back to St. Louis," she answered. "There is no use in my staying here now."

"No," he agreed.

Mary was to leave on the following morning. They were sheltered in the railroad depot nearby which accomodated the homeless sufferers; and stood just beyond the highest reach of the flood. On the next morning John set off at dawn. He could not resist the temptation to look once more at the ruin of his home; but he had not the heart to awaken Mary. When he left she quailed, scrolled closure it was with no intention of returning.

And Mary knew that. She had not slept that night. She had thought, although the long, sleepless hours, of that other ruin, their common life. Had she not also been to blame for that? She could have done much, she might have been more to John; entertainment, which she had repelled; times when she had let pride master her inclinations toward reconciliation. And John had not changed; only he had let material things creep up between their love and his own, and strangle it. Yet she could not bring herself to call him back. She watched his tall, bent figure pass out of the enclosure, and out of her life, as she thought.

Half an hour later he was back, his face ashme. She looked at him in amazement. He might have been another man—so, the old one, her lavish sweetheart who had so long been only a memory to her.

"Mary!" he called. "Come! No, put on your coat and shoes—your grip, I will carry it for you. Come—I'll show you!"

She accompanied him outside the squalid buildings to where the receding floods left a swampy stretch of earth. Here their farm had been, their house and growing crops, and now——

She started in amazement. A new house stood almost upon the spot of the old one. It was not a duplicate house—the house they had planned when they were first married, with small life. Firm and foursquare it stood, with its eight rooms, its neatly shuttered windows. And there, with all the gleaming knocker. Mary turned to John.

"It's mine, John. What does it mean? she asked.

He looked out at the receding river. "It is the river's gift to us," he answered.

Torn from its foundations, hundreds of miles away, in heaven only knew what region or state, even, it had been deposited there by the flood. It needed but two teams of oxen to place it upon the foundations of the old home. And it was theirs! For it could never be taken away. Probably those who had once owned it had died in the cataclysm. It was theirs, by heaven-sent right. For the river, wading like children through the swampy places. And, looking in, Mary agreed with wonder. For it was furnished, neatly, cheaply, but tastefully. There was a parlor, with its table and chairs; a living room; even the curtains swayed upon their rods. The river had borne it upon its breast as gently as a child.

And over the upper door is furnished, Mary," John suggested.

Suddenly she caught his hand in hers and reminded to him in remembrance. "Hush, John!" she whispered, listening intently. "Do you hear anything?" she added presently.

John had heard nothing except the soft lapping of the waves upon the river banks. But Mary's eyes were alight with a strange fire and her cheeks flamed and the hand that he held in his was trembling.

"What is it, Mary?" he asked stupidly.

Suddenly she dashed wildly up the steps of the stranded house, while John looked after her, wondering at the feverish excitement which had suddenly her usual composure. She disappeared inside, and almost immediately afterward she reappeared. Her hair was tumbling all over her face, upon her lips there played a

"D & A" or "La Diva" Corsets retailing at $2.50 are equal in style, material and workmanship to imported corsets costing $3.50 to $5.00; the duty and extra profit—for which you get nothing, explains the difference.
Quite aside from your natural wish to encourage Canadian workmen, it is worth your while, for the saving it involves—to buy a "D & A" or a "La Diva" Corset.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY
Condensed News Items for Busy Readers.

THUNDER STORM
This city and vicinity was last evening visited by a thunder storm the first of the season. The storm was not of a severe nature, but considerable rain fell, which was welcomed and no doubt did much good.

ACCOMPANIED THE REMAINS
Rev. S. J. Nelson, Mrs. F. Ashley, Mr. E. Landrey and Mrs. P. Landrey were in the city yesterday, and this morning accompanied to Bancroft the remains of the late Mr. F. Ashley, who died in this city.

FAILED TO FIND ADDRESS
A basket containing a quantity of butter and other produce purchased on the market was left in the police station on Saturday as the owner of same could not be found. Subsequently the owner reported the matter to the police station and recovered the missing basket.

ARRESTED AS DRUNKS
Four young lads of this city yesterday hired a horse and vehicle from a livery and drove to Trenton. Three were arrested for being drunk and disorderly, the fourth one escaping from the back of the vehicle and returned to this city on the midnight train.

CARS WITHOUT LIGHTS
The police last night detected no less than four automobiles which were being driven about the street after dark with no rear light lighted, which is contrary to law. The owners of the machines will no doubt have to answer before the magistrate for their neglect in complying with with the law.

DROVE TOO FAST
Before Magistrate Masson this morning an automobilist of this city was fined $1.00 and $3.50 costs for driving his car at a greater speed than specified by law. The accused, whilst admitting the offence, said he did not at the time consider he was going faster than 15 miles an hour along the street.

DETENTION CAMP
At the Agricultural Park a detention camp has been established in connection with the 39th Battalion and at present 29 soldiers are detained there. These, it is said, were subjected to a bacteriologist test to ascertain if they were carriers of disease, and it was ascertained they were, hence their detention. It is not anticipated that any will develop disease, but the precaution was taken to prevent same.

RESIDENCE BURNED.
At a few minutes before 4 o'clock this morning the fire brigade was called out to a residence on Station street. From some unknown cause a fire originated in a house occupied by Mrs. Sine, 103 Station street. Fortunately the blaze was extinguished before the building was much damaged, but considerable damage was sustained to the contents by water. Loss of contents is covered by insurance. The building is owned by Mrs. E. Asselstine and her loss is covered by insurance.

Despondency and the "Blues," usually the result of constipation, quickly succumb to Beecham's Pills. Sold everywhere in Canada. In boxes, 25c. and 50c.

BASEBALL
Bridge St., which ended in a win for Bridge St., with a score of 20 to 11. The second game was between the Springer Lock Factory and the Bankers, which was a very fast game from start to finish. In the first half, Springers found the basket more often than the Bankers and put up a score of 16 to 8, but in the last period the Bankers just made up their mind they were going to win and they did by a score of 32 to 28. Plain Commonsense

Dear Sir:
May I be permitted to address a few words of plain, every-day common sense to your readers? What is it that the citizens of Belleville most desire? Probably the answer of some would be a street railway, or a five-cent jitney service by motor. But the general reply would be health, happiness, and a reasonable proportion of wealth. If you have health, in most cases you will be happy, or ought to be, and if you have both health and happiness, it matters little whether you have wealth. As to health, some day when the soldiers parade watch the troops of lovely girls with their rosy cheeks, not powdered, but painted by nature, their bright eye, and coral lips; watch their rapid, elastic, graceful walk. The red blood a-coursing through their veins, stimulating every organ, just as nature intended. Then look at the hollow-eyed, pasty-faced, anaemic, dyspeptic, asthenic men and women you meet. What is wrong? They are poisoning themselves by overeating, lack of exercise, living in over-heated rooms, and living unnatural lives. What is the cure? Let them become members of the Bowling Club, and spend one or two hours on the green, each bright day, and they can throw their pink pills, stomach pills and nauseous drugs to the dogs, and (in many cases) become well and happy. The best medicines in the world are pure air and the active play of muscles, in the green you walk, run, roll the balls, and every muscle and organ is brought into action. The lungs quickly develop, and of course, the rich currents of the blood is directed to all parts of the body where nature intended it should go, and health will result. Not only dollars for the season, and you will prevent twenty-five or fifty dollars of your money going into the pockets of the doctors. God bless them! You would be happier, you'd pay, and save your money to pay for a trip to see Bill Sunday or to assist in sending a missionary to those misguided men, who need it the most—the Germans, or possibly you to patronize Griffin's or the Palace. You will meet pleasant, happy people, and you will have from competition just enough excitement and an abundance of exercise. Can any better course be suggested. There is not a city in Ontario with as poor a green as we have in Belleville, for the reason that we have not the money to make it anywhere near up-to-date. We want one hundred and fifty members in order to put the green in first class shape. If the citizens only knew what a privilege it is to have a well-kept green, they would respond in large numbers.

Illustrated Lecture On Consumption

Rev. J. H. Dyke, Field Secretary and Lecturer of the National Sanitarium Association, last evening addressed church services and a free illustrated lecture in the City Hall. There was a fair attendance of citizens present. The object of the address was to present the objects and claims of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Mayor Panter was present and previous to the lecture spoke a few words eulogizing the work of the Hospital and the good it was accomplishing.

Rev. Mr. Dyke then gave his address, which was profusely illustrated by lantern slides, which clearly showed consumption in its incipient stage and its progress upon the victim. Views of the Muskoka Hospital, dining hall and other buildings, were shown and explicitedly explained by the speaker.

At the close Mayor Panter on behalf of those present, expressed thanks to the speaker for the invaluable information he had imparted.

The meeting was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.
There were two very interesting City League basket ball games played on Saturday night. The first game was played between the Grand Trunk and Bridge St., which ended in a win for Bridge St., with a score of 20 to 11. The second game was between the Springer Lock Factory and the Bankers, which was a very fast game from start to finish. In the first half, Springers found the basket more often than the Bankers and put up a score of 16 to 8, but in the last period the Bankers just made up their mind they were going to win and they did by a score of 32 to 28. The schooner Grace M. Fiber cleared for Oswego Sunday afternoon for coal. Capt. Joe Fagan, master; Frank Smith, mate; Mr. Theo Jarvis, Mr. Wm. Sweet, and Mr. Joe Lanigher, cook, as a crew. This good vessel has been thoroughly overhauled during the spring, and is now in good shape for the summer trade, and is considered one of the best schooners on the lake.
The tug, Ray Staunton, arrived here Sunday morning from Kingston.
Last spring the bay was clear of ice on April 21st, and on that date the schooners, G. M. Fiber and Kerwatin cleared for Oswego, and the steam barge John Rolph passed down the bay. The schooner Fiber arrived here with coal on May 1st, and the steamer Belleville came in on May 3rd.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS
Coal mining rights of the Dominion, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory and a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 1,280 acres will be leased to one applicant.
Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.
In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.
Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.
The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.
The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.
For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.
The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Agency on certain conditions by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.
Duties—Six months residence in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.
In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may preempt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.
Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or preemption six months in each of three years; also 50 acres extra cultivated. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.
A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.
The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, stony or sandy land.
For map of Dominion Lands showing open districts and other information apply to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta.

MONOTONY REIGNS IN PARIS' SUBURBS

Gay Little Villas Closed up in Many Cases—Men at Front, Women Work Hard

Life in the suburbs of Paris in wartime is described by a correspondent of the London Times who usually writes on the fashions, but in this case finds another topic of timely interest.

The Paris suburbs are very melancholy just now, she says. All the young men have gone away and all gaiety is in abeyance. Many of the fantastic villas are closed. From each house one man has gone and from many several, for large families are not unusual in the suburbs. The women and children, left alone, have to some cases found life unendurable, and have put away their household goods, closed their shutters, and gone back to the mothers, or the father's home in the provinces.

The closed houses only accentuate the loneliness of those which remain open, and nowhere is there any air of normal life. The days pass in quiet monotony; all work and no play is the rule, and it is not unusual for the mistress of the house to find herself charged, not merely with the care of the family, but also with the responsibility of her husband's business. This, with the superation of her children's education, is no mean task and with the added anxiety for the men in danger or the cruel certainty that death has passed, the already serious middle-class Frauchwoman has become yet more serious.

In some of the suburbs the question of the household marketing has become quite a weighty one, for not only are things expensive, but they are more difficult to get than in the centre of the city. The butchers have been municipalised, and the cooks and housewives have to get the day's supplies before mid-day from the one and only authorised butcher. They are finding the prices very much higher.

The middle classes in the suburbs suffer much from the increased cost of living and the stagnation in business. Many of them have but few savings and some have none. Where the men of the family have gone and business has stopped, misery is left behind, and it is not easy for people of this class to join the working woman and apply for State grants and soup at the Mairie.

Even when there is no war, there is not much haphazard visiting in the Paris suburbs, for no class in France is less given to the conventionality than the middle classes which inhabit those fantastic little villas. Neighbors have no claims on each other, and only family or very old friendship opens the front door. Each family, with its own particular little circle of friends, has no social ambitions beyond those to which it was born. The older women have renounced their shopping expeditions, their theatre parties followed by a little supper at a restaurant, the girls have given up their cinemas, their singing lessons and their dancing, and all are knitting or crocheting as hard as they can. Even the children try to do something for the soldiers, and many of them have sent toys to the refugee children. Red Cross nurses come from many of these quaintly constructed houses, and boy scouts over-run them in the holidays.

The Collision Mat

The collision mat, which is carried by all warships, is a very valuable part of the vessel's equipment and often prevents a ship sinking when she has been badly hit by the enemy.

The mat varies in size from 10 to 16 feet square and is made of sail cloth into which has been interwoven a number of "thrums," or pieces of tarry hemp, closely knit together.

In case of the vessel being damaged by shells or collision the mat is lowered and held over the hole by the ropes which are attached to it.

The pressure of the water forces the mat closely over the gap and thus temporarily stops the leak till it can be closed from within.

When Poland Drank Hard

Poland was a great country for hard drinking in the olden days. Its last king, Stanislaus II., was solemnly elected by the Grand Diet—an honor which he must never expect to become popular unless he got drunk at least once a week. The Kosciuszko Club, which could empty a bucketful of champagne in a night without any noticeable consequence, once in company with Paul Potemkin, the Czarina Catherine's favorite, disposed of a whole butt of old Hungarian wine at a single sitting. One, held the beaker under the bung hole until it was filled and then drank while the other filled his beaker; and so, turn and turn about, they achieved the feat.

Tommy's Good Heart

It is quite a common sight to see a homeless little child marching along beside its mother, munching a large piece of bread-and-jam, while its mother carries a tin of bully beef given to her by Tommy Atkins, says a letter written by Corporal Giles, R.A.M.C., to his mother. I have known numbers of men—myself included—who have gone without food for a day, or days, on purpose to cheer some homeless refugee. The people every where adore the British Tommy. Corporal Giles was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal by King George personally.

Landen's Alien Enemies

When the war broke out, and the registration of aliens was completed, there were no fewer than 4,986 alien enemies employed in the hotels of London.

The entire white population of the British Empire is less than the population of the German Empire, and rather larger than that of Japan.

Turning to look, Jack Johnson was not turned to a pillar of salt, but he got something quite as effective.

Philadelphia, usually regarded as a slow-going and non-progressive city, is up-to-date in one respect. That city is in touch geography by moving pictures. Certain European geography cannot be taught in any better way. But the films will need to be changed every other day.

Holland fears that the Germans are planning to attack that country, no doubt recalling Belgium.

COALING A WARSHIP

Competition Between Crews Makes Sport of "and Dirty Work"

Although the exigencies of war may demand that a vessel shall be coaled at sea, this indispensable duty is almost invariably carried out in port. A super-Dreadnought of 27,600 tons displacement, and with maximum steaming speed of 23 knots, requires for its regard to fuel. Speed is vital to a warship nowadays, and the price for this speed must be paid. When, therefore, that, under ordinary working conditions, a super-Dread nought, such as the Kongo or the Princess Royal," will consume a round 1,000 tons of coal during the twenty four hours—approximately the time every one and a half minutes—one is able to obtain some faint" idea of the fuel bill which the British Empire has to be prepared to face every year to keep its fleet is being.

"Coaling ship" is the direst operation in the round of toil upon a warship, but Jack is irrepressible. To him coaling ship is a jolly (and decidedly filthy) although the lively divided labor, permitting the maximum of crack and crevice of the quarters; and there is "dogs the pores of the skin, finds its way to the lungs, and threatens asphyxiation every succeeding moment; and although it entails collisions between various parts of the physical anatomy and unyielding parts of the ship, is merely sport.

Why call it sport? This is the objections questing of the unlimited Jack and he will tell you the reason —he is out to establish a record. The crew of one of his Majesty's superdreadnoughts is rowing for a wager over the fact that they took in a 1,000 tons of coal "a three hours something —an unprecedented achievement. Incidentally the crew of every other vessel in the navy is on its mettle. It will lower that record by hook or by crook.

When the crew is piped to "coal ship" the first and imperative preliminary is to clear the guns in every coats, fasten down all hatches, and to make the living quarters as tight as a drum against the pervading coal dust. When the command to commence is given the Tars buckle into their sack with a zest which is amazing. The "bagged," they shoulder aboard, and the sacks disappear to be discharged into the bunkers in a never-ending stream.

It is somewhat strange to observe the extent to which the cure consumption, even among sister ships, varies. Some vessels will coal more than others—"coal-ey tera" the expert calls them. Thus the original Dreadnought of 21-21 knots devours fuel greedily at slow speed. On the other hand, when under full power she is economical, and when the engines are developing 5,000 horsepower, which is adequate to give a speed of 12 knots, the consumption is about one ton every eleven min. At double the horse-power a ton of fuel disappears into the furnaces every five and a half minutes; when at full speed, some 400 tons of coal has to be shovelled every three and a half minutes. "Princess Royal" and "Lion," displacing 26,350 tons and having a speed of 28 knots, consuming on the same under ordinary conditions, approximately 40 tons per hour, double the rate of the Dreadnought and one of the furnaces of the "Tigers" of the Central Fleet may be gathered from the fact that it takes a round 600 tons to lay her fires.

SCARLET FEVER

Look Upon Sore Throats With Suspicion and Take Precautions

Like diphtheria this disease is "caught" by direct contact: also by breathing in the air infected by the coughing and sneezing of sufferers.

The "peeling" in scarlet fever is not nearly as "catching" as the sore throat in the beginning of that disease.

Children with scarlet fever should be kept apart from others until the skin is clear and all discharges from the nose and ear have stopped.

There are mild forms of scarlet fever, the same as of diphtheria; but you can "catch" the disease severely and even fatally from a mild case.

Take no chances. A child with only a sore throat and slight symptoms may be the means of spreading dangerous infection.

Never neglect a sore throat. The discharges from the mouth or throat of a patient should be collected on suitable cloths and burned.

Destroy all the food taken from the sick room. Bedding, clothing, and other exposed objects ought to be disinfected.

CITY AND VICINITY

AUCTION SALE

At residence of W. S. Nicol, Charles St. 22d. Household effects, Wednesday April 14th, 1 o'clock sharp. D. J. Fairfield, Auctioneer. 11

There is not much use in ruminating on the past, except for the recovery of a scarlet fever patient. But plenty of soap and water—and elbow grease —should be used.

Head nature's flumigators—sunshine and fresh air—should be called in to do their most blessed work.

There is nothing in all those yarns about catching scarlet fever by sleeping in a room where somebody had the disease several generations ago.

The germ can't live any more than a day or so outside the body of the person who has had the disease.

THE LITTLE LAD'S CLOTHES

Why It Pays to Cut Down His Father's Garments

Mother blames Bobby for wearing out his clothes in a month or two when they should last six months. Father contends that his suits last him a year. Why not Bobby's?

By leaving out the question of baseball in the back lot and the havoc wrought by nails, there is another reason why father's clothes wear long and Bobby's. The material is better.

Because of the better material in father's suits, it pays to make them over for Bobby.

There are excellent patterns for little trousers—it is extra trousers that are always needed—and in a couple of hours at most for Bobby may be cut out, basted, tried on, sewed up, pressed and tailor seamed.

STREET IN BRITISH NAVAL STATION WRECKED

Many Lives are Lost at Lerwick, Chief Town in the Shetland Islands by Terrible Explosion—No Details are Forthcoming

ABERDEEN, Scotland, April 13.—(Special)—The Free Press publishes the following telegram from Lerwick: "A terrible explosion has occurred. Harbord street was wrecked and many lives were lost."

No details are obtainable as yet.

Lerwick is the principal town in the Shetland Islands. It is 242 miles from Edinburgh and 56 miles from Kirkwall. Its population was 4,281 in 1901. The harbor can afford accommodation for an immense fleet.

The town is situated on Brassay Sound, and is the most northerly town in the British Isles. It is a depot for the naval reserves. There is an old fort in the town, but the docks, wharves, etc., are modern and extensive.

The Shetland Islands are in the North Sea, to the northeast of Scotland. Considerable naval activity occures in this vicinity, which is a point in the guarding of the North Sea against the escape of the German fleet.

Rumors of a naval battle in the North Sea have persisted for several days past, and it is just possible this report may refer to an engagement.

RUSSIAN AS GERMAN SLAVE

Has Captured by French Troops Tells Tales of Hardships

PARIS, April 12.—Russian prisoners as "slaves" behind the German lines in France is the latest "atrocity", according to the Journal, which says:

"On the Oise front we recently captured a hostile trooper whose uniform seemed unfamiliar. Conducted to the Captain, he could not reply to questions in German, but put his hand in his heart and cried, 'Rouski! Rouski!'

"The equivocal surprise, speaking in Russian, discovered that he was a Russian soldier who had been captured at Czenstochowa. He was sent to a German concentration camp and then transferred to France with 400 comrades and forced to work under armed guards. They were shockingly treated and many were killed. Heart's cannon he determined to escape in the French lines."

The Journal states that subsequent injuries appeared to corroborate his story.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLINE FOUND

OTTAWA, April 12—After a decade of experimenting at Hull, Que., a scientist claims he has found a substitute for gasoline and at a test before several officials of the Public Works Department Saturday, two tablespoons full of liquid, mixed with two quarts of water, proved sufficient to run a two and three-quarter horsepower engine for an hour and a half without stopping. The discoverer, who is Mr. Gideon Charbonneau of Hull, claims he will be able to manufacture the liquid, which he calls "Charbonil" in any quantity at four cents per gallon. The liquid does not give off any smoke and the inventor asserts it will revolutionize the auto and other industries.

Raider Gets Time

Kron Prinz Wilhelm Gets "Reasonable Period" from Washington

WASHINGTON April 13.—The Treasury department today received from the commander of the German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which arrived at Newport News, Va., yesterday, a request for a reasonable period to decide how much time will be asked for to make repairs. The request will be granted.

The German raider Kron Prinz Wilhelm will put to sea again just as soon as necessary repairs can be made, according to Commander Thierichs.

CEMENT DIVIDEND

Regular Quarterly Payment Will be Declared This week

Directors of Canada Cement will meet here this week and it is understood the regular quarterly dividend of 1 3-4 per cent. on the preferred stock will be declared. No company will go on record, particularly a Canadian industrial at a time like the present, as to what its dividend policy will be six months hence. However, interest close to the company believe that any doubts about the stability of the dividend have been removed by the fact that business has held up much better than expected.

HEARD OWN DEATH ANNOUNCED AT MASS

MONTREAL, April 12.—To hear his death announced at early mass was the experience of V. Laforest, of 269 Laval avenue, yesterday. The announcement was made by the Rev. O. Lesage, owing to a misunderstanding. It was Mr. Laforest's neighbor, A. Dorais, who had died suddenly.

The news was taken to the vestry early in the morning, and, owing to similarity in the sound of the names it was understood that Mr Laforest had died.

Old Liberal Party: "All that cackle, and no policy eggs!"

NOTE—While Sir Wilfrid and the Liberal party opposed and obstructed the Government's war tax proposals on the pretext that the poor man was discriminated against, the British Preference interfered with and the privileged classes protected, they offered no alternative proposition, thereby admitting their inability to formulate any war tax measures, which would be more effective.

Canadians Again In The Trenches

After Two Weeks' Rest are Doing Full Share of Front Line Fighting

LONDON, April 12.—After two weeks rest the Canadians marched back to the trenches, and are now doing their full share of the fighting. Snipers are the chief annoyance. An officer just back says they have steel protected loopholes that automatically close immediately a shot is fired. Their rifles are also equipped with telescopic sights. The same officer says that the Germans are seriously worried over Neuve Chapelle.

Nearly every night the Canadians hear the steady tramp of moving troops. Machine guns are turned on them without effect. Several times Canadian patrols have clashed with the Germans at night in the open. Individual duels resulted, only bayonets, and clubbed rifles being used because shooting would draw the fire from both trenches. There are few of these fights because the German patrols usually run from the Canadians.

Colonel Bonner is now on the headquarters staff in place of Col. Heard. It is officially stated here that all the general officers get a few days leave in turn.

Fifty factory girls have been sent to the front and the Canadians are organizing teams.

MOTHER SUES "MOVIE" CO

Says Bombs in a Play Burned Her Two Sons Severely

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., April 12.—Mrs. Mary J. Condon of New Rochelle, as guardian of her two sons, William and James, aged 17 and 14 years, respectively has brought suit in the Supreme Court against the Thanhouser Film Corporation for $50,000 damages for injuries to her boys, which, she alleges, were due to the negligence and carelessness of the defendant's employes, and which have disfigured them for life.

According to the complaint the company was enacting a scene in a vacant lot in the rear of the studios at New Rochelle on the evening of April 1, which attracted the Condon boys. Explosive bombs were thrown in the air and at them dropped in a manhole containing other bombs which caused a violent explosion burning the boys badly.

MAN HAS FIRST BATH IN 20 YEARS

MANDAN, N.D., April 12.—"It's beyond me. I never saw anything like it; that must be healthy dirt," said William Brown, orderly at the Mandan Hospital, as he dropped into a chair to rest.

He had just finished giving Mike Keating, aged 101, the first bath Keating had had in nearly twenty years.

Keating came to North Dakota in 1875, and was once well-to-do. He lost his property by fire and for years has been living alone in a little shack. It will now be cared for by the county.

1,200 Men Are After 200 Jobs

Interesting Scene in Capital City When Work Calls for Employees

OTTAWA, April 13—It looked like a riot this morning when 1,200 of the unemployed went after the 200 jobs that were provided by the Department of Railways and Canals on the Rideau canal at Bronson avenue. There was a clerk of the works there, ready to hand out the slips to the hundred men entitling them to get tools and go to work but the flood of 1,000 workers surged over him and he was helpless.

The men were not rioting, each one of them was just anxious to be among the fortunate ones who were to get the job. A policeman was summoned but she among so many was of little assistance and other representatives of law and order were brought up. The reserves managed to maintain some semblance of order and the tools for two hundred men were quickly served out. There were all kinds among the applicants. The majority of them were skilled laborers, but there were many mechanics who had come to look for a job at their own trade. Failing at this they cheerfully took a pick and shovel and started out to earn a day laborer's pay.

The work has been started at Bronson avenue, where the new concrete for the bed of the canal as far as Bank street. There is an appropriation of $20,000 to be spent on the work and the money will be divided between as evenly as possible. The men who did not get jobs this morning are promised that they will have a better chance in the fresh gang that will be put to work. The ones working this morning will have to lay off next week to let the others in. It is planned to keep the water out of the canal until the south of May and by that time a little over the half of the men looking for jobs will have got one week's work apiece.

G. T. P. WALL COLLAPSES

Portion of New Transcontinental Shops at Quebec Falls

QUEBEC, April 12.—In the course of last night a portion of the brick walls on the largest of the trans-continental shop buildings collapsed, it is said at the same time dropping a shower pouring in between the unfinished roof and the brick wall.

The bricks fell from the top downwards, making a gap fifty feet wide by over one hundred feet long, while the adjoining brick work is left loose over quite a considerable surface. Fortunately for all concerned, outside of the fallen bricks serious damage was done either to the other walls, or to the steel structure.

DIES IN 107TH YEAR

UXBRIDGE, Ont., April 12.—Michael O'Neil, a native of Ireland, died here today, aged 107 years. He had been a resident of this district for seventy years, died here today, in his 107th year. He had been a wonderful vigorous man, never sick, a simple liver, and retained his mental faculties to the last. He was honest and God-fearing, and raised a large family, many of whom he outlived. The citizens of the town celebrated his 106th birthday last June.

MANY BRITISH WARSHIPS ON BELGIAN COAST HIT

LONDON, April 13.—Special—Nearly all the British vessels that have taken part in bombardment of the German positions on the Belgian coast have been damaged by the return fire of the German artillery, it is admitted in an official Admiralty statement yesterday. It considers reports of Rear-Admiral Horace L. A. Hood, commander of the British fleet in Belgian waters.

Freed the Wrong Man From Prison

Now the Officials are Trying to Locate the Thomas Riley Who Was Not Entitled to Freedom

OTTAWA, April 13—(Special)—The Canadian Government has released the wrong killer. The records contained it this afternoon. Now there is official consternation. Similarity of names and a clerical mistake caused justice to nod.

Thomas M. Riley, who, a year ago, was given a fifteen-year sentence for manslaughter for killing a bartender in London, recently gave his thanks to a London clergyman for efforts made to secure his release. The clergyman had made no such efforts, and his surprised inquiries showed that the wrong man was freed. It develops that the Canadian Government decided to grant a pardon to Thomas Riley, who two years ago was given a seven years term for killing his wife in Hamilton. His condition of health and extenuating circumstances connected with the case led to the wrong man's killed his Government to this decision.

The Department of Justice recommends clemency to the Government, and the Government through the State Department passes on the recommendation to the Governor-General for his signature.

It appears that the circumstances of the case and the description of the man's age, place of conviction, etc., which should be given in the petition, were those of the prisoner from Hamilton. But in some way the letter "M" had been put into the name, which made it that of the prisoner from London. Therefore, instead of being Thomas Riley it was Thomas M. Riley. The name and the description sent in the usual course to the State Department, and following traditional practice the State Department made an order for the release of the prisoner by name only, omitting the description. The penitentiary officials, therefore, had nothing to guide them but the name, and they released Thomas M. Riley, late of London, now of Missouri.

A new pardon will be made out for the Hamilton Thomas Riley.

An effort will be made to have the Thomas M. Riley extradited from the United States and put back to complete his sentence. However, the officials at the Department of Justice have little hope that this will succeed, not being certain that they could return Thomas M. Riley to Kingston even if they could be taken by virtue of clemency of the Crown, once granted, is not often withdrawn, even for mistaken identity.

German Official Rebuked by Turk

Refused to Hand Over Archives to Kaiser—Obeys Only Sultan

BUENOS AYRES, April 13.—(Special)—A controversy has arisen between the German charge d'affaires, Herr Von Lucius, and the Turkish consul-general, Emir Emin Arslan Bey. The German charge sent a note to the consul-general requesting him in the name of the German Government at once to hand over to the charge the archives of the consulate, together with the furnishings. The Turkish consul indignantly refused, and on the German charge insisting, the consul returned the note to him, saying that he obeyed only the sultan.

BOMBARDED TURKISH CAMP

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 13.—The Minister of Marine issued the following statement today: "Yesterday a British ship in conjunction with French seaplanes bombarded an important Turkish encampment in the neighborhood of Gaza.

Gaza is in southern Palestine near the Egyptian frontier. The Turkish encampment near the city may have been established in connection with the advance of the Turkish troops across the Sinai Peninsula to the Suez Canal.

TWO HUNDRED ENDANGERED

(Canadian Press Special)

CHICAGO, April 13.—The lives of two hundred convalescent patients at the Chicago State Hospital for the insane at Dunning were endangered today when fire destroyed the frame annex in which they were lodged. The fire drill worked without a hitch, however, and no panic prevailed in the building or among the 2,800 patients

SCRUTINEERS GO TO THE FIRING LINE

Three to be Nominated by Premier and Three by Laurier—Bill Vitally Changed—Soldiers in Canada Will Mark Ballots at Respective Camps

OTTAWA, April 13.—(Special.)—When the house resumes consideration of the soldiers' vote bill tomorrow it will be confronted by practically a new measure so far as details are concerned. One of the most striking changes relates to the sending of scrutineers to supervise the voting at the front. This section reads as follows:

"There shall be appointed by the governor in council six scrutineers, three to be so appointed upon the nomination of the prime minister and three upon the nomination of the leader of the opposition; one representing each party may be present at the distribution of ballot papers and envelopes, the making of affidavits, the marking of ballots, the closing of envelopes, the posting of the same, and may exercise all the rights which may under the Dominion Elections Act be exercised by candidates of their representatives at any poll. The actual travelling and living expenses of such scrutineers, at a rate to be fixed by the governor in council, may be paid out of the consolidated revenue fund. The legality of any proceeding shall not be affected by the absence therefrom of the scrutineers.

Voting in Canada

A returning officer will be provided for each camp, who will also issue a proclamation announcing the coming election. The proclamation will also be repeated in the general orders of the commandant. Each volunteer will then notify the camp returning officer in which electoral district he is entitled to vote. It may be that in one camp fifteen or twenty ridings will be represented by volunteers. The returning officer will therefore appoint for each riding, so far as the camp is concerned, will be conducted at a separate polling place.

The names of the candidates in each riding will be communicated to the camp returning officer by telegraph on nomination day, and proper tickets will be printed and furnished the various deputy returning officers. The volunteers will cast their ballots under all the safeguards and formalities which prevail in the ordinary election. The results of each riding will be wired telegraphed at once to the returning officer for the proper electoral district.

If the volunteer is living within the limits of the polling subdivision in which he is entitled to vote he will not vote at the camp.

Destroyed House Held by Enemy

Situation in a General Sense Unchanged Throughout The Past Week

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 13.—The situation on the British lines in France remained unchanged throughout the week, says a semi-weekly report received from the British army headquarters and given out today by the Official Press Bureau. The report continues:—On the morning of April 9th we successfully exploded a mine in the neighborhood of Givenchy, and as a result the loophole walls of a house held by the enemy were destroyed. Twenty-nine dead Germans were counted.

The enemy replied by bombarding our positions but without inflicting any damage. Early on the morning of April 7th the Germans exploded two mines on our right but failed to damage our trenches. Similarly a harmless explosion took place opposite our left on the evening of the 9th.

Fatal Explosion at Lerwick

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 13.—The fatal explosion at Lerwick yesterday was the result of a fire, according to recent despatches reaching London. Considerable property was wrecked and four men and one boy lost their lives. No further details have been received.

Hague Convention Again Violated

Germans Give Little Heed to Treaties in Their Mode of Sea Warfare

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 13.—The French Minister of Marine declares that the Germans have violated the Hague convention in their sea warfare.

Article 1 of the eighth Hague Convention provides that torpedoes are to carry an automatic attachment which will cause them to sink if they do not explode. German torpedoes recently discovered in the English Channel, although unexploded, were still floating. Examination showed that the submersion appliance had been tightly sealed, permitting them to float on the surface of the water. This made them into floating mines.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR SEALER CREW

ST JOHNS, Nfld., April 12.—A report from Greenspond of a sealing disaster, in which about 175 hunters perished on the ice floes, was narrow avoided yesterday, when 150 men from the steamer Neptune were rescued from the floes by the Florizel, according to a wireless despatch from the latter steamer today. The hunters had been caught in a blizzard on Saturday and were adrift on the floes all night.

It's not long to April 15th. That's the day we commence using "war" stamps.

WAYFARER BLOWN UP NO LIVES ARE LOST

QUEENSTOWN April 12—(Special) The Harbour Tug steamer Wayfarer is on her way to this port in tow of the steamer Framfield. She was badly damaged by an explosion Sunday while off the Scilly Islands. Late last night the Wayfarer was thirteen miles off Queenstown harbor, and it was expected that several hours would elapse before she reached port.

The first report that the Wayfarer had been struck by a torpedo was erroneous. It is reported that her rudder was blown away by a torpedo or mine, and consequently there is much difficulty in navigating her. According to the latest information no lives were lost.

Falmouth, April 13—Survivors of the steamer Wayfarer, who have been landed here, say that shortly after 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, when about thirty miles off the Scilly Islands, as passengers and crew were about to undergo a lifeboat practice a terrific explosion occurred deep down seemingly in the steamer's hold. No submarine was seen either before or after the explosion, and it could not be said whether the explosion was caused by a mine or a torpedo.

Orders were immediately given for the launching of the boats, but owing to the choppy sea the operation of getting the boats away was a hazarous one. The men at the oars pulled for about two hours, the boat being in continual danger from the high waves, but finally a big collier was sighted, and the boats reached her after a hard struggle.

Later 120 men were transferred from this collier to the Newlyn, and the collier then took the Wayfarer in tow for Queenstown.

The British steamer Wayfarer was 505 feet long, and registered 4,232 tons. She was built in Belfast in 1903, and was owned in Liverpool. She left Galveston January 27 for Liverpool, where she arrived February 17.

All articles and notes under this head are passed by the commanding officer of the 39th Regiment and authentic in every particular.

BELLEVILLE

Captain Gardiner, A.D.M.S., at Kingston, left for Belleville at noon, for the purpose of looking over the sanitary arrangements of the 39th Battalion, Lt.-Col. Duff in charge of the office until the Captain returns.

Up to today there had been 222 who have enlisted with the 49th Regiment of Hastings County. Yesterday four were added to the strength, namely J. D. Foote, aged 26 years, from Brighton; S. Wellman, aged 18 years from Trenton, M. Fowler, aged 22 years from Bangor, Ireland, and J. Reddin, aged 23 years, whose home is in Scotland.

A number of the members of the 39th Battalion were today subjected to a bacteriologist test to ascertain if they were carriers of disease.

The annual meeting of the 39th Battalion Association will be held in the Drill Hall on Thursday evening next, when officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

At the old No. 2 school building on Catherine street, a few of the members of the 39th Battalion are being quartered as carriers of disease.

New Explosive Causes Paralysis and Death

Fearful Toxic Effect of Turpinite Being Used by French Army

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(Special)—Considerable interest is manifested in preliminary reports from across the Atlantic regarding the terribly destructive effect of the new explosive turpinite, which the French army has begun to use in regular service operations after exhaustive experiments. According to the French official statements, the explosive, which has already been referred to in despatches, is at least double the strength of the most powerful explosive now in use in the other armies. In addition to the increased efficiency of shells charged with this explosive, resulting from the vastly greater field of action of the pieces of the shell after it explodes, it is said to have a fearful toxic effect, causing complete paralysis of certain parts of the body, and bringing certain death within fifty yards of the point of explosion.

So far the new explosive is being used only in the three-inch field guns, and the British and French arsenals are reported to be working day and night on its manufacture.

Casualties Among Canadian Forces

OTTAWA, April 13.—(Special.)—The casualties among members of the Canadian Overseas Force announced by the Militia Department this morning are as follows:

2ND BATTALION

Wounded—Private M. K. Kubarchuk, (formerly of 9th Battalion), on March 30. Returned to regimental duty April 8. Next of kin, Pete Volynuk, Covel, Russia.

NO. CANADIAN GEN. HOSPITAL

Death—Private Edward Curtin, April 11, at Salisbury Infirmary, with jaundice. Next of kin, Daniel Curtin, 514 Talbot street, London, Ont.

One casualty was announced yesterday.

5TH BATTALION

Seriously ill—April 13, Private Kenneth Eaton, acute mastoid. Next of kin, Mrs. R. W. Eaton, Kentville, N.S.

Among those reported wounded in the casualty list published yesterday is Robert Trobe Douglas, a slaughter of the Belleville Electrical Engineers. He was an employee of the Bell Telephone Company and attached to the North Eastern Ontario trunk avenue. He formerly boarded on St. Mary's Street, but at the time of the outbreak of the war was single in his land. He had been in the employ of the Telephone Company four years. Before coming to Toronto he was with a New York telephone company. His home is 6 Glenburn Terrace, Rowland Gill, Durham, England. He served three years with the Newcastle Royal Engineers' volunteers.

7TH BATTALION

Wounded—Pte. Allan William Anderson, Sutton West, Ont. Severe wound in the arm.

LONDON, April 13.—A casualty list issued today of further losses in the fighting last month at Ypres-near Chapelle is much smaller than those given out previously. It totals 295 men, 119 killed and 176 reported wounded.

This seventh list now raises given out by the British authorities on the Neuve Chapelle battle brings the total of casualties reported to 7,835 men, of whom 2422 are killed.

Gen. Huerta Now In New York

NEW YORK, April 13.—Special—General Victoriano Huerta, the exiled President of Mexico, arrived here late yesterday from Spain on board the steamer Antonio Lopez.

General Huerta was permitted to land after he had taken oath before the immigration authorities that he was not going to either Mexico or Cuba, and had stated that his stay in this country will be divided between business and pleasure, and that he would no nothing to violate the neutrality of the country.

There are persistent rumors, however, that Huerta's real mission here is to prepare for a fresh invasion of Mexico. He is known to have had a conference recently with wealthy Mexican refugees in Paris, and is believed to have a message from Don Porfirio Diaz, the former President, as to plans for restoring the old regime at Mexico City.

Should the anti-Iron power was, it will be remembered, due to his refusal to salute the United States flag when the marines landed at, and the American occupation of Vera Cruz.

Austria Breadless Within a Month

ROME, April 13.—Special—Emperor Francis Joseph has been conferring almost daily with Baron Burian, Count Tisza and Count Stuergk. These conferences are undoubtedly connected with the increased danger and the prospects of Italian intervention. The reserve stock throughout the Empire is only sufficient for one and one-half months' consumption as the Government has been compelled to supply bread to Germany as a provision for troops sent to Austria. These reinforcements have made additional drain on the resources and it is seriously feared that the Empire will be breadless within a month.

The other day a man employed in a distillery fell into a vat of whiskey and was drowned. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict. "Died in good spirits."

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

VICTIM OF A STROKE

Mrs. Joseph Pagan, who resides on South George street, was yesterday the victim of a paralytic stroke which fortunately was not of a serious nature.

DEATH OF AGED LADY

Mrs. Margaret Fraser, aged 87 years and 7 months, died yesterday from the township of Thurlow, from senility. Deceased was a widow and had lived in Thurlow Township for many years. She was a daughter of the late Mr. Simeon Ashley of Thurlow, and was born in that township.

BUSINESS PLACE BURGLARIZED

Some time during last night M. Pappas' place of business on Front street was entered and a sum of money, about $25, was taken, also some cigars. An entrance to the premises was effected through a window in the rear of the premises. The burglary was reported to the police, who are making every effort to ascertain who committed the offence.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Cannill A. Rutan, D.D.G.M. of Maiden City Lodge, No. 13, Bellcville, has gone to Deseronto to pay an official visit.

Prof. Wheatley went to Trenton this afternoon, where he will this evening render instrumental selections for the Choral Society of that town.

Mr. W. M. Barlow of this city, who has been ill with La Grippe in Toronto for some days, is improving and will return home in a few days.

Use Lacrosse Sticks for Hurling Hand Grenades

Canadian Troops Discover Accurate and Less Risky Method of Operation

LONDON, April 13.—(Special)—The Canadian troops at the front have discovered a novel use for lacrosse sticks namely, throwing hand grenades into the German trenches. They are able in this way to throw them further, more accurately and with less risk than otherwise.

Over 500 sticks have been purchased to try out the scheme.

Thirty men from the Patricia, invalided home from the front, arrived at Folkestone yesterday. Most of these are suffering from some attacks of rheumatism. They will be returned to Canada shortly.

Corporal Rostace King, of the Patricia, who did not return with the Canadian Military Hospital at Shornecliffe, at the week-end, was a son of Yeoud King, the well known artist and vice-president of the Royal Society. He received severe wounds at St. Eloi, and had undergone an operation for the amputation of his leg shortly before his death.

The inhuman treatment of British prisoners by Germany, as proved by a British Blue Paper containing correspondence with the American Ambassador in Berlin, is the subject of much indignant comment. The Times, while expressing the hope that some of the stories may prove to have been exaggerated, says it seems impossible in the face of this document to admit that Germany, with all its kultur, has relapsed into brutalities towards the British who are without parallel in the modern history of war. The Globe thinks that the time has now come for retaliation. Donald McMaster, M.P., points out that he had made a question on the order paper asking for information as to the treatment of British prisoners, but as the House adjourned next day, the Minister had evaded the question, although at that time the Government must have had in its possession the letter of Miss Cavell's friend. "Nothing but an outburst of outraged public opinion," declares Mr. McMaster, "will bring the Germans to their senses. Germany must be given to understand that when the day of reckoning comes all these things will be taken full account of."

Col. G. Sterling Ryerson, of Toronto, president of the Canadian Red Cross has returned to England, where the Institute and will proceed to France in a few days to inspect the work there.

Charged With Misusing Mails

CHICAGO, April 13.—Special—Indictments against John Farson, Jun., and his brother William Farson and each of many charged with misuse of the mails in the sale of securities amounting to $5,000,000 in a Colorado irrigation deal, were announced today by the United States District Attorney's office here.

Tew, Hift and Shields, alleged financiers of the company, are charged with conspiracy. The others are charged both with conspiracy and using the mails to defraud.

Missing Man Found in Ice

QUEBEC, April 13.—Special—Five months after he left home on a business trip, J. A. Gingras of Desbiens street, Quebec, was found yesterday afternoon, frozen stiff in a huge cake of ice, on the bank of St. Charles River, by firemen who were on their way to work. When found by the firemen Gingras was on his way to a business trip in the Maritime Provinces and he is thought to have accidentally drowned, as no signs of foul play are shown.

BOMB AND GRENADE THROWING PRINCIPAL PASTIME OF ARMIES

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 13.—The official statement given out this afternoon says: Between the sea and the Aisne there is nothing important except for a few artillery duels.

To the east of Berry-au-bac we gained possession of a German trench.

In the Argonne there were mining operations and engagements of bomb and grenade throwing between our own and the enemy's trenches.

Between the Meuse and the Moselle our forces succeeded at several points in coming in contact with the wire entanglements of the enemy's defence.

THE WEATHER.

Light to moderate winds, fine today and on Wednesday. Wednesday, milder.

LETTERS FROM ABROAD

FROM GERALD SPAFFORD

Dear Friend Charles:—

After a ten days' stay in the trench es I am back of the firing line for a rest; therefore grasp the opportunity of writing the folks at home a few lines which I trust will prove interesting.

I notice by the papers that they have been officially acquainted with the fact that we have engaged the enemy, and General French as well pleased with the work of our troops. I have read the truthful and graphic descriptions of the recent fight at Neuve Chapelle, and consider the varied descriptions from different points along the line are of great interest; so I therewith give my impressions from the point where we engaged the Germans.

On March 7th, we were ordered to stand by for action at 7.30 a.m. Every man was at his post, and in the quiet and the early morning not a sound was heard except the warbling of the little songsters in the hedge nearby. The sky was dull and grey, but otherwise the weather was clear. Silently we placed the rounds in the breech, the gunners taking their respective posts. The Sergeant of each gun quickly passed the word 'ready' back to the waiting section officer, who was standing handkerchief in hand, which, when dropped to the ground, meant fire. On the other hand he held his watch. Slowly it seemed like ages—the minutes passed. The men grew restless; the tension was great, when lo! the handkerchief dropped to the ground. Like a mighty crash of thunder the guns along the entire line belched forth their hail of shrapnel and lyddite. The terrific roar of bursting sell and the report of the guns is beyond description. For over an hour a screeching hail of shell were incessantly poured into the German trenches. No human being or device known in the defence of trenches which the Germans have employed could withstand the terrible ardors of flame and steel. The infantry in front of us told us that the Huns scenes paralyzed their trenches seemed to melt away, burying many alive as they crumbled before our merciless fire.

The fire was then turned on the reserve trenches of the enemy. During this pause in the roar of giant guns—the guns of all calibres—we could hear the hideous shouts of our infantry as they charged the enemy, who endeavored to rally, but the hail of rifle and machine gun fire proved too much for them, and they hastily retreated to further reserve trenches or hastily dug them selves in as best they could. The losses at our point were slight.

The following are extracts from a letter I received from Major J. Nutall of the Gurkhas regiment of which he is in command. The Major is a nephew of General Sir James Man-field Nutall of the Royal and Gurkha Rifles. He participated in the fray at another important point:

"My battalion was ordered up to the front. We arrived just behind the lines where recent fighting has been taking place. The work we were put to was very unromantic and very important, and full of adventure temptress. We had to drain the counter behind the trenches, which were full of water, which could not be disposed of otherwise. The first day I got the central point in our trenches, which will be spoken a lot about when discussing the recent battle. I found there a leather collar was was all his native regiment. As usual the shells at this point were coming with great regularity. He did some very hard and trying work for a few days and then were ordered closer up. We marched at 2 p.m. and arrived at the place at 4.30 a.m. At about 7.30 a.m. I was joined in this. Gerald there was started about the heaviest bombardment ever delivered by a British army. We were in the very middle of it. The very latest heavy guns that have been manufactured for the British army have been consolidated at the front, and we were assisted by the fire of French heavy guns from flanking positions a number of miles away. This special preparatory cannonade, paving the way for the attack, lasted about an hour, during which time the effect on the enemy was literally stunning. From every direction one continual roar went on from a mile behind us, right to within a few feet of us. The guns continued the firing without a moment's cessation. Every kind of gun was used, and every method of fire, the mammoth guns firing single batteries in salvos or firing in a rough rush. We were told off to move in a wedge, just behind the centre, and send up ammunition and material to the firing line.

"I went up with a staff officer, and some of us men to take much needed ammunition to one of the most important forward positions we had captured. It is impossible to describe the scenes. German big shells, fire from all directions, searching like rods. Shrapnel, high explosive shell, Jack Johnsons, the universal shell, bursting all around us in every direction. When we reached within 800 yards of the firing line, with all kinds of units taking shelter behind it, although it was only a skirt ter from view (and really a shelter from view was of no advantage as the shells were coming from certain positions five miles distant.) However, it gave one some sense of security, and could be a protection from very distant shrapnel. There were engineers waiting for duck to move up and improve the hastily made cover, also ready strategic positions and put up wire entanglements, etc. A medical section with scores of wounded was coming back from the fighting line, some of them slightly wounded walking by themselves, others more severely wounded being helped along, some on stretchers; some times two wounded men were helping each other along, some being about that no longer required help. In front of us the road took a dip and was under cover, so that we had to take a turn to the right to get to some trenches where the reserves were lying, and then to a dugout of one of the headquarters of a brigade working underground in the cellar of a house. This part of the road under water was being searched every few minutes by shrapnel and percussion shell, and the water and earth was kept shooting up 20 or 30 feet. We doubled over this and got to the trenches safely, but mostly made, and filled with men who sing. We had hours shelling trying to burrow into the earth to obtain some shelter from the pitiless hail of shot and shell. As we ran the Tommies called to us to keep our heads as possible as the enemy's snipers were firing at every one who passed. We got to the headquarters and down into the cellar where we found the General and his staff and heard how the affairs were going, but did not start back until near dusk, when the shell fire was very severe. Going through the trenches and communicating trenches there were some ugly sights.

Just before we started for the reserve trenches with our ammunition I saw we had our experience of shell fire; it was universal pattern. The road leading to the trenches was a block with all descriptions of troops and transports, pioneers with mules carrying their tools, and mules carrying parts of our ammunition. We were smashing one party along the road and trying to shove past the streams of wounded, etc., that were coming back. When the evening's fire, which had been trying to find our batteries, suddenly began to approach our redoubt. We had been watching it for some time from the top of our redoubt, and noticing how the high shells were bursting nearer and nearer to our redoubt, just as we were starting to get inside a universal shell dropped about clean across the road. It came back with a screech about 15 yards from where we were standing and within a few feet of another of our officers; in fact, it burst in each side of him. Three men were killed and several wounded; seven mules were killed and eight or nine wounded. The road for about twenty yards was a muddy sight, littered with carnage of dead, etc.

That night we had another near smash. The redoubt was being shelled tremendously. Shells were bursting on it every now and then, sometimes within a few feet of us. Our mess was a sandbagged recess with slight protection on top. A narrow trench or passage led to a small room. Some of the men were sitting in the passage, others in the room. Suddenly there was a terrific crash and I appeared in the shape shrapnel shell had burst in the room. As a matter of fact only a few shell came, the rest was sand, mud and earth shot by the explosion. The whole dugout was full of our mess and some of our orderlies and servants were sitting outside. One of these had been two wounded in the head, and several hurt by stones, etc. Half a dozen plates were shot through with shrapnel. A few inches to the left, and practically the whole of us would have been wiped out. We lay very low in our dugout—we had a chance of something in and getting a rest. A number of our mates were killed during the night bombardment. The next day we were ordered up to another redoubt in reserve of the fighting line. We then told to take up inner trenches. For four days we got very little rest and had to lived on biscuits and cheese and jam. I can say that mine was cremated into 24 hours than I have ever been experienced in 20 years' service. That's getting on, is it not?"

In conclusion, it is useless for me to say that our boys behaved like veterans, and I am glad to say that although the Germans send us a salmon now and then occasionally and we have had some fairly severe shelling, we are standing it well.

We see some exciting aeroplane battles almost when they go counting about the enemy's front. A German plane came over us and was followed by a British machine. Little did I think that J. J.'s, which made it some warm to-day, was piloted by a fellow-countryman of his position, but he got a warm reception from our aerial guns. He got away, but he had some close squeaks. Sorry he got away.

Now surprises never cease here. I found a belated infantryman looking for his billet, and what was his chum? It was old Charlie Gibson, and I accompanied him to where he and the boys were preparing an after tea after the trenches. I found all the Belleville boys well and looking for a good time to be coming. I then had the pleasure of calling on Lieut. Preston and O'Flynn, billeted in a farm house, and, in company with brother officers enjoying an evening's smoke and resting up after four strenuous days in the trenches. Lieut. Preston had a Gatling Billet shrapnel which dropped into his trench and didn't go off, as it always lucky, anyway. The boys have some great experiences to tell you, so I still leave it for them to do so—but was glad to meet them; it seemed like "Home, Sweet Home."

British Captain Repulsed Airships

With Rifle and Rockets—Gallant Skipper Beat off Enemy Aeroplanes

ROTTERDAM, April 13.—Special.—Special—While in the vicinity of North Hinder Lightship yesterday afternoon the steamer Scruia of the Batavier Steam Company, it proceed to Rotterdam, was attacked by two German aeroplanes. Captain Semple Sharp, who had on the bridge an old British naval officer, and other witnesses, fired at his assailants, one of whom ultimately cleared off with a damaged wing. Although the Captain does not claim that this was due to his rifle, he is certain that his firing caused the pilot to veer round and increase altitude and disturbed their aim, for not one of the 25 bombs launched hit the ship, though most fell perilously near.

Captain Sharp said: "About ten minutes to four we saw a German 'plane coming up astern. It drew level and then steered right across the ship, dropping six bombs in quick succession. Three fell on our side of the ship, and three on the other, the nearest being about fifteen feet away. Then another aeroplane came up and circled around us. I ordered a rocket to be fired. They did not like these, as they burst around them like shrapnel. The airmen did not relish this at all. I picked up my old Martini-Henri and fired at the second aeroplane. It did not stop after dropping six bombs, but his aim was bad, and all missed the ship with a good bit to spare. Again the aeroplane came at us and fired once more. Six more bombs were dropped, but all missed. Then I noticed the wing of the aeroplane was touching our deck, and soon after the machine disappeared in a southwesterly direction. I wish they would give us a machine gun or a machine gun would come in more useful still."

Reprisals Visited Upon British

The Germans do Not Wait to See Whether Sisley Crews are Ill-Treated

LONDON, April 13.—(Special.)—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram from Amsterdam says:

"The German Government has decided to make reprisals against British officer prisoners for the treatment that is being accorded the prisoners of German sanitive boats in England. For each prisoner of a submarine crew and for the duration of his harsh treatment which is in some cases contrary to international law, it has been resolved by Germany to treat likewise a British officer without distinction of person.

"Accordingly today (Sunday) 29 British officers were imprisoned in the military detention barracks."

DAVID BEATTY

eldest son of Admiral Sir David Beatty, the hero of the North Sea.

A Determined Australian

The son of a squatter in Central Queensland, wanted to enlist in the Legion. Force, so he rode 450 miles to the nearest railway siding; there took a stock train and travelled 450 miles to Adelaide, only to find there was no vacancy in the South Australian quota.

Nothing daunted, he wired to Tasmania and "licuta, and got the same reply. Then wired to Sydney, and the reply came: "Yes—if you can pense," and off he started on the long overland journey trip of nearly 800 miles, and triumphantly passed [illegible] the 2nd Light Horse Regiment as a trooper.

WHAT FOOTSTEPS TELL

By their walk you shall know them. A certain professor has invented a machine for recording the human gait.

"A person can be identified by his manner of walking as easily as by finger prints," contends the professor. "Watch the man who drags his feet along the ground as if every step were an effort. If he has any of this world's goods it is because it has been thrust upon him. He is the kind of man who would be in the first lifeboat that put out from a sinking ship. The man with the dragging gait is the man without a heart.

"The woman who has difficulty in lifting her heels from the ground when she walks is a vain, fussy believes the best she ever gets is the worst of it, and she will go into the smallest detail about trivialities. The woman with a dragging gait is the woman without spine.

"Watch the man who hurries along as if he were anxious to part company with the pavements. His steps are quick and snappy. The man with the snappy step has plenty of go. When you see a woman planting her feet firmly on the ground and walking with a free swing you may be sure she is wholesome, to be depended upon, capable. She will be your friend, your pal, your sweetheart on rainy days just as much as, or more than, when the sun shines."

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

The extraordinary growth of rural free mail delivery during the last few years was shown by a statement made by Hon. T. Chase Casgrain in the House of Commons. The statement was first inaugurated by the Liberals in 1908 after years of agitation by the Conservative Opposition. Free rural mail delivery was one of the planks in the Halifax platform of Sir Robert Borden before the election of 1908. It was hastily taken up by the Liberals in the heat of the election of that year, and in doubtful constituencies where the Liberals thought it would be a good vote-getter routes were hurriedly established. The Liberals never showed any particular enthusiasm for the policy and the whole system was worked along political lines. Routes were only established in Liberal ridings or in Conservative ridings where it was thought some political advantage would result. During the three years from 1908 to 1911 the Liberals only opened 614 routes with 19,015 boxes.

When the Conservatives assumed office Hon. L. P. Pelletier took hold of this Conservative policy with the utmost energy. During the first two years he was in office Mr. Pelletier increased the number to 2,000 routes with some ninety thousand boxes, which means daily mail service to some ninety thousand farmers. Hon. T. Chase Casgrain has carried forward the policy of Mr. Pelletier with the same enthusiasm. Today there are no less than 2,225 authorized routes with no less than 105,385 boxes. Prince Edward Island today is almost entirely covered with rural mail routes, as is a large part of Ontario. The service is being rapidly extended in Quebec at the present time. Under the present able and energetic administration no less than 41 thousand boxes a week are being located, so that within a few years of Conservative rule we have a system of rural delivery unsurpassed anywhere.

SOLDIER'S VOTE.

The volunteers who go to war as representatives of their country's spirit and honor have the right to cast their votes in any general election which may ensue during the war. The vote of every good citizen ought to be recorded at a general election, and the men who volunteer for active service proclaim their devotion to the country's best. It is up to the people at home, therefore, to provide by means of their representatives a way for the votes of the men at the front to be recorded.

Difficulties lies in the way of this, but these are not insurmountable. This is shown by the fact that the Dominion of New Zealand overcame them not long ago under similar circumstances. New Zealand secured the co-operation of the British War Office authorities, including Lord Kitchener, and as a result, the soldiers of the sister Dominion, many or most of whom were at the front, exercised the right of the ballot.

It is, of course, most desirable that party literature of the ordinary character should not be circulated amongst the soldiers at the front; yet the issues in any election might be placed fairly before them. The most desirable way to do this, we think, would be for the party leaders to get together and prepare a statement of the issues with the respective positions of the two parties. In default of this, each party ought be permitted to make a statement of its case to be sent to the men on active service.

It will be a matter of honor for the officers of the Canadian troops to see that the voting is carried out fairly and the public will not have any misgivings on this point.

This project is not a matter requiring a decision as to policy, but rather one of detail, working out. New Zealand did it, and Canada can do it. In all essential features, the bill now before Parliament providing for taking the votes of the soldiers, is the same as the Act under which New Zealand accomplished the same purpose. The men at the front are relieved from active work in the trenches at regular intervals, and there should be no unusual difficulty in securing the voice of this vital force of Canadian manhood should occasion call for it.—Montreal Mail.

A GENERAL ELECTION.

From what occurred in the House of Commons on Saturday, it is evident that a general election for the Dominion will take place within the next six or seven weeks.

The main issue will be the war, and Canada's share in it; and only second to this, the fact that the Conservative party, which carried the country in 1911 by a large and popular majority, dispossessed the Liberals of office, and undertook to carry on the government of the country, have found proposals that they carried through the House of Commons vetoed by the irresponsible Liberal majority in the Senate.

Though the Conservatives carried the country, the Liberal majority in the Senate vetoed the naval aid bill (providing for three dreadnoughts), the good roads measure, and a proposal last year and this year to increase the representation in the Senate, which, if allowed, would have enabled the Conservatives to carry their legislation through both houses.

As Hon. Mr. Rogers put it in the House of Commons on Saturday, the issue is whether we have democratic institutions or not, whether the will of the people is to prevail. Or to put it another way, if in Great Britain they have taken away the veto of the House of Lords, why should it be allowed to remain in Canada?

This state of affairs is intolerable, and the people will be asked to pass upon it. We must have popular rule or autocratic rule. Which?

In making such an appeal to the people, the Conservatives will not only have no protest against the principle established and confirmed—to compose his differences with his colleagues, it would be the part of dignity and wisdom. Not less edifying is the blustering language of members of the Senate who attempt to explain away the opportunity that may be turned to party advantage.

The Kronprinz Wilhelm, like its escape of the cruiser, the Ethel Frieda, has sought safety in a neutral harbor. The captain has shown good sense whether his ship will repair and put to sea again or consent to internment. The public does not share his uncertainty. The Kronprinz Wilhelm's movements are the usual display of contentious threat and braggadocio, will unreasonably conclude that discretion is the better part of valor and take the count in Newport News harbor.

Agricultural News

A CLEAN UP DAY

The last speck of snow has vanished from under the shrubs on the lawn and winter's deposit of slimy filth reveals to the dry grass in the kitchyard. The chips and splinters are filthered all over the woodyard; tin cans are scattered here and there; an occasional old basket is part of the adornment, and water-soaked sheets of waste paper are found stuck under some birch or lodged against the fence. The whole has an appearance altogether out of keeping with the freshness and springing into life of the growing season. It is time for a cleanup. The fence requires straightening up. The gate must be reslung to prevent its "dragging." The hedge needs trimming. The brush from winter pruning of fruit trees should be burned as unsightly and to remove dangers from insect and disease pests. The verandah floors and outside doors need paint. The front lawn and back yard to be made presentable must be raked over to take off all rubbish and dead grass. The summer's wood should be neatly piled. The clean-up should not stop at the house and surroundings. The driving shed and work room should be "straightened up" and swept out. Winter gaps in fence should be closed and fence repairing looked after. Brush and underwood could be profitably removed from fence corners, and by the way plant in its stead real tree trees, which will add to the beauty of the landscape and the efficiency of the farm, the latter as fence posts and shade for stock. Remove mudholes, "make" them and prepare for something better. Clean up the sheds and put them away, and allow the floors to stand out in the weather until June—sterilize, is over by this season. The sidewalk and side an entire day—the city man puts in if Saturday afternoon cleaning up his lawns and planting flowers; now for an arbor day or two on the farm.

THREE FAMOUS SCIENTISTS

Dr. Andrew Wilson, Dr. Gordon Stables and Dr. Lascelles Scott, the famous English analysts, have all personally tried Zam-Buk and expressed themselves pleased at its great healing values.

Mrs. St. Denis, of Thompson St., Toronto, Winnipeg, suffered long with eczema and finally her doctor said only Zam-Buk could cure her. Another fine tribute of a scientific test to Zam-Buk's healing.

Mr. St. Denis says: "The eczema broke out on my nose and one side of my face, and could get no sleep because of the irritation and pain, and my face was in such a shocking condition that for two months I did not go out of the house. I applied remedies and doctor treated me, but without effect, until one day he said that the only thing which would be likely to cure me was Zam-Buk. I procured a supply and to cut a long story short, in a few weeks Zam-Buk cured me completely, leaving no scars."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, blood poisoning, skin diseases, piles, etc. Also an embrocation for rheumatism, sciatica, neuritis, lumbago, sprains and cuts. 50c per box. Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

CURRENT COMMENT

The questions of the United States regarding the demands of Japan upon China and the Japanese explanations thereof are made public. It is evident that those who have been seeing a quarrel in the matter had a strained vision.

Toronto News: "According to The Winnipeg Tribune, Rev. Dr. John MacKay, of Vancouver, declares that Canada is as corrupt as China. Either Dr. MacKay is at the mercy of his vocabulary or he knows little about either China or Canada."

It is a curious news item that tells of the chief of police of Southampton, England, advertising for policewoman at $7 to $8 per week, about the wages paid policemen here. Today, at last rate, the women in England are not in a position to emphasize that too few callings are open to them.

It it is true that a secret German submarine base has been discovered on the Norwegian coast, the effect may be to lessen submarine activity to the south of Scotland, but it could hardly concern the submarines which are operating in the English Channel. The French admiral says that the submarines possibly use trawlers to run them across the North Sea, as they could not make the long cruises with which they have credited on their own power.

Montreal News: "A speaker in the ranks is certainly not an editying spectacle. To be chastised and censured for RAISING HEIFER COWS.

The records of two herd of dairy cows owned by two neighbors furnish a striking example of the utility of keeping a good herd. The man who wants to build up a good herd. The first man has been cow-testing for four years, and has selected his herd by the use of the scales and Babcock test, and has reached the point where he is receiving an average of 9,000 pounds of milk and 320 pounds of fat.

The neighbor considers it simpler to buy just what cows he can, he does not make any estimate. Last year his nine cows, all upwards of six years old, except two heifers, gave an average of 5,000 pounds of milk and 175 pounds of fat. This only just about one-half as much milk per cow as in the first herd. The best cow gave only 6,355 pounds, less than the average of the four heifers in the first herd. He has nothing on which to start building up a good dairy herd, unless it be his judgment in "picking a winner", which judgment, by the way, does not appear to be of a high quality. The owner of the first herd has the advantage of four years of dairy records, practically indispensable to the real dairy farmer, besides untimed judgment in handling cows to better advantage. Cow-testing pays.

Parliament May Continue a Week
Liberals are Excited Now That Blockers' Brigade Cannot Work
OTTAWA, April 12.—The arrangement for prorogation today has blown up. This was the plan on Saturday, and Thursday now is the earliest possible date and it would not be surprising in the House were still sitting a week from today. The tabling of the Ferguson report making startling revelations as to the mal-administration of the public domain under Hon. Frank Oliver throw upset calculations. Only two of those reports have been so far tabled and it is understood that there are still nine more to come, with even more serious charges against the old Laurier Government and involving oth er Liberal and ex-Liberal members. The Liberals cannot let these go by unchallenged and there is certain to be a none or less acrimonious debate.
The proven charges against Mr. Robert Cruise, a member for Dauphin, that he secured through fraud a homestead in the Riding mountains has created a sensation at the capital. Just what action will be taken against him remains to be seen. There is considerable nervousness in Liberal circles as it is not certain what other prominent members of the Liberal party will be involved.
The action of the Liberals in refusing for years an inquiry into the administration of the public domain in the west is in striking contrast with the methods which are being pursued by the Borden Government at the present time. Under the Liberals the famous blockers' brigade led by Mr. P. B. Carvell' Mr. E. W. Macdonald and Mr. A. K. Maclean prevented any thorough investigation, while time and again the Liberal majority in the Commons sat on the lid when the Conservatives with definite charges asked for fuller inquiry. Today the Conservatives are leading the inquiry in the Public Accounts and whenever there is a case for action, action is at once taken through the Justice Department.

Horses Suffocated In Stable Fire
Owner Had Just Left Building Two Minutes Before Outbreak
TORONTO, April 12.—Six horses were suffocated to death in a fire which started in a stable at the rear of 252 Wilton avenue early this morning, owner, Mr. R. H. Freeland. Dean avenue, but the horses for a few minutes after feeding them, and on his return to the stable saw smoke issuing through the doorway. He tried to get into the stable but was driven back by the flames and smoke. He thereupon rang in an alarm, but by the time the firemen arrived and extinguished the blaze, the horses were all suffocated. The damage to the stable amounted to about $1,000, and the horses to about $2,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The stable is illuminated with electricity and Mr. Freeland told the police that he did not use any matches whatever. He was only gone from the stable for a couple of minutes and has no idea how the blaze started.

School Children To Grow Potatoes
Department of Agriculture to Inaugurate a New Scheme for Patriotism
TORONTO, April 12.—The children who take part in the Agricultural Fairs will this year be urged to grow potatoes. The potatoes will be sold in the large centres throughout the Province and the money used for patriotic purposes. The Ontario Department of Agriculture has urged the adoption of the scheme, and the district representatives have the matter under their care. It is expected that over 45,000 children will participate in the competition, and prizes will be given those getting the best results. The potatoes will be sold direct to the consumers in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Peterboro, and Ottawa, following an advertising campaign, and the middle man will be cut out.

THE ONLY CURE FOR CONSTIPATION

Is "Fruit-a-tives" — That Wonderful Remedy Made From Fruit Juices.

"AVON, ONT., May 12th, 1913.

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and I gladly say it is my only medicine. When I first started six years ago to use them, I took two at a dose but gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night, before retiring. Previous to that I took nerve and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the illness as from the treatment. Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which some one else recommended them very highly, so I tried them, and I have no hesitation in recommending them."

RAILROAD BOUGHT FOR $1

(Kansas City Star.)

Here's how the Kansas South-western Railroad, 60 miles long between Arkansas City and Caldwell, Kan., was sold a few months ago for $1.

The road was owned jointly by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and the St. Louis and San Francisco railroads. It was badly involved and in a poor physical condition. The Kansas state public utilities commission had just issued an order that $150,000 should be spent to put it in better condition.

E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe, and W. B. Biddle, one of the three receivers for the Frisco, met to talk over what was to be done about the commission's new order.

"How would you like to buy the road?" Mr. Biddle asked.

"I'll name a price, give or take," Mr. Ripley replied.

"Go ahead," the Frisco received said.

"One dollar," Mr. Ripley responded.

"I'll take it," Mr. Biddle snapped.

And that's the way the Santa Fe acquired full title to the ownership of the branch road. The story came out when a Santa Fe official told it at the John W. Weeks luncheon.

THE PUMPOVITCH

In Russia none can buy a flagon of vodka or old rye; the men must ride the water wagon—the country's all going dry. The law affects all grades of critters, the humble and the rich; and those who lately sipped their bitters now find the vamporitch. The "ich" of Western prohibition you'll look for there in vain; you will not find there a condition like one may discover in Maine. There's no relief for thirsty leggers, no help for Russian sports; the alleys know no cheap bootleggers, no blind pigs in all resorts. The old wine tricks, that lead to drinking, won't work there, worth a cent; man may gain his eyebrows while he's tight, the druggist won't relent. Old Russia's brand of law prohibits, in country and in town, and soon her peasants and her gibbets will all be taken down. If some one hasn't told a whopper about conditions there, the country won't have a leg to stand on, which find them everywhere. The world will watch this Russian measure, so sharp and so wise; they'll watch, and doubtless note with pleasure a nation rolly rise, from abject depths of degradation, from lying in the afflicted lumpy that progressive nation which hits the pumpovitch!

TWO OUT OF HELL; NO TORMENT THERE

THE BIBLE HELL, NOT THE THEOLOGICAL HELL

Jonah's Escape from Hell—Jesus Delivered from Hell—Everybody goes to Bible Hell—Jesus Redeemed—all from It—Hence all are to Come Out of It—The Rich Man and Lazarus a Parable or a Narrative?—Unreasonable as Statement of Facts—Very Reasonable as a Parable—The Rich Man Soon to be Let Out of Hades

BOSTON, Mass., April 12.—Pastor Russell spoke here twice today. His discourse, based on Luke, 16, 23, set forth a most reasonable explanation of a parable which has long perplexed Christians. He said in part:

Those who wrote the Bible did their duty well. Old testament, covering the history of over four thousand years, tells us that all mankind at death go to Sheol—the hell of the Old Testament, written in Greek, tells the same story, using the word Hades as the equivalent of the Hebrew Sheol. But in modern translations of the Bible difficulty is encountered, particularly in the English. Nearly all these translations have been made within the last five centuries. For thirteen hundred years before that time the Bible had been little known.

In the Second Century the theory prevailed that the Bishops were as much inspired as Jesus and the Apostles; for they were called Apostolic bishops. Bible study was considered unnecessary, because these Apostolic bishops were present to give up-to-date information and communications from heaven. These bishops were tenets of the Bible study, during which time as the Apostles had forewarned, grievous wolves into the flock (Acts, 20, 29-31). During the doctrine became so mingled with errors that the false teachers merely enslaved the people, and the stolen and distorted money for the relief of the fears.

When Bible study revived in the Fifteenth Century the errors were so entrenched in men's minds that those who translated the Bible unconsciously gave little twists in their endeavor to have the Bible say what they thought it meant. As in illustration, note John 5, 29. There the translators have given us the unscriptural expression "damnation"—when nothing in the Greek justifies the word "damnation." The Revised Version readers it properly, "Resurrection of judgment"—trial.

When the Hebrew word Sheol was being translated, Hell was the nearest term to fit their ideas. Hence even when this translation was impossible did they give the proper meaning—the grave. There is another word for grave—gober (sepulchre). But to do their best to make Hell out of Sheol, they could do translate it "the hell of one-half the whole number of occurances. The Revised Version retains the Hebrew Sheol and the Greek Hades, saying, Let the reader find out its meaning.

Good men, who know better, permit their congregations to think they believe in a burning Hell of torture when secretly they confess to the contrary. But they dare not, for the cool, lest evil follow—let us not tell the people, lest fewer would come to church, and the collection plates, holding so much less, be broken. Poor men! They seem blind to the fact that these devilish doctrines are driving intelligent people away from God, from the Bible, and from the churches.

Two Escapes from Hell

The Bible tells of several who were released from Hell, but of two in a very word is used. The Prophet Jonah swallowed by the great fish, was in its belly part of three days. He calls it his tomb—Sheol. While there entombed he cried unto the Lord, and the Lord delivered him. Jesus tells us that Jonah's experiences typified His own, that as Jonah was buried in the fish Jesus would be buried in the earth (Matthew, 12, 39, 40.) As Jonah came forth on the third day, so did Jesus. St. Peter points out that this was prophesied of Jesus, saying, "Thou wilt not leave My soul in (Sheol, or) Hades—the tomb. He says that God fulfilled this by raising Jesus from the dead—Acts 2, 27.

Whoever gets the proper focus will see that all, good and bad, go down to the tomb—to Sheol, Hades, called in our Bibles Hell. The Scriptures very distinctly tell us that "the dead know not anything"; that "there is neither wisdom, nor knowledge, nor device, in Sheol, whither thou goest"—writher all go (Ecclesiastes, 9, 5,6.) This exactly accords with the Divine statements, "The wages of sin is death"; "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Romans, 6, 23; Ezekiel, 18, 4, 20.) There is no Scripture for the commonly accepted thought that those who die go to Heaven, to Purgatory or eternal torment. All those teachings are found in the various creeds; the Bible alone tells the simply story, reasonable and harmonious from start to finish.

Gehenna Fire—Second Death

It is true that Jesus used the term Gehenna fire, and that our translators confused the English reader by translating this word Hell, the same as Hades. But, as all scholars will admit, Jesus used the word fire here symbolically, as we use it. Thus our newspapers tell about the great conflagration in Europe—not literal fire, but symbolic of awful destruction. So Jesus pointed out that, although He had come to save men from death, and eventually by a resurrection to life up all who had gone down to Hades, nevertheless, the relief would only be temporary, except to those who would conform to Divine Law. All condemned under that Second trial would go again. This Second Death would be utterly destruction, from which there is no escape, for those who would sin wilfully after being released from the first death.

Pointing to the valley outside of Jerusalem, used as a garbage furnace and called in the Greek Gehenna, and in Hebrew the Valley of Tinnom and Hinnom, Jesus declared that it illustrated the fate of all wilful sinners. Dead bodies and live were thrown into the Valley of Hinnom, Gehenna, where fires were kept lighted, and brimstone was burned to kill the germs.

It is said that criminals of the worst type, after execution, were thrown into that valley, as intimating that they should have no hope for resurrection. Jesus emphasized the utter destruction in the Second Death, of any found in Gehenna fire, thereby having full opportunity of return to God through the merit of Christ's sacrifice. The Bible everywhere teaches that the thought that the Church now, and the world in its Kingdom day future, will be in danger of Gehenna destruction—the Second Death.

Bible students know that Sheol and Hades could not be places of eternal torture, for the Scriptures say that they shall be destroyed. If Sheol and Hades are to be destroyed, how could anybody be tortured there everlasting? The clergy know these things very well, but hire them from the people (Hosea, 13, 14, reads, "O grave (Sheol) I will be thy destruction!" 1 Corinthians 15:55, "O grave (Hades), where is thy victory" Revelation 20:14, "Death and Hell (Hades) shall be cast into the Lake of Fire. This is the Second Death."

These Scriptures mean that mankind will be delivered by Messiah's Kingdom from the power of the tomb, that we can rely upon God's promise that ultimately Hades, the tomb, will be destroyed in the Second Death. Note that the symbol is explained—"the lake of Fire, which is the Second death." In other words, all that are in the graves, in the prison-house of death, shall ultimately be set free by the great Deliverer, who already has laid down His life as their Ransom-price, that sinners might have the opportunity of everlasting life—John 3:16.

This opportunity has yet come only to the Church. Her covenant is to follow in her Master's footsteps into death; and the promise is that she shall have a superior resurrection, because of greater trials of faith and obedience to sacrifice. As the Heavenly Father raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, so the gates of death shall not prevail against the Church—1 Corinthians 15:42-44; Matthew 16:18.

With the world it will be different. Under the New Dispensation they will find themselves, not coming back from the tomb, but gradually raised out of imperfection and weakness back to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed at Calvary, if they will follow instructions. The great priest-house will give up the prisoners; for He who died on Calvary obtained the keys of Hades as He ells us—Isaiah 49:9; Revelations 1:18.

The Rich Man in Hell

The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus we hope to make very plain. To be thorough, we must note the fact that lovers of the eternal torment doctrine insist that this is a literal description. Let us see. Does it seem reasonable that this parable has said about his character as being either moral or immoral, but simply on account of his fine clothes, and his sumptuous food, and his riches, a man should eternally roasted? We hold that it is not.

Similarly it is not said that Lazarus was moral or immoral, but merely that he was a poor, sin-crushed, sick man at the rich man's gate, etc. It is reasonable to suppose that sores and destitution, without any thought of his character, would be qualifications for Heaven? Surely not. If all rich people go to eternal torment, if those who wear fine linen and purple and fare sumptuously every day, to eternity, what an aristocratic place Hell would be! On the other hand, if only rich people who have running sores and dogs to lick them, who lie at a rich man's gate and eat crumbs from his table, how full Heaven will be! Moreover, if it is a literal statement, then Abraham here is a literal person. Then he must have had, if all else failed, could Abraham hold in his bosom without letting some drop!

Surely this is absurd. Let us treat it from this viewpoint, remembering that a parable speaks in symbols. For instance, in the parable of the Wheat and Tares, the wheat represented the "children of the Kingdom"; the tares, "children of the Wicked One." Accordingly, the Rich Man must mean a very rich man, but stands for a class, and Lazarus also stands for a class.

Interpretation of the Parable

We suggest that the Rich Man represented the Jewish nation, rich in God's favor. Their spiritual table was bountifully supplied. To them belonged the promise of the Kingdom represented by the royal purple. They had the "fine linen" of typical justification, accomplished on their annual Atonement Day. In A.D. 70 the Jewish nation died when their last vestige of government was destroyed by the Romans. The nation has been asleep in Hades ever since, though the Jews have been very much alive and have suffered many things, especially among professed Christians in the dark ages. Similarly is the revival of hope that the Rich Man will be resurrected from Hades; and present indications point to this as of speedy accomplishment—as soon as the fulness of the Gentiles shall have come into Spiritual Israel—Romans 11:25,26.

Lazarus represented outcasts who desired favor with God, but were "aliens and strangers from the commonwealth of Israel"—Gentiles. They had no table with Divine promises from which to "fare sumptuously every day," no share in the promise of royalty, no "fine linen" of justification from sin. Those things belonged to the Jew exclusively, until his national rejection and the subsequent opening of the door to Gentiles, that they might become fellow-heirs with the saintly Jews—followers of Jesus.

As the Jew died to his favors, so the Gentile died to his disfavor. As angels carried Lazarus to Abraham's bosom so the early Jewish Church, messengers of God and Christ, received believing Gentiles into full fellowship as brethren of the Seed of Abraham. This, figuratively, is Lazarus in Abraham's bosom—treated as his child. Paul thought the Apostle Paul gives, saying: to Gentile believers, "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's Seed and heirs according to the Promise."—Galatians 3:28, 16, 29.

The Rich Man represented especially two tribes—Judah and Benjamin. Proportionately, the five brethren would be ten tribes. The parable represents the Rich Man as saying, I have five brethren. May not something be done for them? The answer shows that only Israelites could be meant. Only the twelve tribes of Israel had Moses and the Prophets.

"Dog" was a name which the Jews commonly gave Gentiles. Jesus himself used it, and illustrated how Gentiles occasionally ate crumbs from the Rich Man's table. The Syrophoenician woman requested healing for her daughter; but Jesus said, "It would not be meet to take the children's food (the Jews) and give it to dogs (Gentiles)." She answered, "Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." Then Jesus said, "O woman, great is thy faith!" and He gave her the crumb, which was not hers by right; for the time has not yet come for giving Gentiles a place in God's family as children of Abraham.

Who cannot see in this beautiful parable a teaching in harmony with God's wisdom, Justice, Love and Power as it has applied during this Gospel Age? May your eyes of understanding open to a true knowledge of God's word, and a true appreciation of His glorious character! Then we shall love Him better, and serve Him, not from fear, but us dear children.

I offer free of charge, a booklet, written with a view to making these figurative statements clear. Whoever will address me—Pastor Russell, Brooklyn, N.Y.—requesting a copy of pamphlet about Hell, will be promptly served free of charge. The pamphlet will settle all questions.

The Hungarians are said to desire peace more than anything else. Most Gentile died to his disfavor. An angels of us feel that way when the other fellow is on top and there is no avenue of escape.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of nut-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they pass through the system. Organs are not normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fats and fat-producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This power must be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Each element has a distinct office in the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its results are remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to fifteen pounds in a single month are by no means uncommon. Sargol is actively and perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by T. H. Brown, and all other good druggists everywhere and every package carries a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of functional indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

THAT 'CHANT OF HATE' AGAIN

(A new version of Herr Lissauer's merry roundelay)

At least, at heart, I'm a friendly chap,
As friendly as any one on the map.
I drink my beer, I enjoy my beer,
I sing the jolliest songs you hear;
But when they hustle me off to war,
And my friends they charge, and the shells they roar,
Then I'm changed, I'm changed,
While every time I see a gun
Somebody howls that I'm a Hun;
And when my plump, respectable friends
Suddenly come to violent ends,
And the battles are fierce and the beer is scant,
I feel the need of an angry chant.

I know there are men who are always cool;
Spectators, bred in a sporting school.
I myself was not thus bred;
When I hear fisti I go off my head.
I feel very warm and I talk very warm
When life is stormy I too grow stormy.
And sooner or later I get in a state
Where nothing will do but a chant of hate.
The foes we crush—pooh!—they're not for me,
We seize their coin and forgive the lot,
But when there's a foe who bites and he ences
What can we do if we don't look back?
Comrades come, let us all look back!
Let us chant our hate with extreme hate,
Let us hate the foe that remains to be scarred!
Altogether now! Scowl like this—
Stamp your feet! Give a manly hiss!
We scowl as one, we stamp as one,
We refuse to stop till the war is done.
Now do you see what a dangerous state
It puts us in to arouse our hate!

JITNEY BUS SERVICE BEGINS IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL, April 12.—A "jitney" service was inaugurated in Montreal this morning with a parade of cars several blocks in length.

The career of the "jitney" is being watched with considerable interest owing to prospective legislation now before the City Council which contemplates compelling automobiles to stop at certain streets only, while an auto bus company, which has not started operations, holds a franchise giving it a monopoly of this class of traffic.

Gordon H. Fearsall, who was associated with the Organization of the Toronto and other jitney companies, is traffic manager of the Montreal service.

RENTON'S ROLL OF HONOR

Through the instrumentality of Mr. Alex. Wylie of Corcale, a Roll of Honor for the Renton Village has been prepared, and a letter sent to the Weekly Despatch, London, entering the village in competition for the Harvest in Britain. The roll has been signed by twelve representatives of the Renton War Relief Committee. The total number of Rentonians ascertained to be away with the colors is 496, out of a population of 4977, or 10 per cent. Many others are prohibited from joining the colors owing to being employed in Government work, for which they hold their Government badges. The list was compiled by Sergeant Marr. There are 1571 males in Renton between the ages of 18 and 70, and making this the basis of comparison, and taking those between the ages of 18 and 50, the persons eligible for the country's service, gives 80 per cent., with the colors. Three families have given five men each, in the O'Neils, Flemings, and Kerrys, while others have sent four, three, and one respectively. The men are serving as follows—135 with the Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, 26 in the Black Watch, 14 in the Gordon Highlanders, 16 in Cameron Highlanders, 2 in Royal Scots, 14 in Seaforth Highlanders, 15 in H.L.I., 4 in Scots Greys, 15 in Scottish Rifles, 11 in Scots Guards, 1 in Army Cycle Corps, 1 in Royal Flying Corps, 3 in Army Medical Corps, 25 in K.O.S.B.'s, 1 in Northumberland Fusiliers, 2 in Middlesex Regiment, 1 in Lancashire Fusiliers Regiment, 27 in Royal Scots Fusiliers, 6 in Royal Dublin Fusiliers, 4 in Royal Irish Fusiliers, 2 in Command Rangers, 3 in Hussars, 4 in Scottish Horse, 5 in Dragoon Guards, 9 in the Navy, 41 in Royal Field Artillery, 18 in Royal Garrison Artillery, 14 in the Royal Engineers, 13 in Army Service Corps, 7 in Canadian Engineers, 2 in Canadian Highlanders, 2 in Canadian Land Light Horse, 1 in Queen's Own Canadian Rifles, 1 in Canadian Field Service, 1 in Calcutta Light Horse, 1 in Calcutta Scottish, 1 in West Australian Regiment, 1 in Duke of Connaught's Own Regiment. 155 reside in Main street, 122 in Back street, 48 in Lennox street, 10 in John street, 7 in Alexander street, 7 in Leven street, 10 in Hill street, 21 in Carmichael street, 10 in Station street, 33 in Burn street, 21 in Thimble street, 17 in Waterside Place, 28 in Stirling street, 14 in King street, 9 in Red Row and 9 in Dalquhurn, etc.

PICK IT UP OR COME ALONG TO THE CELLS

MONTREAL, April 12.—"Pick up that paper."

Several citizens who did not obey this command by a policeman on Saturday night and Sunday will appear in the Recorder's Court.

The number of arrests for throwing paper on the sidewalk or for expectorating on the sidewalk during the week-end totalled 120, and hundreds were warned that they were violating civic by-law 323 or 326, as the case might be.

Sometimes of the principal thoroughfares have enjoyed many amusing incidents since the "keep the city clean" command has been enforced by the constables, according to the orders of Chief Campeau. Messenger boys and "newsies" who threw strings and cigarette papers on the street were requested to pick up what they had discarded. Newspapers and empty packages were among other things discarded by men on the streets, and those who refused to pick up these things were taken to the police station.

Citizens are becoming aware of the fact that the city must be kept free from littering with paper, and that they are met with a "I dunno", from the policeman when asked where the paper should be discarded.

"Put it in your pocket!" is the usual alternative to the negative reply, but this did not seem very practical to the constable of Sleighbell Lane, at 1 lot. He was in doubt, whether to risk arrest or spoil his clothes when deposited behind him, breaking several eggs he was carrying in a bag.

25,000 VOLTS FAILED TO KILL CARDINAL MAN

BROCKVILLE, April 12.—Lloyd Gladstone, a young man residing at Cardinal, is a sufferer at the General Hospital here, terribly burned from coming in contact with a live electric wire. He was employed on the Hydro Electric plant at Iroquois when the accident occurred and it is said that 25,000 volts passed through his body. Both hands and arms are badly burned, so much so that it is feared amputation of the limbs will be necessary. Doctors say that death would have resulted had the voltage been less. The shock was such that it threw him instantly from the top of a pole on which he was working and his fall was broken by striking a guy wire some distance from the ground.

Respectable middle-aged gentlemen who are always advising young men to go back to the land, seldom satisfactorily explain why they themselves did not do so.

RECORDS PROVE WILLARD IS IN HIS 34TH YEAR

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 12.—To settle an argument over the question of the age of Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, prospectors of Glynn's store in Emmett, Kan., adjourned o the cemetery, between Emmett and St. Clere, and exhumed the monument that marks the grave of the father and mother of the new champion.

The tombstone records the fact that M. B. Willard died October 29, 1881. This was about two months before the birth of the future champion. So he is thirty-three years old.

Mrs. Barney Franklin, who was present at Jess Willard's birth, is quoted as saying that he weighed about twenty pounds.

Cleveland, April 12.—The old theory which says "Youth must be served," was handed a K.O. punch today when it was learned that Jess Willard is thirty-three years old.

At that rate Jess isn't so very much younger than the fallen champion. Johnson is thirty-eight. This is the "straight dope," obtained from birth and marriage records.

Jess was born December 29, 1881, in Pottawatomie county, Kan., and on March 13, 1907, when Jess married Miss Hattie Evans at Leavenworth, Kan., was his age to Probate Judge T. V. Johnson as twenty-five years.

Of course that was before Jess had any idea of entering the ring. When took up boxing he chopped off five years.

GAVE COSTLY RING

CHICAGO, Ill., April 12.—Chicago society is agog to-day over the unprecedented contribution at a meeting for the relief of Belgians held by Madame Depage, wife of the Surgeon-General of the French army, when a prominent woman, living on the Lake Shore Drive, snatched a costly ring, richly set with diamonds and emeralds, from her finger and graciously offered it to the cause.

The thing, it developed, was a wedding present and had graced the finger for some thirty years. But so moved was the donor, who withholds her name, by the appeal of Madame Depage, that she thought only of the value translated into terms of relief for stricken people.

This exceptional philanthropist was not the only giver. A noted surgeon went through every pocket, turning each inside out and handing over his last penny to the emissaries. It is the plan of the committee to place the ring on sale at some local jeweller.

The scene of the rich outpouring was the drawing-room of Mrs. George Isham's home at 1360 North State street, and the scores of men and women prominent in the city's business and social life gather.

DERRICK SCOW ASHORE

KINGSTON, April 12.—The first marine accident of the season in this vicinity occurred this morning when a derrick scow owned by the Frontenac Bay Contracting Co., Ltd., who are finishing the new causeway, broke away from her tow and went ashore near Macdonald Park. The scow was being brought to the city from Belleville by a tug owned by Mr. G. Pike and when near the city something went wrong with the engine of the tug and the tow line became loose. The scow went towards the shore, being propelled by the wind, and before the engineer could be worked it was hard aground. The scow is hard on a flat ledge of rock and the company expects to get it off when the sea abates. It is thought that it will not be seriously damaged.

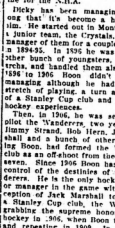
DICKY BOON FAMED IN HOCKEY CIRCLES

Was a Crack Player in the Good Old Days of Yore and Made Equally Good as a Manager



DICKY BOON

Dicky Boon, manager of Sammy Leichtenhein's red banded Wanderer Club, can claim pre-eminence in his line for the N.H.A.

Dicky has been managing for so long that it's become a habit with him. He started out in Montreal with a junior team, the Crystals, and was manager of them for a couple of years in 1894-5. In 1896 he was with another bunch of youngsters, the Montrechs, and handled them also. From 1896 to 1906 Boon didn't do any managing although he had a long stretch of playing, a turn as captain of a Stanley Cup club and plenty of hockey experience.

Then, in 1906, he was selected to pilot the Wanderers, two years after Jimmy Strand, Bob Hern, Jack Marshall and a bunch of others, including Boon, had formed the Wanderer club as an off-shoot from the M.A.A.A. seven. Since 1906 Boon has been in control of the destinies of the Wanderers. He is the only hockey player or manager in the game with the exception of Jack Marshall to manage a Stanley Cup club, the Wanderers grabbing the supreme honor in pro. hockey in 1906, when they took hold and repeating in 1909. In 1906 the Wanderers won the title for the Federal League and played a tie game with Ottawa for the cup but a dispute arose, the game finished in a deadlock and further chance was given the Wanderers to wrest the silverware from the Ottawa holders.

In 1907-08 Boon played with the M.A.A.A. Juniors and, in 1908-01-02 was with the seniors. In 1902 he had the honor of captaining the Stanley Cup-holding "Little Men of Iron" and had (as usual), Jimmy Gardiner and Nicholson as team mates. The "Little Men of Iron" made hockey history, The lightest senior team playing the game they made up for their lack of avoirdupois by sheer courage, speed and stick handling ability. And, of their forwards line was lighter than Boon. He has a bullet shot and was about as shifty a player as ever handled a stick.

In 1904 came the split. Dissension arose on the Club after the championship was lost and the directors got together and formed the Wanderers. For long the M.A.A.A. were to drop out to the senior game with the coming of new professionals and the Wanderers continued alone in the Stanley Cup games.

Boon had a hard task with the Wanderers. They have never been an easy club to handle. Getting them and keeping them in shape is usually a tough proposition. However although not a driver he gets the very best out of his men. They swear by him and have every respect for his hockey ability.

IN A REAL DEATH TRAP

Trooper Who Saved Wounded Comrade Found Those Left Behind Dead

We went to relieve a regiment which was in reserve, wrote R. H. Grenfell, trooper of the Queen's Own, to his sister at Burnley, leaving our horses in a village, and marched about five miles, eventually reaching the regiment and taking over their trenches. After being there a while we advanced to another position about 200 yards the first line, as it is ditch, but we were unable to go further until we were wanted.

Our position was this. Our artillery was a considerable distance behind us, and the Germans' artillery in front and the German shells, which had the range to a nicety, were dropping all over us. But after half an hour our artillery advanced and the shells began to fall short.

The first to come near us fell a few yards in front of my left, and I thought a tremendous cloud of earth, and bombshrapnel burst over us. Others of pain from the comrade on my left. I turned and asked him if he had been hit. "No, only winded," he gasped. But I found that the poor fellow had a shrapnel shot through his left leg.

What was to be done? Shells were screaming overhead, and we were in a real death trap. My comrade was in great pain, and as I could not carry him I asked for permission, and I asked Corporal Gilbert if my wounded man's name—to try and creep a little way on his hands and knees so that I could get him on my back.

He bravely struggled on for some yards, but then, as he got out of the broad part of the ditch, he stumbled in.

I knelt on all fours, and Cornack climbed on to my back. I scrambled out of the ditch, and that was the most exciting part, for I had to cross over open ground.

Off I went at a jog trot, shells were bursting everywhere around us, and at last, almost exhausted, I arrived at a farm, and handed my comrade over to the orderly of the medical corps.

After a rest I was told to rejoin my troop as soon as possible. So off I went again to face the hail of shell, and got safely to the ditch, and you can imagine my surprise when all I found there were the bodies of my four dead comrades who had been killed by the second shell. I did not learn the result of that second shell till then. Eventually I rejoined my troop.

WEDDING BELLS.

CROSBY—CARPENTER

The home of Mrs. Hiram Carpenter, Charles street, was the scene of a very happy event on Wednesday, April 7th, when her youngest daughter, Retta, was united in marriage to Mr. Grant Crosby, of Ameliasburg, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

Rev. Melvin Taylor was the officiating clergyman. The bride was very becomingly attired in a dress of white embroidered crepe, and wore the customary veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of roses and carnations.

Upon the conclusion of the ceremony, a very dainty luncheon was served, after which the happy couple left for a trip to Toronto. Upon their return they will take up their residence at Ameliasburg.

The many beautiful presents from friends and relatives testify to the popularity of the young couple. They will be followed to their new home by the best wishes of a host of friends.—Gananoque Reporter.

42nd Anniversary Supper at the Baptist Church

Eighty-seven people sat down to a choice supper at the Baptist Church last night. Choice viands and plenty of them were provided by the Ladies' Bible Class and served up in dainty fashion. The occasion was the 42nd anniversary and also the quarterly business meeting of the congregation. After the supper the following musical programme was rendered:

Piano Solo—Miss Wanda Riggs.
Cornet and Saxaphone duet—Messrs. Albert and William Wannacott.
Solo—Miss Margaret Brown.
Solo—Mrs. P. C. MacLaurin.

Mr. C. A. Hart, the church treasurer, presented the quarterly church report, which showed an increase in offerings in every department. Mr. Albert Blackburn, the church clerk, read the minutes for the quarter and also gave the report of the building fund account. The church mortgage now stands at $6,500.00. The report of the missionary treasurer, Mr. Jas. S. Peck, was presented, and also reports from the Sunday School, Outlook Club and Women's Missionary Circle. The members of this Circle have recently presented the pastor's wife, Mrs. C. G. Smith, with a life membership in the Baptist Missionary Society of Ontario, costing $25.00. Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, in behalf of the finance board of the church, presented a financial report of the recent special offerings to clear off outstanding debts. These amounted to $260. Increased pledges per week have also been raised, amounting to $7.50, and it is calculated that by the close of this present year all current indebtedness will be paid and the church budget fully realized. Mr. MacLaurin expressed the thanks of the board to all the members of the church and congregation and friend who have contributed so well, and have also increased their pledges weekly. Mr. H. F. Bostler, chairman of the envelope fund, also spoke a few words commending the church's schemes.

The pastor read a letter of anniversary greetings from Rev. Robert Wallace, now residing in Toronto. This thoughtful act was heartily received by all present. A vote of thanks was passed to the Ladies' Bible Class for their excellent supper, after which the meeting closed with prayer.

CONSIGNED TO THE TOMB

S. R. GORMAN

The remains of the late Mr. S. R. Gorman of this city, were this afternoon consigned to the tomb. Many citizens were in attendance at the obsequies. The body was taken from the family residence, Charles street to St. Thomas church, where the impressive funeral services of the Anglican church were conducted by the rector, Rev. Canon Beamish. Upon the casket were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. J. Williams, E. F. Milburn, R. J. Graham, T. E. Wilson, George and F. S. Wallbridge.

MRS. J. E. DENIKE

Yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Mrs. J. E. Denike of this city, were laid away in the White's cemetery, Sidney Township. At her late residence on Sidney street, services were conducted by the Rev. H. S. Osborne, pastor of Bridge street Methodist church. Many floral tributes were placed upon the casket. The bearers were Messrs. C. Bonisteel, F. White, R. Way, S. P. Hagerman, C. M. and Manley Farley.

THE LAST PROOFREADER

When the story of Mammon is printed
And the binder has laid down his tools;
When none of the facts have been stinted—
And the deeds of the wise and the fools
Have been written by prophets and sages,
And bound in the rawhide of man;
Then God will blue-pencil its pages;
As only the Almighty can.

He will see the proud failings of the ages
As they rot in their filigreed graves,
And measure their virtue with gauges
That He'll use for both masters and slaves;
While princes whose caskets were freighted
With laurel wreaths, honors and fame,
May find that their souls have been rated
'Neath beggar-men buried in rags.

So in the long run it is better
To lead our lives humbly contrite;
Find truth, live it up to the letter
With hearts free from rancor and spite;
For the great proofreader is tracing
Man's record straight back to the flood
And we hope for a merciful placing
In the book that is printed in blood.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant. Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

MELEESE CUMMINS GOOD ANGEL OF WILDS

Great Silent Forests of Canadian North Shelter Warm-hearted Woman Who Helps Others

In his literary workshop, surrounded by an arsenal of guns and trophies of the hunt, James Oliver Curwood, the picturesque author of "God's Country —And the Woman," who spends one half of his life in the wild and in unexplored parts of the North, prizes above all other possessions the photograph of a woman, and this is the woman—the Josephine of his novel in the picture she stands in front of a log cabin, with her hair falling loose about her to her hips, and in her hand, half poised, she holds a hair brush.

"Some day I am going to write the story of Josephine as she really lives, and works, and loves," said Mr. Curwood to an interviewer. "I have tried to make her live in my book as she lives in her own wonderful life. (Her right name is Meleese Cummins.) To find her one must start at Le Pas, the last outpost of civilization, and strike northward through the long Wollaston Lake waterway to Reindeer Lake. Nearly forty miles up the east shore of the lake, the adventurer will come to the mouth of the Grey Loon —a narrow and silent stream that winds under overhanging forests—and after that a two hours' journey will bring one to the cabin home of John Cummins, the happiest husband in the world. Meleese is his wife.

A Wilderness Romance

"It was more than twenty years ago that the romance began in the lives of John and Meleese Cummins. Meleese was then ten years old, and she says that she still remembers as vividly as though they were but memories of yesterday the fears and wild tales of that one terrible winter when the Red Terror—the smallpox—swept in a pitiless plague of death throughout the northern wilderness. It was then that there came down from the north, one bitter cold day, a ragged and half-starved boy, whose mother and father had died of the plague in a little cabin fifty miles away, and who, from the day he staggered into the home of Henry Janesse, became Meleese's playmate and chum. This boy was John Cummins. When Janesse moved to Fort Churchill, where Meleese might learn more in the way of reading and writing and books than her parents could teach her, John Cummins went with her. He went with them to Nelson House, and from there to Split Lake, where Janesse died. From that time, at the age of eighteen, he became the head and support of a home in a country where the one great law of life is the survival of the fittest. When he was nineteen and Meleese eighteen the two were married by a missionary from Nelson House. The following autumn the young wife's mother died, and that winter Meleese began her remarkable work among her people.

The "Little Garden of God"

"And that work I had heard stories of it. In my wanderings I had sat beside campfires when Indians spoke of her name—Monitoo-Wiskwao—it, the same breath with which they mentioned their God; and I had seen half-breeds and whites drop their beads in reverence of her. What I saw on the day that followed this first day at the Cummins' cabin shocked me at first, and then I wondered, and I shall always wonder. She took me out behind their cabin to show me what she called 'Little Garden of God.' And that garden! It was a garden of dead children. Fourteen carven slabs rose over fourteen little mounds of earth, and each was a token of love and fervent glory. Fourteen graves of fourteen little dead babies! Fourteen little lives gone, and the going of each life—in the story of Meleese Cummins—a chapter that no artist will ever paint and no man ever write. There were Indian babes, and half-breed babes, among them two that were all white, and the manner of their gathering in that Little Garden of God was not unbelievable in the dead of winter, or in the heat of summer. Meleese would go to the sick. And especially far would she go to a little child. 'One time when I was away,' said Cummins to me, 'Meleese went fifty miles alone through a great storm with her dogs because a little child was dying, and when the baby died she brought it back, and laid it out there in the Garden! Again and again Meleese Cummins did that, saving scores, and wherever she could bringing the tiny dead back with her to her cabin home.

"It seems too terribly lonely to have their little bodies out under the deep snow of the forest, with the storm howling down, and the wolves hunting,' she said to me; 'I also they must be happier here with me.'

The crown prince of Germany is a father for the fifth time. But the latest child will never be a German soldier-butcher. "It a girl.

MRS. MARY HARRIMAN (above) MRS. HETTY GREEN (below)

These are the two richest women in the world. The fortune of Mrs. Mary Harriman, widow of E. H. Harriman, is estimated at $175,000,000. That of Mrs. Hetty Green's is believed to be next, amounting to about $100,000,000. Mrs. Margaret Sage, widow of Russell Sage, is a close third, with about $90,000,000.

Each of these women, though left with a large sum of money, has shown her ability, not only to increase it, but to spend it wisely. Each seems to possess the remarkable business capabilities which made the husband a giant of the financial world.

Aside from great wealth, both women possess a remarkable personality which distinguishes them. They are interested in the workers and the working of the world, doing something definite to help; contributing largely and constantly to many philanthropic and charitable.

SWITZERLAND'S SOLDIERS

Every Male Trained From Boyhood For Military Service

The statement made by a German officer that it was only by a close vote of two votes that the General Staff decided to cross the Belgian frontier rather than invade Switzerland calls attention to the magnificent fighting force which Switzerland is able to place in the field. The Kaiser and his Huns, in fact, would have found Switzerland a hard nut to crack; for, apart from the mountainous conditions of the country, which would make the task of the invader particularly arduous, every man and boy in Switzerland is a marksman, and, barring cripples and imbeciles, is trained to defend his country. Partial physical disability excuses a man from military service, and those exempted or rejected are made to pay certain taxes towards the upkeep of the army.

Every male really begins his military training when he is ten years of age, when for two years, as part of his school work, he is put through rigid physical training which includes calisthenic drills. In his thirteenth year he becomes a cadet, and when he is fourteen he receives his rifle and instruction in how to use it.

During the next three years he has an hour of military drill every day, and two hours' rifle practice a week, and after his seventeenth birthday joins a military unit in his town or district, and receives training under the direction of active and reserve officers of his community. This means about five hours a week given to military drill.

Actual service commences at the age of twenty, and from then until he is forty-five every man is systematically trained and held in readiness for war.

Altogether Switzerland within three days can mobilize 250,000 trained and thoroughly equipped soldiers. Within another seven days she can raise her first line of 200,000, and still have in reserve 150,000 soldiers past the first service age, and 200,000 cadets in training.

Special War Tax Stamps Called For on Thursday

Instructions are Officially for the Guidance of the Public—Telling Who Pays Costs

OTTAWA, April 13.—The special war taxes which will apply to the general public in Canada, will go into effect immediately after midnight on Wednesday. Much inconvenience, as well as the danger of avoiding a penalty, can be avoided by a knowledge of some of the more important requirements of the law by which the taxes are levied so they are appended:

The new taxes apply to bank cheques, railway, steamship, parlor car, and sleeping berth tickets; letters, postcards and all kinds of mail matter, except open letters and circulars; telegraph and cable messages, and money orders.

WHERE STAMP TAX IS REQUIRED

A stamp tax of two cents is required on every cheque receipt for money paid on account by the bank, acknowledging a deposit to his or her credit (including a savings bank receipt), or travellers' cheque; and on every promissory note or bill of exchange transferred to the bank, so as to make the bank the holder, or lodged with it for collection.

The stamp tax on cheques, drafts, etc., must be affixed in the case of a cheque by the person who issues it; in the case of a draft or money order, etc., by the issuing bank.

Stamps on promissory notes or bills of exchange lodged with or transferred to the bank must be affixed by the person lodging the item.

Stamps on such items must be cancelled by the bank which pays or received the item.

Stamps on bank drafts and bank money orders are to be cancelled by the paying bank.

The law has no authority to affix the stamp to a cheque, promissory note or bill of exchange for a customer, but may sell stamps for this purpose.

THE PENALTIES

A penalty of $50 is provided for the person who issues a cheque or bank or savings' bank receipt without affixing a stamp; and of $100 for the bank which issues any item which should be stamped without a stamp, or does not cancel the stamp on cheques, receipts for money, bills of exchange or promissory notes, etc., when paying them.

The person issuing a cheque, note or bill must affix the two cent stamp or the bank will have to cancel. A cheque must be cancelled at or before the time of payment; a bill or promissory note at the time the bill or note is transferred or delivered to the bank. When the act comes into operation there will, no doubt, be many cheques presented at banks that day and probably the next day or two without stamps, if the cheques have been bona fide issued prior to April 16, no stamps need be affixed. Bank tellers can, no doubt, tell with reasonable certainty when the cheque has left the maker's hands. If the cheque left the maker's hands, that is, was issued, before the 15th, no stamp will be required. If, however, the cheque leaves the makers hands on or after the 15th, the stamp will be required, no matter what the date on the cheque is.

Desperate Attack By the Russians

Austrians are Forced Back After Twelve Hours Hard Fighting

(Canadian Press Special)

LEMBERG, April 14.—In a desperate attack by the Russians on the right flank of the Austrian position at Mezolaborcz, on the Hungarian side of the east Beskid Mountains, about five miles south of Przemysl, the Austrians were forced after a twelve hours' battle, to make a precipitate retreat. The whole main crest of this mountain which the Austrians considered impregnable, is now in Russian hands.

ZEPPELIN THROWS BOMBS NEAR BELGIAN FRONTIER

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 14.—This afternoon's official statement says a calm was generally maintained along our front throughout yesterday. A Zeppelin threw bombs on Bailleul, near the Belgian frontier. Its objective was our aviation ground, but this was not hit. Three civilians were killed.

Two German aeroplanes were forced to come to the ground within our lines, one near Braine and the other near Longueval. The aviators were taken prisoners. A third German flying machine, winged by the fire of our advance posts, fell near Ornes, to the north of Verdun, 600 yards from our lines. One of the aviators was hit by a bullet.

AGED COUPLE ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Stockdale, in Murray Tp., Scene of Distressing Event—Shop and Residence a Prey to Devouring Element—Inmates Overcome and Perish

The Village of Stockdale, in Murray Township, Northumberland County, was at an early hour this morning the scene of a distressing occurrence, resulting in the cremation of an aged couple. It appears that about 2 o'clock this morning the inhabitants of the peaceful hamlet of Stockdale, were rudely awakened by an explosion which was heard for some distance. The same time a frame building used as a store and dwelling, by Mr and Mrs. George Kilbanks, an aged couple over seventy years of age, was discovered to be on fire. In a few minutes a number of the inhabitants of the place were upon the scene, and it was ascertained that Mr. and Mrs. Kilbanks were in the burning building which at this time was enveloped in flames. The fire had gained such a foothold upon the building that it was useless to attempt to effect a rescue and in consequence the inmates were burned to death. When the flames had completed the destruction of the place, only the charred remains of the aged couple were found. How the fire occurred is only supposition. Mr. Kilbanks conducted the store and it is said had been in feeble health. It is surmised that Mrs. Kilbanks at an early hour this morning was about the premises with a lamp and possibly allowed the same to fall, or it exploded. The explosion resulting from the fire was no doubt caused by a large tank used in storing coal oil. Nothing whatever was saved from the store or building.

Mr. and Mrs. Kilbanks had lived in Stockdale many years and were much respected by all who knew them. Miss Georgie Davidson who resides at Stockdale is an adopted daughter of the victims, and the only surviving member of the family. For a number of years Mr. Kilbanks was postmaster of the village, but of recent years the post office had been discontinued.

The terrible affair has cast a gloom not only over the inhabitants of the village, but the surrounding community.

Attacked in the Darkness

Russians Everywhere Met Assaults With Bayonet and Maintained Upper Hand

PETROGRAD, April 14.—Special—The following official communication from General Headquarters was issued last night:

"On April 11 and 12 the battle in the Carpathians developed with great intensity from the direction of Bartfeld in the region of Stropko. Our corps advanced on both banks of the Ondawa, south of Stropko. They captured several heights to the north east of Telepczh, and gained a victory in the direction of Uszok, where after extremely desperate fighting, the heights in the region of the villages of Bukovitz, Beneff and Vyszkoniny fell into our hand.

"We captured in this section 2,200 prisoners, including fifty officers, and we took one gun and twenty machine guns.

"On the heights south of Volosatie, especially in the region of Kosiowka, the enemy delivered impetuous attacks in great strength. All of them were repulsed with enormous losses to the enemy.

"Bukowina: On an extended front in the direction of Zale Berezy (north of Czernowitz) the enemy on the night of the eleventh delivered furious attacks in an impenetrable darkness and torrential rain, but everywhere our infantry, who met the attacks with bayonets maintained the upper hand.

"On the front west of the Niemen we repulsed several German attacks. In the other sectors along the whole of our front collision between reconnoitring detachments have become more frequent".

ITALIAN OFFICERS GET A WAR ORDER.

Rome, April 13.—An order is printed in The Military Journal directing all army officers to fold the metal on their sword forms and side scabbards of their swords. This is a measure which usually is adopted on the eve of war.

KAISER AT ANTWERP.

London, April 14.—(Special)—Emperor William and Crown Prince Frederick William visited Brussels last Saturday and later went to Antwerp and inspected the German submarine works at Hoboken, says The Daily Telegraph's Boulogne correspondent.

Queen's Fan Brings $1,650 For Red Cross

Crowning Incident of Benefit Auction Sale at Christie's in London

LONDON, April 14.—The crowning incident of today's auction sale at Christie's, in aid of the Red Cross Funds, was the sale and resale of a fan presented by Queen Mary. The production of the fan by the auctioneer was the signal for applause from the crowded room, and this increased in volume as the bidding rose rapidly from $50 to $950. At this figure it was knocked down, but the purchaser, amid applause, at once offered it for another auction, expressing the hope that it would fetch more than she had given for it. Somebody began the second bidding for the Queen's gift at $940 and amid enthusiasm unusual in an auction room it went up to $700, at which price the hammer fell.

The multi-jeweled treasure was a tortoise-shell fan set with her Majesty's monogram in diamonds surmounted by a gold crown. Thus the Queen's fan realized $1,650 for fund.

The best jewellery turnover of the day was $600 for a necklace of 223 pearls, which was started at $15 before some of the intending buyers had time to think. The day's sale realized $11,810.

LUMBER PLANT DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Special)

WINDSOR, Ont., April 14.—Fire early this morning destroyed the mill of John Pigeot & Sons, a large lumber firm, with plants here and at Chatham. The lumber in the yard, as well as nearby buildings, including St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, which were threatened, were saved by the firemen's efforts. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

DEATH FROM EXPLOSION

(Canadian Press Special)

VANCOUVER, April 14.—An explosion at 1760 Third Avenue West late last night wrecked the building, causing the death of at least one inmate and injury to several. At the moment of the explosion two men were seen to run from the house, jump into an automobile and drive off quickly.

Canadians are Called for in Air Service

Candidates Must Obtain Own Certificate at Aviation School—Thirty Are Until Sat.

OTTAWA, April 14.—The following memo was issued by the naval air service department today:

Volunteers are required for the royal naval air service. Selected candidates after receiving training in Canada will be despatched at once to England.

Men desirous of being considered for selection must be generally between 21 and 23 years of age and in no case over 30.

They should apply to one of the following officers either by letter or personally: Secretary Department of the Naval Service, Ottawa; captain in charge H. M. C. dockyard, Halifax; Esquimalt, from whom further details will be supplied.

Selected candidates will be required to obtain their own Aero Club certificate at their own expense, but after arrival in England and proving to the satisfaction of the admiralty their competence an allowance up to $250 will be refunded to them on account of the expense incurred in gaining the certificate.

On obtaining this certificate volunteers will be rated chief petty officer, third grade, and sent to England. Promotion for commission will be made in England.

British Warships Enter Dardanelles

Battleship London and Destroyer Draw Turkish Fire—Triumph Quiets Ratery

LONDON, April 14.—(Special)—Reuter's Tenedos correspondent, telegraphing Tuesday, April 13, says:

"The British torpedo-boat destroyer Renard entered the Dardanelles yesterday on a scouting mission and ran up the straits a high speed for more than ten miles, penetrating the waterway probably farther than any of the British ships have yet done. A heavy fire was directed at her, but the destroyer was not hit.

"The British battleship London, which followed the destroyer into the straits, drew most of the enemy's fire. The batteries on the Asiatic side, especially the howitzers behind Erenkeui, were active, but those on the European side were quiet. Possibly the Turks have withdrawn part of their artillery on the European side in order to be able to mass it quickly at any spot the allied armies may choose for a landing.

"The Asiatic battery bombarded by the Triumph on Saturday apparently is permanently out of action.

"The weather is rainy and murky, hindering reconnaissance."

The Daily News has the following from Athens: At Adrianople 20,000 Turkish Bulgarian troops are repairing and putting up fortifications under the direction of Gen. Von Sander. These repairs are intended, it is supposed, to facilitate the advance on the part of the Russians.

To Find Out Truth of Conditions

Hopes Prisoners in Germany are Treated as Well as Those Held by British

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 14.—Announcing in the House of Commons that the British Foreign Office had requested the American ambassador in London to telegraph to the American ambassador in Berlin to find out what truth there was in the reported German reprisals, Mr. Tennant, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, added: "If this report be true, we can only hope that German papers will be equally true as well as are the crews of captured submarines in this country."

Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies, promised that the dominions would be consulted fully in regard to the terms of peace.

Harold J. Tennant, Under-Secretary of War, gave what was regarded as a possible clue to the intentions of the Government concerning the drink question. He said that beer was the only intoxicant now permitted in canteens and that it was not the intention of the authorities to prohibit its sale.

Premier Asquith said the House would sit only three days next week.

Intervention by Italy Assured

Said to Have Reached Understanding With Allies on Various Questions

ROME, April 14—Special—The Cabinet Council today decided several important military measures, the nature of which is withheld, but they are undoubtedly connected with Italian intervention in the war, which any Austro-German effort now is absolutely powerless to arrest.

I am informed from an authoritative source that negotiations have been successfully initiated between the allies and Italy as a prelude which settlement of various questions which it is necessary to decide before the intervention comes.

The exact important of these questions is that of a Serbian port on the Adriatic. This has been practically solved and Italy's rights fully recognized, aspirations guaranteed and the protection of her interests assured.

The time when Italy will join the allies is not far distant, but it is not likely to be prolonged beyond the beginning of May.

It is possible that intervention may be announced in Parliament re-opens on May 12, although, according to the Constitution, the King is entitled to declare war by his Government's approval not being necessary.

More Art Treasures.

PARIS, April 13.—The Temps says the Italian Government has removed all the art treasures from the museums and churches in Venice to Florence. It is believed that the Austrian fleet could bombard Venice if war is declared. The newspaper says the transfer took place at night in order that the population might not be alarmed.

"ONE OF YOU MUST RETURN."

London, April 14.—Special—The following story is told by the Sheffield Daily Telegraph—"K. of K." heard that a distinguished and recently married officer was being visited by his wife at his headquarters in the field. "One of you must come home," was Lord Kitchener's wire.

If the war will kindly stand aside a few days there will be hardly anything to mar the opening of the baseball season.

LAYING MINES SUNK BY BRITISH PATROL

How Rumors of a Naval Engagement in North Sea Originated —A True Explanation

LONDON, April 14.—(Special.)—A correspondent understands that there has been no naval fighting in the North Sea. The true explanation of the origin of the reports to this effect is that a patrolling squadron frustrated by gunfire an attempt by the Germans to lay mines in immense numbers by means of trawlers.

The squadron sighted numerous apparently innocent trawlers flying the Norwegian flag. The weather was thick and the density of the fog in part of the area resulted in a collision between one of the British warships and a trawler. The latter was instantly blown up by a terrific explosion. The other trawlers tried to escape, but were pursued and captured. It was then discovered that they were German mines, whereupon they were sunk by gunfire. Both with the huge explosions of the trawlers gave a vivid impression of a battle. The incident is additionally interesting in view of the endeavors to again raise the cry of Great Britain's misuse of neutral flags.

THIRTY-THREE THOUSAND BRITISH WOMEN ENROLLED FOR WORK

LONDON, April 14.—Special.—Thirty-three thousand women had registered themselves for special war service up to the end of March. This statement was made tonight by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, to a deputation representing the various women's societies in London.

Six thousand of the women, Mr. Runciman said, had declared themselves willing to work in armament factories, four thousand in clothing factories, 1,700 in dairy work, 500 as gardeners, 2,000 in various branches of agricultural work, 1,000 as shop assistants, 600 as leather workers and 5,000 in clerical work. Six hundred women had registered with the Government at the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman added.

The Government, the speaker continued, insisted that women employed on Government contracts be paid the same piece rate as men. The Government had arranged to give women willing and qualified to undertake dairy or agricultural work a fortnight's training in agricultural colleges, paying them meanwhile $5 per week as a living allowance.

Sylvia Pankhurst urged that the Government should take measures to secure for women in whatsoever capacity they are employed the same pay as men receive.

FEDERAL LANDS GAVE A GOLDEN PROFIT

Pedley, Smart and White Had Ingenious System of Handling Tenders—Obliging Trio Allowed Names to be Used—Other Startling Revelations

OTTAWA, April 14.—(Special)—The remaining reports of Commissioner T. R. Ferguson were tabled today and they contain a mass of very damaging evidence concerning the alienation of the natural resources of western Canada under the late administration. One report deals with the trafficking in Indian lands by three government officials, Frank Pedley, James A. Smart, and W. J. White, in which they made $54,000 profit out of Moose Mountain Indian Reserve lands.

The commissioner states that hundreds of blank tenders were sent from Ottawa to Toronto to be filled in, and then returned to the department, where nearly all were accepted. It is stated that Pedley, then deputy superintendent-general of Indian affairs; White, immigration inspector, and Smart, deputy minister of the interior, had formed a partnership for purchasing and reselling Indian lands, which were offered for sale by the government. Smart, A. C. Bedford Jones, a Toronto lawyer, tendered for them and held the lands for them. A deed of trust, providing for this said that Mr. Bedford Jones was to be the only tender in their own names.

Bedford Jones did not tender personally, but employed others to do so. The first tender, dated Nov. 11, 1902, was put in by R. B. Beaumont, G. W. Marsh and C. E. McKenzie, on behalf of Bedford Jones.

The evidence showed that Smart or Pedley brought the blank tenders to Toronto, where the descriptions of the quarter sections and the amounts tendered were filled in at Bedford Jones' office. Between three hundred and four hundred tenders, they put in were all successful except a dozen or so.

The evidence shows that before these tenders were offered, two reports as to the value of the lands had been made to the department.

Smart, Pedley and White bought 45,000 acres in the Moose Mountain Reserves, paying $18,550, and selling two years later at a profit of $57,150. They also made $8,155 on the Churchill-Qu'Appelle Indian Land, and $18,000 on lands in reserve 40.

The commissioner points out that an extension of one week for receiving tenders for the former lands, ordered by Mr. Smart, enabled the partners to get their tenders in.

Before these land deals were completed Mr. Smart was promoted from deputy superintendent general of Indian affairs to deputy minister of the interior, while Mr. Pedley was promoted from superintendent of immigration to deputy superintendent general of Indian affairs.

In 1903 these three men formed a land company and the commissioner shows that they advertised in circulars that "we also have exceptional facilities for dealing with government lands and saving as parliamentary agents for same."

The commissioner adds that apart from their legal liability the conduct of these men while permanent officials, was highly improper. He recommends that measures be taken to prevent such a thing in the future.

W. J. White is the only one of the three still in the government service. The report says that he improperly used his position as immigration inspector to place the lands at sale with various real estate brokers and others, including other officers and employes of the Dominion Government, chiefly in the United States.

The commissioner states that there

Strikes Cotton From Contraband

British Government Has Decided Against Bringing It Under This Head

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, April 14.—The British Government has decided against placing cotton on the contraband list.

General Headquarters of the British Army in France.—In the trenches along the British front, officers and men alike are resting today. It is the last month at Neuve Chapelle. The officers characterize this British victory as likely to be recorded as one of the greatest local successes of the war.

The misgivings in England with regard to the British losses at Neuve Chapelle are hardly justified in view of the advantage gained, in the opinion of staff officers at the front. One officer emphasized the strategic importance of this dent in the German line said the Germans in six weeks attempted to drive they continued to hold Neuve Chapelle, thus flanking the British on the north and south, whould have inflicted losses equal to those sustained by the latter on the memorable March morning. Thus the British would in a short time have lost as many men, the speaker declared, without the physical and moral advantage scored by the apart forward.

DUTCH COMMAND OBEYED BY MAIN

THE HAGUE, April 14.—(Special)—It is announced semi-officially that the German steamer Main, which had been lying in port at Flushing since the war began, left there yesterday for Antwerp. The Dutch Government, it is asserted, discovered that the steamer was contraband, by wireless with German submarines and ordered her to leave Flushing.

WM. McINTOSH & CO.

A CANADIAN ABROAD

Head of O.A.C. Records Some Impressions of Antipodes

President G. C. Creelman of the Ontario Agricultural College travelled 9,600 miles by ocean and by rail in visiting Japan, China, New Zealand and Australia, and in a sort of bird's-eye sketch of the trip, noted the following points as of interest to Canadians:

There are 150,000,000 people on the American side of the Pacific, and 800,000,000 on the other. The trade that is being developed between these masses will one day be one of the great factors in the world's commerce.

In New Zealand the pastures are green all the year round. The Maoris of New Zealand are the most interesting of native races. Seventy years ago they were cannibals. Today they are in the pulpits, in the courts, often pleading the cases of white clients, and in the cabinet itself.

In Canterbury Plains you can strike water anywhere by driving a pipe down six feet. In the city of Christchurch every house is supplied by water, under pressure, which is piped from its own back yard.

Australia covers an area equal to three-fourths the size of Europe. Ninety-nine out of 100 of the people living there are native born, or relatives of the British Isles.

The Commonwealth is all agricultural. All the boots and shoes, all the socks and hats used there, even the sash and glass for the windows are imported.

Climatic conditions vary greatly. In some parts there is a rainfall of 80 inches in a year and in other parts severe droughts lasting for months. In a parched district Prof. Creelman was offered a sheep for twelve cents and a young horse for a shilling. Even in such districts, however, after a rain, the whole country will be in bloom in a few days.

Horse racing is the national sport. There are sixteen race tracks in Sydney, and they try to have four meets a year each.

Love of country is a distinguishing feature of Australian's life. In Melbourne 1,500 trains leave for the country daily, and in the morning as people troop back to the city from their country homes they are all carrying bouquets clipped from their own gardens. It is like a great floral procession.

In Japan the size of the average farm is two and a half acres, and a hand tool is the one implement of cultivation. There and in China work on the farm goes on from the first streak of dawn to the last gleam of evening sun.

In China, in the opinion of people who have lived there for sixty years, all the missionary effort that has been put forth has had no more effect than the scratch of a pin. It is hard to produce much effect on a mass of 400,000,000 with 40 centuries of inherited traditions. Not four per cent. of the people there know of the late Chinese revolution. Not four per cent. know whether they are under an empire or in a republic.

SOME TASTY SOUPS

Milk and Cheese Soup

Three cupfuls of milk, or part milk and part stock, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of grated cheese, salt and paprika.

Thicken the milk with the flour, cooking thoroughly. This is best done in a double boiler, with frequent stirrings. When ready to serve, add the cheese and the seasoning.

The proteids in this soup are equal in amount to those in five-sixths of a pound of beef of average composition; its fuel value is higher than that of a pound of beef.

Cheese and Vegetable Soup

Two cupfuls of stock, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped carrots, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, a very little mace, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one cupful of scalded milk, one-half cupful of grated cheese.

Cook the vegetables a short time in one-half of the butter, add the stock and the mace, boiling 15 or 20 minutes. Strain and add the milk. Thicken with flour cooked in the remaining butter. Just before serving, stir in the cheese and cook until it is melted.

A gingham frock for a little girl. Simple little white or gingham dresses can easily be fashioned from old blouse waists.

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE

One Great Man Always Remembered Her Bible Reading

The famous English orator, John Bright, was asked how he came to be such a master of the art of public speaking. He answered that the only help he ever had in that direction he got by listening to his mother read the Bible.

She was accustomed to read the Bible aloud to the children, and he was so fascinated he said, by her way of reading that he had tried ever since to imitate it.

John Bright became a great statesman, who carried out the teachings of the Bible in a noble and helpful life. Such was the power of his eloquence that he brought about great and beneficent changes in the laws of England.

What is Transpiring Among the Soldier Boys at Belleville and Kingston.

All articles and notes under this head are passed by the commanding officer of the 59th Regiment and authentic in every particular.

BELLEVILLE

A number of tents and beds were sent to Belleville by the Ordnance Corps, Kingston, for the purpose of quarantining meningitis suspected carriers.

Major-General Lessard, who inspected the batteries at Kingston, Monday, arrived in this city last evening, and today reviewed the 39th Battalion, pronouncing himself well pleased with conditions. He goes from here to Ottawa, where he will inspect the 38th Battalion.

KINGSTON

Among the Queen's students who left Saturday to go into training with the University company at Montreal, was Harold P. Hill, Peterboro, who has qualified for a lieutenant, and may obtain a commission in the 38th Battalion. He held a prominent place in athletics in Peterboro and while here played halfback on Queen's rugby team, and was also on the basketball team.

Vancouver, of the biz. open-handed west, is making a todo over spending $175,000 for the darning of the past winter. Pshaw! it needs to travel east to learn what real, unostentatious charity is.

The machine guns purchased by the penitentiaries of the Dominion for Lt.-Col. Hughes are in the city and will be publicly presented some time this week.

Captain Gardiner, A.D.M.S., has returned from Belleville and was at his office in the Armouries yesterday morning. Captain Gardiner feels perfectly satisfied with conditions in Belleville, and said the 39th Battalion are doing very well.

TWO MILLION ACRES OF AGRICULTURAL LAND FOR SETTLERS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The interior of Central British Columbia has a vast area of rich soil and enjoys splendid climatic conditions. It has hitherto been practically closed to settlement owing to lack of transportation facilities, but with the completion of the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through to Prince Rupert, is now attracting attention from experienced colonizers, who realize the great possibilities of this new district.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, while it has not an acre of agricultural land for sale, has just issued a comprehensive booklet of information for intending settlers, with a map showing the good localities and the various localities in rural districts in the Coast districts of British Columbia, as well as the Central Interior and is called "Plateau and Prairie Lands." Copies may be had free from Grand Trunk Agents.

KING AND KID

The King sat on his jeweled throne, and he heaved a sigh. It was not a groan, for his crown was hard, and it bruised his head, and his sceptor weighed like a pig of lead; the ladies fanned as they sat in a heap; the knights were pulling the royal leg. The king exclaimed: "If I had my wish, I would cut this out, and I'd go and fish. For what is going on is a sorry and sad yearns and yearns for the fishing hole; the throne's a bore and the crown a steel, and I long for the lot for a hamboo rod, and a can of worms and a piece of string—but there's no such luck for a one-old king." And a boy who passed by the palace high, to fish for trout in the streamlet nigh, looked at the king in the palace walls, and caught a glimpse of the marble halls, and he said to himself: "Oh, bully chee! Wish I was the king, and the kids in the set; we'd all day with your crown on straight is a whole lot better'n digin' bait and fishin' round the fish was wont bite, and gettin' licked for your luck at night.

GERMANS WENT DOWN AS WHEAT BEFORE THE SICKLE

Dead and Dying Lay Piled High After Fierce Attack Near Albert—The Kaiserites Showed Magnificent Courage as They Went to Death Shoulder to Shoulder, Before Murderous Fire

NORTH OF FRANCE, April 13.—The German attack near Albert on Saturday and Sunday was undoubtedly intended as a counter-stroke to the French successes in the Argonne and at Les Eparges, which carries with it a menace to the great fortress of Metz itself.

The battle opened Saturday with the blowing up of some of the French trenches by German mines, more particularly in the wood of Thiepval, which is situated some four miles north of the Albert. Towards nightfall several encounters with the bayonet took place, in which the Germans left many dead on the field.

All through Saturday night, and particularly from 12.45 to 4 o'clock in the morning, the battle raged in earnest. The cannonading was the most violent that had been experienced in this sector since the fighting at La Boiselle two months ago. So tremendous was the firing of guns that it merged into a continuous thunder. In this artillery duel the powerful French guns prevented the German reinforcements from pushing forward en masse.

As always the German attacking troops showed magnificent courage. Again and again, in shoulder-to-shoulder work the men were launched forward with their "hochs!" as they charged, sounding like the roar of some ferocious beast of prey, but their cheering was soon drowned by the deafening rattle of the French rifles and machine-guns, which, fanned by the clearness of the night, poured an accurate and devastating fire into their ranks.

"They fell," said one who took part in the affair, "like wheat before the sickle, but as one line of them was mown another took its place, only to suffer the same fate. This massacre—for it was nothing else—went on for some hours. The ground in front of the French trenches at this moment is piled high with German dead and dying in their deaths."

On Sunday morning the cannonade slackened off a little, only to become fierce in the early part of the afternoon. At the moment of writing this artillery duel is diminishing in intensity.

One can hardly imagine the French lines breaking before it. Even yesterday's battlegrounds, for example, from Thiepval northward, for six miles or seven miles as the crow flies, the quantity of artillery in action, that if one had been allowed a free hand, there would have been no space between them. It was, have been so, but for the fact that the means of destruction from hell to end of the fighting line.

What adds to the value of this German reverse is that the French losses were comparatively slight.

Sergeant (disgustedly to Private Jones)—"Stop! Don't waste your last bullet." Nineteen are quite enough to blaze away without hitting the target once. Go behind that wall there and blow your brains out."

Jones walked quietly away and a few seconds later a shot rang out.

"Good heavens! has the fool done what I told him?" cried the sergeant, running behind the wall. Great was his relief when he saw Private Jones coming towards him.

"Sorry, sergeant," he said apologetically; "another miss".

MELVILLE.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Chase on Wednesday, April 7th, when their eldest daughter, Miss Gladys Blanche, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Arthur Hough, of Dufferin, by Rev. E. H. Harston officiating. The bride was charming in a gown of white chiffon-voille, with silk embroidered tunic, her only ornament being a necklace of amethysts. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony. After congratulations, dainty refreshments were served, after which the bridal couple accompanied by Mr. Percy Chase, brother of the bride, and Miss Vera Arkett, Bloomfield, drove to Consecon, where they entrained for their brief honeymoon. The bride's going away gown was of navy blue serge with white silk blouse. She wore a hat of white, with rose-colored crown and white rose mount.

On Friday evening a post-nuptial reception was held at the home of Mrs. W. Hough, in honor of the bride and groom. The house was prettily decorated on their return from their wedding trip. They will reside on the latter farm at Burr's.

Our school reopened on Monday after the Easter holidays, Miss Knapp, Frankford, resuming her duties as teacher.

HORACE E. YEOMANS "PAT" WRITES GRAPHIC EXPERIENCES

North France, March 21.

Dear Mamma,—

We got three more letters lately and thank you all for them very much. I have not had the chance to write as often or as fully lately as I would have liked, for many very good reasons, one being that we have been so busy for the last two weeks that we could scarcely turn around.

You see our job is to keep up two telephone lines and to man the instruments connected with them night and day so that messages may be sent from headquarters to any battery or from one battery to another, or from the battery to its "forward observing officer" at any minute. One line connects us with brigade headquarters and runs over to the farm-house in which they are established and the other runs down to the trenches, immediately in the rear of which the forward observation station is. There are only nine telephonists and three have to be at the P. O. O. all the time, so we are divided into groups of three, each three working a day and night at the battery, going out to relieve the men at P. O. O. for a second night and day and resting on the third day and night. This means that we get one night's sleep out of each three and work also one day's rest out of each three. Then besides this the lines must be patrolled every night and morning to keep the line in good condition and to keep outsiders from tapping in on it. You can see that we have no cinch. Of course we generally manage to snatch a couple of hours sleep when we are not actually at the phone, but it doesn't count for very much.

The dugouts in the top of which our observation station is—or one of them—is also the headquarters for the battalion of infantry in the trenches about three or four hundred yards ahead, and today it was the second battalion Ted and I both saw Lieut. Ponton and Capt. O'Flynn and had long chats with them. You see two battalions use the trenches ahead of that spot,—the second and the fourth, one relieving the other and each one staying in the trenches for four days at a time. All the Belleville boys are in the second and I will likely see more of them. Melville Clarke is the crack shot of the battalion and the chief sniper also. They say he is a wonderful shot and he made some fine records at Salisbury Plains. Both Lieut. Ponton and Capt. O'Flynn are looking fine and apparently as healthy and as fit as the day they left. I was certainly mighty glad to see them, and hope I am able to see the rest of them soon.

Last night we had an accident for which I am extremely sorry. Every night three telephonists, one officer, and a couple of grub go out to the P. O. O. to relieve those who have been on duty for the previous twenty-four hours. Last night Lieut. Thackeray, Ted, another chap named Lewis and myself went out and had just relieved the others who had started back. There has been a good deal of sniping at telephonists going on all along here, especially lately, and Mr. Thackeray, as he usually does, put it on the dugout table beside us, saying, "If there is a breakdown on the line any time after this, I want two of you to go out together and to take my gun." He then took the gun out of its holster to show it to us—it was a Colt automatic 45—removed the clip of cartridges from the handle and snapped the trigger, forgetting about the one cartridge left in the chamber. It hit the inside of his left foot and passed right through and out of the instep, and it all happened so quickly that none of us knew what had happened. It was a most unnatural thing to do and is not the first time I have heard of it happening, but it has put him out of business for a month anyway. We applied temporary First Aid and hustled him up to the First Field Ambulance Advanced Station, where he was dressed up and sent in to one of the hospitals. He may probably have to go back to England until well, and the whole thing is very sorry, as he was so well liked and popular with the men. He was the very last person you would expect to do such a thing, and I don't know what he could have been thinking of. He didn't notice the pain of the wound at all, so disgusted was he with himself. I think I had better pass on to a more agreeable bit of news.

We have had two or three good games of BASEBALL lately and they sure do fit us well. We made all the equipment we have, including the ball, a bat, a decker and a field glove, and I've played with much worse things at home than these are. The decker in particular is a wonderful piece of work, I think, considering the things at our disposal. The last game was between the right section and the left and ended in a decided victory for the former by 21—8. I caught for the right section and certainly enjoyed it. We have a football up here too, now, and the first game will be, I think, with the Fourth Battery, Germans permitting.

The evening just at dusk, word was received here that the Allied Fleets had sailed through the Dardanelles, and you should have heard the infantry cheering in the trenches. They cheered for some time and then broke into "Rule Britannia," and the Germans answered with some song of theirs,—perhaps it was "Down Went McGinty."

Oh! We received the "Elevators" you so kindly mailed us and I think it is a mighty good edition. Those three war articles are worth taking some trouble to read. The whole tone of the magazine has certainly improved and the printing is excellent. Dick Ponton got one, too, and he can't praise it enough. The "Eulogies" in the front as he calls them, won't look like the same bunch when we get home, I'm thinking, for many reasons.

There has been all manner of aerial excitement today. This morning we saw a French plane chase a Taube back to its own lines and then the Germans commenced to shell the Frenchman. They had at least six guns turned on him at one time and he certainly did well to get back at all, for shells were bursting all around him, but he dodged and twisted and gradually flew out of range. Then this afternoon it was reported that two Zeppelins were in sight in the west, and for a long time we were on the lookout for them. They were, I think, captive balloons sent up for observation purposes and not Zeppelins.

I think the postage rate here is five cents, not two, and we have been told to tell those who are writing to us to take notice of it. You can make inquiries at the Post Office regarding it.

Well, good-bye for this time. With my love to all and thank you very much for the "Elevators."

Your son,

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of all Stomach Trouble Said to Be Due to Acidity

A Physicians Advice on Cause and Cure

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have caused him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine time out of ten to excessive acidity commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have accepted remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. "He continues that it is unnecessary to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Relieve the pain and the food will heal itself—neutralize the acid and the stomach troubles will disappear. Certain patent foods and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acid, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of water after meals, and before retiring in fifteen minutes if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

Came Over as Baseball Team

Superintendent of the Rumley Plant at Battle Creek Is Arrested

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., April 13.—On the charge of being in this country illegally, Edwin Maskell, superintendent of the M. Rumely plant, was this afternoon taken into custody by the local police today at the request of U.S. Immigration Inspector Fisher of Port Huron. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

Inspector Fisher claims that Maskell not only entered this country in violation of the alien labor law, but also brought with him a dozen men from Toronto classed as a baseball team.

The Rumely Co. operated a plant in Toronto, which has been closed. Maskell came here and has been acting as superintendent of the local plant. After being here some time he returned to Canada for his family and on his way back was refused admittance, it is stated, at Port Huron. Then, according to his own story, he entered this country at Detroit and had been here for some time before the officials at Port Huron realized it.

Some Extracts From a French Soldier's Letters to His English Wife

For the dead, we put their name on a piece of paper and put it in a bottle and place the bottle in the earth over the body, leaving just the neck out, so that after the war their relatives can find them.

There, of course, is often no time to do this, and in the forest, too, it would be almost impossible to find anybody.

The food still comes. We get more than ever. We get an hour o'clock in the morning, coffee; at eight o'clock, tea; at ten o'clock, soup, meat, vegetables, and coffee. At four o'clock in the afternoon, again soup, meat tables; and at ten or eleven o'clock at night hot wine—often twice. So, you see, we get plenty.

Tonight I am quite warm. We found a house. There is a little stove and some coal, and we can do our own cooking, so I am writing you to night in a proper table. We have got some wood against the door and windows, shut our eyes, and while I am sitting in a real chair I can almost imagine I am in our own dear little home. But the shells shake the place—it is not true, it is not true! But I am thankful for the comfort.

Today we have fallen back for five days' rest, and I am cooking for my captain in a house.

I am very excited, because last night I slept in a real bed. Yes, for only four months I have not seen one. You can tell I was pleased. I may stay here in the house for a while, if only our captain can stay longer without getting wounded again.

This is the third time he is wounded. Now, all our officers are madly brave. They go forward always before us, so, of course, they are not long to fall.

I have been speaking to the woman who will not leave her house, and who is next door. She has her husband in hospital; he is going to have his leg off. But she is thankful that he is safe. She said she prefers it than to know he will go back in the trenches again; she is now sure to have him back again with her.

I am still alive. Our last day of rest is gone, and with it the house I was telling you of. To-morrow at four o'clock I am back in the trenches again. I have been speaking with a comrade next me. He sees the happiness your letters give me, and he feels ashamed. He says he used to grumble at his wife and even often times he says, "it only" I had loved her like she deserved! I used not even to say 'thank you' to her when she did little things for me, but if I come back I will be a different man, I will show her how good I can be to her."

Thank God, my dear wife, we were never like this, and I have only the happy recollections of our happiness and desire to each other.

HOMESTEAD FRAUDS.

Liberal M.P. Implicated.—Read!

Watch the Liberal Press, and learn how they deal with the fraudulent acts of their friends, exposed in the Report of Mr. T. R. Ferguson, the Commissioner appointed to examine into the reported frauds in connection with the granting of homesteads and the malfeasance of officials of the Department of the Interior under the administration of Hon. FRANK OLIVER, which was tabled in the Commons on Saturday, the 10th inst. It makes a sensational story. Mr. Ferguson investigated matters relating to the disposition of Dominion lands, timber and mineral lands, Indian lands and Indian reserves. The portion of the report which was given to the House deals with:

(1) Robert Cruise, Liberal M.P. for Dauphin, Man., and W. A. Davis, lands and forest ranger.

(2) The Blood Indian Reserve and Frank Pedley, until recently Superintendent of Indian affairs.

The M.P.

The report shows that Robert Cruise represented himself as a "squatter" on a quarter section which now forms part of the Riding Mountain reserve in the Dauphin district. Cruise, it is stated, was not a "squatter," and obtained this homestead by fraud. In his evidence he admits that he never lived on the land in question, that his home was some miles away, and that for years prior to and subsequent to 1907 when he got the homestead he had lived on the same farm which is near Dauphin.

Davis, with whose connivance Cruise got the farm, and who was at that time chief forest ranger for the reserve in question, stated in his evidence that Cruise was not a "squatter," and was not entitled to fyle on this homestead.

A Fraudulent Deal.

The commissioner finds further that Mr. Cruise was not the owner of all the cattle mentioned in the homestead fyled in his behalf, and that he obtained his patent on an "improper representation" of the facts. The ownership of at least twenty head of cattle was necessary in order to qualify for a patent, and Mr. Cruise only owned thirteen head at the time. He effected a deal with a neighbor who owned seven head of cattle and gave a promissory note for them. Both the cattle and the note were returned after they had served the fraudulent purpose of the member for Dauphin.

Oliver's Orders.

It was brought out in evidence that Hon. Frank Oliver during one of his visits to Dauphin gave Mr. Herchemer, the Dominion lands agent at that point, instructions to grant whatever applications were signed by Davis as long as the "head office" stated they were available.

Davis Admits Fraud.

Mr. Herchemer, in his evidence, stated that he knew that many of the applications sent in by Davis were fraudulent, but said he had no option but to grant them.

Davis frankly admitted that he knew that hundreds of applications sent in by him were fraudulent, but said he allowed himself to be "used for the benefit of the party" in this matter. He described his assistants, Albert McLeod and Sam Cohen, as very "slick and capable workers," and in order to facilitate their work he signed a number of applications in blank and handed them over to his understudies. Davis swore he knew that both these men were sending in applications of men who were not squatters at all.

Fraudulent Orders by Hundreds.

Davis said that sixty per cent. of the recommendations he made for homesteads were fraudulent. Mr. Herchemer estimated the fraudulent entries made at that time as high as eighty per cent. of the total.

An idea of the magnitude of these frauds is obtained when it is borne in mind that hundreds of these applications were turned in. The application of the party test was the only test applied.

Mr. Ferguson points out that notwithstanding the fact that Mr. OLIVER'S attention had been drawn by one of the officials of his department to the suspicious work of Davis, his services were retained until the Government was changed.

R. E. A. Leach, of the "thing o' line" fame, was twice delegated by the late Government to investigate the work of Davis, and he reported that he found everything "alright."

Grazing Privileges.

The second division of Commissioner Ferguson's report has to do with the grazing privileges on the Blood Indian Reserve, near McLeod, Alta., and the connection therewith of Frank Pedley. In the year 1903 several applications were made for these privileges. One was made by George McLaughlin, of Toronto. They had reason for hoping that it would be granted, and went so far as to organize a cattle company and engage a foreman to look after their interests.

However, says the report, Mr. Pedley had other plans. An application on behalf of Donald McEwen, put in by a firm of Ottawa solicitors, Latchford, McDougal and Daly, and it is indicated that the application was really on behalf of Peter Ryan, of Toronto, with whom he had numerous transactions in recent years. McEwen, although his application came in the year after McLaughlin's got the grazing lease.

Pedley's Interests.

Mr. Pedley, who was still Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, became, according to the evidence, the beneficial owner of one-sixth interest in the Blood Reserve privilege, and became owner of this interest by virtue of an assignment of it to him by Peter Ryan. This one-sixth interest was held in trust for Frank Pedley by A. C. Bedford Jones, a Toronto lawyer, for a period of four years, when it was sold to Charles Miller for $1,000, which the money was paid over to Mr. Pedley, Mr. Ojnes retaining $100 for looking after the legal affairs.

Mr. Pedley admitted having received the $1,000, but refused to admit that Jones had been acting trustee for him.

It is understood that still more sensational evidence will be forthcoming within a few days.

It is to be hoped that these gents will be prosecuted and made to disgorge. If they are not, what is the use of expensive investigating commissions?

DENIES JUSTICE TO THE WEST.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's last refuge is always the Senate. Relegated into opposition by the vote of the people he is no longer supreme in the House of Commons. But with his well-appointed Senators he can and does obstruct progressive legislation. This Sir Wilfrid Laurier continues to do, knowing full well that when his control of the Senate ceases he will quickly fade into political obscurity. For this reason he has once again violated a solemn pledge, and is thwarting the will of the people in order to remain a political factor even if for only a few months longer.

Western Canada, according to Redistribution, is entitled to nine more Senators than it has at present. Provision to appoint these was made by the present Government in the 1914 session. But when the legislation for this purpose went before the Senate for the necessary confirmation, at the dictation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Senate amended the Act to the effect that the additional Senators could not be appointed "until after the next election." The western provinces were consequently deprived for an indefinite length of time of their just and proper representation in the Senate.

When the Redistribution Bill was before Parliament last year, the Liberals were given every possible concession in consideration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's specific promise that the Bill to increase western representation in the Senate would be permitted to become law. This promise, however, proved to be but a cunning move on the part of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the purpose of securing numerous concessions in the drafting of the Commons Redistribution. When the latter was completed Sir Wilfrid then turned around and deliberately and designedly repudiated his promise and ordered the Senate to refuse justice to the West.

Sir Robert Borden, commenting at the time upon the action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, declared it to be a "plain violation of an equally plain agreement."

THE BOOT ENQUIRY.

The report of the boot enquiry has been made public, and it is unfortunate that the party differences should be represented in the finding. This does not indicate that party principles in this country have risen as high as they ought to rise in war time.

Whatever may be said of the quality of the boots in question, there is nothing to indicate that the Militia Department was a party in any way to improper transactions, nor that any essential precaution was overlooked. Having regard to the short time allowed for manufacture, also, it cannot be said that our Canadian shoe manufacturers, on the whole, sinned in the quality of workmanship.

Undoubtedly, these boots were given a terrible gruelling both at Valcartier and Salisbury Plain, a gruelling that would test the best boots ever made. It seems to be established beyond question that the boots were not heavy enough, but this cannot be blamed upon the manufacturer or the Government. Our preparations for war service of this kind have been theoretical rather than practical because we have never seriously contemplated war. This is true not only in the case of boots but of other military supplies as well.

Our Militia Department ought to be in a position to act on quick notice in the purchase of all kinds of war supplies. It should be in a position to "cut off its own hair" also, and without recourse to outsiders, whose activities, in many cases, have not commended themselves to the public. Experience is a great teacher, and if we had to do this thing over again our first step would be equipped with better boots, of a heavier type, while all other necessary actions would be taken through well ordered channels.

One thing is sure. Our Canadian boot and shoe industry has been subjected to attentions not undeserved criticism. The flashy, of isolated individuals should not be visited upon a great industry which, on the whole, has stood up exceptionally severe test well.—Montreal Mail.

CURRENT COMMENT

Toronto News: "Mayor Church will make a fine recruiting officer. He is active service, and even contends that Toronto should pay its portion of the Provincial war taxes."

From the Ottawa Journal: "Napoleon or somebody equally annoyed declared that the British soldiers were lions led by asses. All wars have shown, but this last conflict has proved, that British soldiers are lions led by lions."

Hamilton Spectator: "'A uniformed crowd,' is the contemptuous appellation of Von Hindenburg to the British army. Before the summer is over he will learn that the British army force is adaptable of, and he will not relish the resultant crush."

Montreal Herald: "The German Government is reported to be making 'reprisals' against British prisoners. If this is true, the German is not using the peace terms lurider for herself. To quote the favorite text of Lord Fisher, "The God of revenge shall surely requite."

Miss Celestina Gohn, who has many friends in Toronto, is one of the military nurses at No. 2 Stationary Hospital at Le Touquet, France. With her is Miss Ridley, formerly of Toronto. They were met at Boulogne by Major Blood and Major Fisher of the 2nd hospital, which is to be used chiefly for wounded officers.

Fifty persons have been murdered in New York City since January 1 last, and the New York World thinks that if Lusitania had the privilege of having nearly all the murderers were put into force, there would be a falling off in the number of such crimes. Perhaps that is the correct view, but it certainly a fact, at any rate, that very few murderers pay the extreme penalty in New York and that there are many murders there.

British Still Has Faith in Ottawa

Premier Explodes False Impression Scattered By Liberal Leaders

OTTAWA, April 13.—In the Commons today Sir Wilfrid Laurier remarked that one of the reports of Mr. T. R. Ferguson had been tabled regarding his investigations, and he asked for the order-in-council showing Mr. Ferguson's powers.

The Prime Minister agreed to produce it. A very warm debate is expected to-morrow owing to the seriousness of the charges against members of the Opposition.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley asked about a press report that the British Government was sending buyers to Canada and would get no more supplies through the agency of the Government here. The article quoted suggested that this was due to the revelations about the binoculars and boots.

The Prime Minister replied: "The report is absolutely without foundation so far as I am aware. On the contrary, within the last four or five days the British Government has asked this Government to act in the securing of large quantities of war supplies." (Applause).

Italy Will Join Allies

This Action Certain, Says Mr. Louis Coste After Tour Abroad

OTTAWA, April 13.—A new and significant light upon the attitude of Italy with regard to the war is shed in a letter received here from Louis Coste, former member of the International Waterways Commission, and at one time Chief Engineer of the Department of Public Works.

Mr. Coste, who is at present in the States, has spent considerable time in the South of France. Writing to Mr. Edward S. Houston, manager of the Imperial Bank here, he says:

"I think Italy is bound to join the Allies. Before, I felt Marseilles, all Italian subjects between France and Italy, I will just say that the French authorities in every town or village in the south of France, had received orders to help the Italian Consuls to find and ship all Italians to their country. Furthermore, I know positively that a number of staff officers of the French army have been sent to Italy to confer on the plan of campaign."

Mr. Coste concludes this part of his letter with "and when the snows are melted we will hear the guns of the Tyrol and Trentino."

BIG GERMAN DIVIDENDS

Effect of War on Arms and Ammunition Concerns

BERNE, Switzerland, April 13.—German arms and ammunition factories, whose capital was doubled during the last year, are declaring dividends of 20 per cent. as compared with 12 per cent. in 1913. Many other German concerns, working for the army or navy, have either raised their dividends or show a large credit balance whereas before the war they were sometimes in considerable financial difficulties. For example, one India rubber works, which was in very low

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

"I, A. O. Norton, of Boston, Mass., have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood, and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some relieved for a time, but action was called to Zutoo Tablets and have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. If I feel they cure a 'cold' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. GOOD MILK, THE PROBLEM

The problem of milk quality was stated in a nutshell by C. G. Fuller at the last Eastern Convention. Here is an extract from his annual report which deals with the problem: "It seems, however, that the question of the percentage of fat in the milk is being neglected too much, as this year again we find that the average test for Eastern Ontario has been lowered by 0·09 per cent., and it has taken two-tenths of a pound more milk to make a pound of cheese than it did a year ago. Of course, the decreased yield of cheese has to a certain extent been due to the general shortage of the milk as affected by the hot weather, of which the last season had an unusual share. This question of milk supply as usual has been the greatest factor of our factory work, and probably will continue to be so for some years.

"Great strides have been made by many patrons in the caring for and cooling of their milk, but their labors have been partially lost by other patrons of the same factories failing to do likewise. The better patrons are asking, 'What is the use in our cooling our milk when our neighbors do not, and it all goes into the same vat.' This is something which the Dairymen's Association and its instructors must endeavor to solve, that is, some workable method by which the milk of all patrons will be cooled and properly cared for before it reaches the factory. This is our greatest dairy problem and the one to which we must look as a basis from which to further improvement in both the quality and quantity of the cheese output.

Feeding London

The British Navy and Canadian Railway Expansion

The present conflict in Europe has demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt that the maintenance of Britain's superiority at sea, and the expansion of the wheat areas in British Dominions, have been linked together as basic factors in the consideration of plans for imperial offense and defence. The lawmakers in London, as a matter of policy, have allowed nothing to interfere with the building up of an all-powerful navy, and they have steadfastly ignored the protests of Englishmen who have contended that Great Britain would be in an impossible position if a war should develop with a powerful maritime power. There were numerous men in England who believed that in the event of an important European struggle involving Great Britain, "the hunger of London would dictate terms of peace." But the Admiralty were convinced that the sea power of Britain would keep all the routes open for foodstuffs. The banks in the British Isles which might have been devoted to the growth of more wheat were left as before, and the investors of Britain by placing their funds in the bonds of railways in Canada, in South Africa, in Australia and in New Zealand, where vast stretches of fertile country remained to be opened up, encouraged the production of a steady supply of foodstuffs which might be called upon in case of emergency. The under-water craft of Germany have failed to throttle the shipping of Great Britain. Her ships come and go almost as they please. And the rendezvous of wheat lands, in themselves many times the area of the British Isles are available for the need of the people of Britain.

In facilitating the expansion of the various railway companies in the Dominion during the last thirty years, the successive governments, federal and provincial have enabled Canada to take up the burden of a great production in this year of the Empire's peril. Canada is measuring up to her advertised destiny as the "Granary of the Empire," or, more emphatic still, "Bread Basket of The World." The prophecies of leaders of thought for three decades are on the verge of fulfilment. The large exportable surplus of the wheat fields in Canada will go to feed a fair proportion of the dependent millions of England, and probably, the war-harassed Belgians as well. The railway lines which have been constructed east and west and north and south throughout the country have made her present position possible. Without these essential traffic arteries the Dominion would have been merely a helpless spectator while the greatest war in history run blod through to a conclusion. Canada's most important contribution to the cause of the Empire is in wheat and flour and bread.

The bulk of the supplies of Canadian wheat for export are drawn each year from the wheat fields of the prairie provinces. The total supply may be computed by a study of the carryings of railways. During the crop year 1913-4, the Canadian Northern alone handled from the territory served by its western lines, 47,195,000 bushels. Estimating the increase this year at 2? per cent, the C.N.R. should haul out approximately 56,750,000 bushels of wheat from the provinces lying between the Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains. That quantity of wheat, converted successively into flour, and into standard loves of bread, would feed Greater London, with its estimated population of 7,252,262, for more than four and a half years.

According to the millers, a barrel of flour 196 pounds, is made from 4½ bushels of wheat, and according to the bakers, 187 standard loaves of 24 ounces each, are made from one barrel of flour. The anticipated carryings on the Canadian Northern this season then represent 12,611,111 barrels and 2,358,577,737 loaves of bread. If this were divided in London each individual in the Imperial City would receive 325 loaves. If you divide the population of the capital into batches of three, each family would be provided with 975 loaves. Allowing a liberal supply of 4 loaves a week to each family it would extend the foodstuffs over 244 weeks, or more than four and a half years.

There is no need to carry the illustration further. So long as Britain holds command of the seas, the available supply of foodstuffs from Canada alone should suffice to overcome the fact that her native resources maintain the imposed upon herself by producing but a quarter of the wheat she annually consumes.

RUSSIAN GIRL POSES AS CZAR'S DAUGHTER

PETROGRAD, April 12.—A 16-year-old girl, the daughter of a fruit dealer, lately perpetrated the daring hoax of passing herself off as one of the daughters of the Russian Emperor, even to inspecting a hospital, where she was received with royal honors.

Yelina Romanoff, as she calls herself, bears a striking facial resemblance to one of the Grand Duchesses. When she attired herself as a sister of mercy, the deception was complete. She arrived in this dress at the Tsarkoe Selo railway station, where two friends had informed the station master of her Highness' coming.

Yelina was going to Galchina, she refused an offer of a special train, enchanting the station officials with her democracy. She would not even let a Lieutenant General vacate his department for her, but chose his company. On arriving at Galchina, she went to the state carriage and rode to the hospital in an ordinary droshy, surrounded by flunkies, and officials and accompanied by the General, who came at her special request.

A ceremonial reception was extended to Yelina at the other hospital where she inspected the wards and conversed with the wounded, who felt greatly honored. She had just asked for the honey collected for the Grand Duchess's fund, when up came Count Mordvinoff, the Emperor's attache, who discovered the imposture. Instead of being embarrassed, Yelina greeted the exposure with peals of laughter.

The girl was returned to Petrograd in a third-class car, and there examined at length by the police. Afterward she was turned over to her father.

HE MET HIS MATCH

A boy sitting on a street fence enclosing a corn field. A city chap, passing by said:

"Your corn looks kind of yellow, bub."

"Yep; that's the kind we planted," replied the bub.

"It don't look like you will get more than half a crop", said the city chap.

"Nope; we don't expect to; the landlord got the other half", retorted the youngster.

The stranger hesitated a moment, and then ventured:

"You are not very far from a fool, are you, my boy?"

"Nope; not more'n ten feet," said the boy, and the city chap moved on.

CHILD BORN WITH HARD COLD
Remarkable Statement of Girl's Mother. How She Suffered Until Six Years Old. How Finally Cured.
Pittsfield, Mass.—"My little girl now six years old was born with a hard cold and very delicate. Every winter she would suffer from croup and poor digestion. Dr. Currier recommended Vinol and within a week she had improved considerably, and her appetite increased so she wanted things to eat that had disgusted her before.
"In the first bottle she gained one and one-half pounds, and now at the age of six Vinol has made her a solid, healthy, good-natured child, and while sick she was so cross and fretful I grew discouraged and was worn out taking care of her."—Mrs. GEORGE WAGNER, Pittsfield, Mass.
Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is a wonderful appetizer, and you can see delicate, ailing children improve day by day under its use. It enriches the blood, builds up the body, makes pale, delicate children rugged and rosy.
We ask all parents of weak, sickly, delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol, with the understanding that if it fails to help your little ones, we return your money.

Big Shell Order to be Distributed

Twenty-Five Canadian Firms to Participate in Canadian Car Business

GOOD MARGIN OF PROFIT

Senator Curry States Entire Russian Business, Worth $80,000,000 Will be Completed Jan. Next

MONTREAL, April 13.—"The contract is proceeding favorably and the profits will be satisfactory," said President Nathan[illegible] Curry yesterday, discussing the orders for shrapnel shells received by the Canadian Car & Foundry Company from the Russian Government.

"At the present time," Senator Curry continued, "we are negotiating with about twenty-five Canadian manufacturers, and in all probability between five hundred thousand and a million of the shells will be made in this country by Canadian workmen."

"The orders are worth more than $80,000,000 and call for the manufacture of 7½ million explosive, and 2½ million shrapnel shells. The first order for two million will be completed this year and the second order for the balance will be finished by the end of January, 1916. All of the trial shooting in connection with the shells will be done in this country, most likely at Petawawa."

Senator Curry stated that the Amherst plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry Company was being equipped to handle a portion of the new business, and that when the company's contract with the Imperial Government had been completed, a large amount of the shell work would be done at the local plants.

The business would in no way conflict with the efforts of the Shell Committee, the Senator explained, as all of the orders sublet to Canadian manufacturers would not be closed until the Shell Committee had been consulted.

In discussing the question of profits, President Curry said that before accepting the contract careful study had been made and that all of the business would be completed with a safe margin on the profit-side.

Some time it was stated that the Canadian Car & Foundry Company was in touch with the Government regarding special shipping facilities. Senator Curry said that nothing more had been done in this regard and that in all probability the shipments would be about equally divided between eastern and western Canadian and American ports. The company was negotiating with several shipping firms and no great difficulty in securing tonnage was anticipated.

With the exception of firms in the United States, which are engaged in the manufacture of war materials, and firms handling foodstuffs, American business, Senator Curry said, was at present dull. The large amount of money being expended by the Allies in the United States was being reflected to a certain extent in all business, but generally speaking, firms on the other side of the line were not enjoying any decided improvement in business.

NEUVE CHAPELLE BLUNDER

London Papers Hint at a Hideous Mistake

LONDON, April 13.—The early rumors ascribing the heavy British losses at Neuve Chapelle to some extent to British artillery are now finding their way into print. It is said that the artillery was directed to fire at certain points, but, owing to a deranged field telephone service and a fog, the angle of fire was not raised when the impetous troops took the Germas line. In the early accounts no mention was made of this mistake, but the Times now editorially speaks of the "experience of Neuve Chapelle, which has been so incompletely explained."

The Daily News publishes a dispatch under the heading, "Strange Effects of Lyddite." The correspondent begins by describing a young Scottish officer who looked as if suffering with jaundice, of such a saffron hue was his skin. He was only one of hundreds now recovering from "lyddite." They were absolutely helpless when brought in, but under treatment they soon became the regular hospital facsimiles, reaching out and prattling like babies.

Most of these cases bear no signs of wounds. When they recover their nerves are generally gone for a while. As the cases were described to the writer, the victims of lyddite are paralyzed by the fumes and lose consciousness. When found their bodies are a bright yellow.

LAND WAS GIVEN AWAY THROUGH GOVERNMENT FRAUD

Irregularities in the Interior Dept. Under Previous Government are Revealed—Commissioner Reports—Find Charges Against Liberal M. P., Former Deputy General of Indian Affairs Proved

OTTAWA, April 13.—Grave irregularities in the administration of Dominion lands under Hon. Frank Oliver are disclosed in reports brought down in the House of Commons today. These reports contain the findings of T. R. Ferguson, of Winnipeg, in two cases, which were investigated by him as special commissioner to inquire into the alienation of Dominion lands by the Laurier Government.

The commissioner finds charges proven against Robert A. Cruise, Liberal M.P. for Dauphin, Man., and W. A. Davis, a forest ranger, in one case, and he finds in another that Frank Pedley, of Ottawa, former deputy superintendent general of Indian affairs, was personally interested while still in that capacity in a grazing lease on the Blood Reserve, situated near Medicine Hat, Alberta.

"In 1906, during the Oliver regime, the boundaries of the Riding Mountain Forest Reserve, in Manitoba, were definitely determined, and it was decided that squatters on lands within the new boundaries should be moved to other homesteads. The commissioner finds that the work of supervising this removal was entrusted to W. A. Davis, forest ranger, and that a large number of the new homesteads were given away on fraudulent entries with his approval.

Mr. Ferguson finds that one of these entries, for the south-east quarter section 22, township 23, range 19, west on the first meridian, was made by Robert A. Cruise, now member for Dauphin, who had represented himself as a squatter. Davis, it is found, gave away hundreds of quarter sections to his friends.

The charge against Cruise was that of his time, June 1907, he had not been a squatter, and Mr. Ferguson finds this charge proven. In order to obtain a patent it was necessary for him to be the owner of twenty head of cattle. He had only thirteen. Ferguson finds that he made a fictitious bargain with a squatter in his locality for the transfer of seven head of cattle, the consideration being a promissory note, and the cattle being returned and the note restored after the patent was obtained. The report states that Cruise was not the bona fide owner of these cattle and that the patent was obtained on an improper representation of facts, made in writing.

Davis, in his examination by Ferguson, it is stated, admitted that Cruise was not a squatter. Cruise himself admitted never having lived on the land, but he and four other men had erected the walls of a log shanty which had remained without a roof.

The report shows that absolute authority was given to Davis by Hon. Frank Oliver who, in October, 1907, instructed Oliver Herchemer, the Dauphin land agent, to "give entry of odd numbered sections in Township 23, range 20, to orders of W. A. Davis, if declared available by head office."

Davis, it is found, had two assistants in his operations, Albert McLeod and Sam Cohen, both at that time employees of the department. Hundreds of entries were allowed, for 99 per cent. to 89 per cent. of them being fraudulent. Davis' own evidence was that 40 per cent. of these were bona fide, but Herchemer had testified that only 20 per cent were bona fide. The latter official had given Mr. Ferguson a partial list of entries amounting to 207.

The evidence quoted in the report contains a remarkable frank story of Davis himself. He used forcible terms, which were taken around by his assistants to their friends, filled in, and then he stated that McLeod, it was stated, "made himself quite slick and nice", to his friends in this way. Davis explained that he signed these orders "for the sake of the party." Cohen, he said, "was a rattling good man, and a good worker, and he would let no opportunity slide if he could benefit the party."

Attention is drawn in the report to the fact that Mr. Oliver retained the man Davis in the employ of his department after the unreliability of his reports had become known to the department.

In June, 1908, Mr. Fitzroy Dixon, a departmental officer, recommended against extending the powers of Davis because his reports were not reliable. In order to have his work looked into the department detested Mr. R. E. A. Leach, of "thin red line" fame, to investigate. Leach reported that everything was all right. The officials of the department were not satisfied. Leach investigated again and reported that Davis had done "the right thing."

The second report, dealing with the grazing privileges on the Blood Reserve, states that in 1903, a number of applications for these privileges were made. Among the names on the departmental file is that of J. F. McLaughlin, of Toronto, with whom was associated Mr. Charles Miller, barrister of Toronto. A cattle company was formed in this case, it is stated, and a foreman engaged.

Another application was put in by the Ottawa law firm of Latchford, Mcdougall & Baby, on behalf of Donald Bain, but really, it is alleged, on behalf of Mr. Peter Ryan, of Toronto. The report states that a considerable interest in the grazing privilege was assigned by Mr. Ryan to Pedley by Mr. A. C. Bedford-Jones, a Toronto barrister, for four years. It was then sold to Mr. Charles Miller for a thousand dollars, the money being put by Mr. Pedley, he contributed dollars for the legal expenses.

Mr. Ferguson finds that there is on the departmental files an agreement, dated December, 1903, between Peter Ryan and Donald McEwen on the one hand, and Messrs. Gordon Ironsides and Fares, of Winnipeg, on the other, the latter firm agreeing to stock the ranch for ten years, at the end of the leases. After certain details were carried out the shares of the parties were to be divided, forty per cent. of the profits going to Ryan and McEwen, and sixty to Gordon, Ironsides and Fares.

The report states that Pedley denied that Jones had acted as his trustee. Mr. Pedley and Mr. Ryan in their examinations contradicted one another on material points. Mr. Ryan, it is stated, admitted being the owner of the lease.

Further reports brought down on Saturday are the first of a series. Mr. Ferguson was appointed in June, 1906, to investigate the alienation of the public domain and public resources under the late administration, and the coming reports are said to contain startling revelations.

WAS TRUE TO HIM

Convict's Mountain Sweetheart Clung to Him Through All His Troubles.

By GEORGE A. BAFFIN.

He crouched in the undergrowth, cautiously parting the bushes with one hand to peer out down the mountain side. He was a ragged ghost of a man, clean-limbed, yet with a strange pallor upon his face. Upon each wrist, too, were half healed scars. These had been caused by the heroic efforts which he had used to free himself from his manacles. But he was free at last. He had escaped from the state penitentiary three weeks before and his pursuers had never been able to discover his secret hiding place upon Bear mountain.

He had heard them seeking for him eternally; on the very day after his escape he had come upon one of the guards deing under a fir tree. He had taken his rifle and then, awakening him, scornfully ordered him to depart. The man had obeyed fearfully, and the rifle and a box of matches had enabled the fugitive to live. Now every time he brought down a rabbit or partridge the sound of the shot, echoing through the valleys, at once informed his pursuers of his whereabouts.

He looked round cautiously. No one was in sight. High up on the opposite hill he saw the outlines of the old cabin. It was his sweetheart's home —Mollie Stark's. It was to avenge the fearful wrong that he had shot the crippled Seth Baldwin. That was two years before, and he had been sent up for ten. Mollie had sworn to be true to him.

But now the fight he had not dared go near her home. It was too desperate a chance to take. But a visit on his part to the wild glen in which they had plighted their troth had resulted in the finding of a package of food placed there by Mollie. In it was a little note.

"Dere Jem," it ran. "I hid this and brout it here thinking you would come here. Come to the cabin on Monday nite at nine. Lovingly, Mollie."

The full moon gave almost as much light as the sun. The fugitive crawled down the slope and approached the opposite height, scanning his way up through the ferns and overhanging vines. At last he emerged upon a little rocky eminence a hundred yards distant from the cabin. From Mollie's window a rag fluttered. The fugitive understood that sign. She was alone. Grasping his rifle he went forward boldly.

He Was Free at Last.

He was within ten yards when the door opened. His heart leaped. Mollie stood in the doorway, her arms outstretched, to welcome him. Behind her was the flickering candle. But as he drew near, suddenly a sight froze his blood. The shadow of a man had appeared on the candle's entrance, and by other. He halted in his tracks. Behind Mollie he saw a rifle barrel.

With a cat leap she flung back into the brushwood. He would have fired, but, treacherous though she was, he could not bring himself to kill her. He heard yells behind him, Mollie's screams, the shouts of his pursuers.

An hour later he dropped exhausted upon the ground inside his cave. It was a bear's hole, cunningly hidden on the mountain side. Among that waste of horseshoe pine stunted none could hit upon it save by accident, and that he did not anticipate. It was one that made him pant like a marathon runner, but wrath and self-contempt.

Mollie was a traitress! He had been fooled by a chit of a girl, for whose sake he had suffered two years in the penitentiary. Anger overcame all other feelings. He would show her! He would show them! What should he do?

For an hour he lay thinking, gnawing his lip in rage. His passion for her had been so strong, his love so large a part of his existence, that his revulsion was terrible. He must contrive some punishment commensurate with the crime. Among the hills no man there could be none other so keen as he to hear her lover, as Mollie had sought to betray him. He had recognized one of the men in the parties as Frank Merriman, the sheriff. He had been a suitor for Mollie's hand before she promised herself to Jem. Doubtless he had persuaded her.

Ha! He had his plan. It flashed into his brain ready-formed in the fur nace of his wrath. Doubtless Merriman would be at her home the follow

...pon were gone when I saw the knock he gave you that night."

"That night! Where?"

"Two weeks ago tomorrow. Yep, I reckon you've kind of lost count of time," he continued, smiling less evilly. "You've been mighty near death, young fellow, let me tell you."

"Well, I guess you've won," said Ben feebly. "When are you going to take me back to the penitentiary?"

Frank Merriman scratched his head, then, fingering his bandages, he bowled at length in answer to a query upon his face.

"When will you be ready to start?" he asked.

"You'll have to put me in a cart, I reckon," said Ben. "I'm weak," he continued, "I'm likely to get a life sentence, but I'll be ready to meet again. I want to ask a promise of you. Treat Mollie well. She's been the girl in the world, and if she was false to me—well, I reckon it was for your sake, Frank."

The sheriff started at this. Then he turned abruptly away. "The—devil—he's right!" he muttered.

He went to the door and called the girl. Ben heard them whispering outside. Then Mollie came in, and, in his weakness, that Mollie was breathed over him again.

"Ben!"

"Mollie!"

"Ben, darest. Did you think I had betrayed you, Ben? Did you dare to think that I was untrue to you?"

Ben held out his weak hand. He listened dumbly, in an agony of anticipation and doubts he dared not utter.

"Listen, Ben! You are free. Free to go where you will. When you escaped the newspapers took up your case. They demanded that you should be set free. The governor was appealed to. He said that you had been punished enough. Your pardon arrived the week before you first came to the cabin. That was why I went to the mountain. I should have told you, but I wanted it to come as a surprise. That night Mr. Merriman was waiting here to hand it to you. You are free, Ben, free to go where you will—free to marry me—if you want to!"

Origin of Field Guns

Of all the world's great battles Crecy possesses a unique interest. The English used only three pieces of artillery. They were small cannon made of trees, bored, and bound with iron hoops, and the missiles were of stone, scarcely larger than cricket balls. Doubtless the rude artillery made far more noise than it effected damage. It was the first time that cannon had been used in the battle, but nevertheless gunpowder was responsible for the ever-increasing part in the strife of nations.

Prepared For Raid

Acting on the advice of the military authorities the Withamsaw (Yorkshire) Council called on all shopkeepers in the town to close their shops and cease business for the day at 4 p.m. A dispatch was made to other children in the event of a

POTATO RECIPES

Economical Dishes From the Cold Article Left Over From Dinner

In its natural state the cold potato is a clammy, rodgy thing, neither good to look at nor good to taste. But it has possibilities, and in these days when economy in the kitchen is so necessary the good points of the despised cold potato are worth considering.

Cold boiled, steamed or baked potatoes may all be utilized in savory dishes. In reheating potatoes the following things must be kept in mind. The potatoes must be well seasoned to make them savory, they must be heated to as high a temperature as possible without burning them, and they must be served very hot. The cold potatoes may be sliced or be cut into small pieces, seasoned with salt and pepper and browned in a little savory drippings, or seasoned as before and heated in the frying pan with butter or the drippings. A little minced onion, or chives, or green pepper, or a tablespoonful of fine herbs may be added.

A tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of flour may be stirred over the fire until the mixture is smooth and frothy. Add to this a pint of well-strained potatoes and stir the mixture with a fork for three minutes, then add half a pint of milk and cook until thoroughly heated, being careful not to burn. A pint and a half of cold potatoes cut in cubes and seasoned with salt and pepper may be heated in a pint of white sauce.

Escalloped Potatoes

This dish may be prepared by mixing a pint and a half of cold potatoes cut in cubes and seasoned with a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper and a pint of cream sauce. Put the mixture in a shallow baking dish, cover with grated bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

In time of peace Germany produces on an average 26,000 tons of copper a year.

Bright Glassware

To make glassware glisten, wash the glass and rinse in hot water, then plunge into cold water into which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, then polish with a dry cloth.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

Condensed News Items for Busy Readers.

ALLOWED TO GO

Samuel Moffit, a stranger in the city, was this morning by Magistrate Masson allowed his liberty on a charge of drunkenness.

G.T.R. CONDUCTORS

The Brockville Recorder in its issue of yesterday stated that the Recorder is informed that a number of G. T. R. conductors from there are taking up residence in Belleville.

REMANDED TO JAIL

Russel Herrington, a middle aged man and a stranger in the city, was this morning arrested here on a charge of vagrancy. He was remanded to jail for a week.

VAGRANTS SENT UP

Michael Mahoney and Hugh Fagan were last night placed under arrest here charged with vagrancy. The accused were strangers in the city and could not give a very satisfactory account of their actions. This morning the magistrate sent them to jail for 21 days.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT

At a late hour last night the police were called to the residence of Mr. L. Ellis, Mary street. It appears that her son Clement was intoxicated and acted in a most disorderly manner. It is alleged he broke dishes and also broke windows. When the police arrived upon the scene Ellis was in bed and the order did not desire his arrest, but intimated that she would prosecute him. He was not placed under arrest.

A SAD DEATH

The heartfelt sympathy of citizens generally will be extended to Alexander Dr. E. O. Platt and Mrs. Platt of this city, owing to the death of their only daughter, Vera Gertrude, which occurred last night from peritonitis. Deceased was in her 13th year and was an exceptionally bright girl, beloved by all who knew her. She was taken ill a few days ago, and despite medical attention succumbed to the disease. In addition to the parents a brother survives.

OBSEQUIES LARGELY ATTENDED

At Foxboro Village yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Mrs. George Wicket were interred. Previous to the interment a service was held in the Methodist church, which was filled to overflowing. Rev. W. W. Jones, pastor, conducted the service being assisted by the Rev. Mr. Richmond, a Baptist church minister. The floral tributes were many and simply grand. The pall bearers were Messrs. R. Cowan, J. Bryant, W. Eggleton, W. Clarke, B. Hamilton and C. Pitman.

Arrested on Charge of Theft

At a few minutes after the midnight hour last night the police here received a message that a man named C. Osborne was upon the passenger train coming west, and that his arrest was asked for by the Chief of Police of St Catharines. When the train arrived here a few minutes later, the party was placed under arrest, and gave his name as Charles Kildare, but later admitted his name was Osborne. He is wanted in St. Catharines on a charge of theft. When arrested and searched $100.50 was found upon his person, the proportion of the money being found amongst his underclothing. The accused is a man about sixty years of age, and well dressed. Chief of Police Green of St. Catharines was notified of Osborne's arrest and this afternoon an officer arrived from that town to take the accused back for trial. The arrest was made within 15 minutes after the message had been received here.

EXPOSITION VISITORS INTERESTED IN BEAUTY AND WEALTH OF DOMINION OF CANADA.

The Grand Trunk Railway officials in charge of the Company's Exposition pavilion report to headquarters in Montreal that over 250,000 persons have already visited the big fair at San Francisco.

The thousands of visitors have admired the showing of Canadian exhibits made by the Grand Trunk and there is a constant stream of inquiries from people at the pamphlet literature department in the Dominion, or desire to return East via Prince Rupert and the Yellowhead Pass.

The Grand Trunk Building was complete and ready for the official opening on February 20th, since that date the Grand Trunk cinematograph hall has been crowded several times each day with visitors eager to see portrayed on the screen the beauties of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson, and the newly opened up districts along the Grand Trunk Pacific line.

A PLEASING CHANGE

It does seem good to see Mill street cleared of dust and mud. The people of that section of the city were long over it surely appreciate the change.

VISITED SUGAR BUSH

Messrs. Charles Asselstine and James W. Cook of this city were yesterday the guests of Mr. Charles Vanderwaters of Sidney. As Charles and James have a sweet tooth they enjoyed the sugar bush.

Surgical Magnets

London April 14.—In the hospitals of France magnets have been developed that will draw fragments of shrapnel to the surface from a depth in the flesh of even six inches, and steel jacketed bullets have been drawn out from a depth of more than two inches.

At the Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., are many as wonderful electric machines, high frequency currents, X-ray, violet rays. Then Dr. Pierce has equipped the Sanitarium with every known device to aid the sick and in the Surgical Department every instrument and appliance approved by the modern operator. The permanent cure of rupture is accomplished here without pain with local anaesthesia. Gravel is removed in many cases without pain and the patient can return home cured in a few days.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, nearly half a century ago, devised and used two prescriptions which were almost miracles. They were made without alcohol or narcotics, extracted from roots and herbs by using pure glycerine and the ingredients are made public.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the tonic and blood purifier that cures pimples, blotches, sores, humors eruptions and diseases of the skin.

Nothing stands as high today in the estimation of thousands of women as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—this is a soothing nerve. For girls run down or weak, nervous, pale, sick, the days of middle age Dr. Pierce's Favorite prescription should always be on hand. In liquid or tablets. Write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Captain O'Flynn Sends Souvenirs

Several letters were received this week from Captain O'Flynn by his mother. In one he enclosed two hotel notes for one franc each, one issued by the Corporation of Bailleul dated August 1914, and redeemable three months after the signing of peace. Another one issued by the Bank of Lille just before Lille was occupied by the Germans. They are quite interesting and will be carefully preserved.

The Captain writes cheerfully, says he is well and hopes to be home this summer. He describes a Christmas dinner in which he was quartered. The top of the building is in ruins, having been subjected to shell fire, but the cellars are in perfect condition and bomb proof and they found their quarters very comfortable indeed.

He sees Lieut. Ponton every night, but during the day they are separated, and says that his friend Dirk has gained in weight and really looks better health than when he left Belleville. He also mentioned meeting Pat and Ted Symons and Mr. Wilkinson in the trenches. They are connected with the artillery. All three of the Belleville boys were well, in good spirits and doing splendid work.

He saw the shrine which is spoken of so much. Everything about it was destroyed by artillery fire and nothing stood untouched with the Saviour on the cross looking down upon the passers by. He said it was a sight he would never forget.

The food is good, in his opinion splendid for active service. His platoon has been very fortunate and has not had any casualties except one man who was wounded by a shot through the fleshy part of the leg, but expects to be back again to duty inside of three weeks. The wounded man is a fine chap, an artist, and the Captain said he would be pleased to have him back in his platoon again. He is very much delighted with the good luck the Belleville boys have had and writes in the most comforting and cheerful manner that the boys will be home again this summer.

He especially mentions the appreciation of the soldiers for the splendid socks which are being sent forward. It is of the greatest importance that the soldiers feet are all right and he says the men cannot have too many of these socks. He mentioned having received some from his friends which were very much appreciated.

On the 24th of March he was in reserve, having the same rest after service in the trenches. The Captain says that the box sent forward by the ladies of the 15th regiment here had not yet been received, but he expects it will come along in the course of a few days. It will be acceptable, especially the socks.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 1,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY, C.M.G.,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.—3000.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The homesteader must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after entry, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rock or other unfitness of land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

W. W. CORY, C.M.G.,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N. B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

Little Child Sees Marvellous Vision

Claims Virgin Mary Appeared in Dream, and Foretold End of War

PARIS, April 14—There is much excitement in the northern district over a story which The Journal des Debats says army automobilists have investigated and found to be correct.

A seven-year-old girl awakened on Palm Sunday and told her mother that she had a vision of the Virgin Mary, who said she would soon be dead, that news of the wounding of father would arrive within three days and that the war would be ended on May 1.

Two of the three prophecies have been fulfilled. The girl is dead and news of the wounding of her father was received within the time specified.

Looking for Hubby

A Young Woman From Deseronto Asked Police to Find Her Husband

KINGSTON, April 13.—On a search for her husband who she claimed had deserted her six weeks after they were married, a woman about twenty-three years of age, hailing from Deseronto, was a caller at police headquarters in Kingston.

The woman had an idea that her husband came to Kingston to join some of the military units going overseas, but from all that can be learned the missing hubby was not located.

The young woman stated that her marriage to the young woman took place after three weeks of courtship, then after living together six weeks, her husband suddenly disappeared as if the earth had opened up and swallowed him.

"I cannot understand why he should go away", said the young woman, who added that she was not able to work and earn her own living.

The police have been doing all they could in the matter, but Mr. Hubby has apparently left for regions unknown.

Federal Lands Gave A Golden Profit

must have been a conflict between Mr. White's personal interests and his duties as a government official.

The commissioner also finds that R. S. A. Leach, D. L. McDonald, and Howard Douglas who at the time were officials of the interior department in the west, formed a partnership with three men—W. Crawford of Medicine Hat, T. Kilpatrick and G. McCarter of Revelstoke, and got for $18,000 lands which a year previously were valued at $162,000. The case is found to be one of conspiracy.

In what is known as the Craver Dam case, it was established that Hon. Geo. W. Brown, now Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan, secured at $1 an acre 1,000 acres of land which, when appropriated by the Government in connection with the building of a dam were valued at $25 an acre. Hon. Walter Scott, Premier of Saskatchewan, wrote to J. G. Turiff, then Dominion land commissioner, asking that this land be held for a "probate purchaser," who turned out to be Mr. Brown.

A grazing ranch lease in Alberta involves A. J. Adamson, ex-Liberal M.P. A nominal application for 32,000 acres of land was made to the department by A. P. Brown of Great Falls, Mont., but the real applicant, the commissioner finds, was J. D. McGregor of Brandon, and the beneficiary A. J. Adamson, who is a brother-in-law of Mr. Turiff, then land commissioner. The peculiar fact disclosed is that while 32,000 acres were applied for, 60,000 were granted, and Brown swore that he was not aware of the increase till told so at the enquiry. Adamson formed a company which paid $620, the first instalment of rental, and then disposed of it to J. Condry of McLeod for $22,500. The commissioner strongly condemns the transaction, especially the increased grant.

The Cedar Lake timber berth is another case of increased areas being granted. A Mr. Hamilton, of Ottawa, some years ago solicited a tender to lease a berth at $200 a year. It was supposed to be 60 miles square. Mr. Turiff afterwards added 20 miles of land in the lake as well as the property surrounding it, and without extra payments, secured 17 miles additional.

The statement is made that when Hon. Frank Oliver was a member of the Government, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway bought 300 acres north of the lock in the Edmonton Bulletin, in which he states Mr. Oliver was a partner.

His statement is based upon the evidence of Frank Scott of Montreal, who testified that on Oct. 1, 1905, the G. T. P. forwarded $15,000 to the Imperial Bank at Edmonton, for which he received a stock certificate for 150 shares.

According to Mr. Scott, 235 shares were held by Mr. Oliver and 150 by Mr. Scott. The railway company held the stock in trust, but did not receive any dividends upon it or take any part in the business of the company.

Treasurer Scott of the railway company, stated that the money was forwarded by him to the Imperial Bank at Edmonton on Oct. 1, 1905, and that later he received certificates for 150 shares of stock, which he held in trust for the railway. He could not say why the company purchased the stock.

TWO HUNDRED ARE RESCUED FROM FIRE

CHICAGO, April 13.—Two hundred convalescent patients of the Chicago State hospital for the insane were rescued to-day from fire which destroyed a frame structure used as an annex to the institution at Dunning, north-west of the city. Warned by previous blazes in the building, hospital authorities had prepared a fire drill which worked without a hitch. Some 2,000 other inmates of the institution were guarded to prevent panic or undue excitement in the main building a few hundred feet away. The loss is $50,000.

Many Killed in Accident

Street Car Collision in Detroit With Railroad Train, Bring Numerous Deaths

DETROIT, April 15.—(Special)—At least fourteen persons were killed and thirty were injured late today in a collision between a Detroit street and a Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad train. The accident occurred at the western city limits.

The dead include: Miss Gail Gladys George, school teacher, 26, Portland avenue, Detroit; Mrs. Jennie Wagner, aged 30, Pulaski avenue, Detroit; Louis Kornack, 14; eight unidentified women and two unidentified men.

Most of the dead are foreigners. Four of them are women.

The street car, one of the largest in service, was heavily loaded with passengers homeward bound from their day's work.

As the car approached the railroad crossing it stopped, and the conductor ran ahead to see if the track was clear. He signalled the motorman to wait but apparently the latter, who is said to have been inexperienced, misunderstood his meaning. He applied the power and the car ran rapidly down an incline and onto the railroad tracks.

A string of freight cars was being pushed by a switch engine struck the street car fairly in the middle, smashing it almost to bits. The wreckage was pushed along a hundred feet, several of the dead and injured dropping along the street before the train was brought to a standstill.

Others were crushed in the splintered mass of steel and wood, and it was several hours before they could be extricated and their exact number known.

Concert Was Held For City Foreman

Charges are Made to Effect That Foreman Himself Organized or Knew About Concert

MONTREAL, April 14.—Very serious charges against city foreman working on the Sewers Department, Montreal, ward are being investigated by Montreal police. It is alleged that this foreman, whose name is known to the city authorities, organized, or allowed to be organized, a concert for his benefit, which took place at a hall on Masson street last Saturday night. The tickets were marked "Grand Concert of Friends." The sum of $175 was raised by means of this gathering, the patrons being city workmen under the charge of the foreman in question. The money, it is charged was then turned over to the foreman.

Some of the tickets refused to buy tickets, and complaint is also made that the ungenerous ones were refused work when they reported for duty Monday morning following.

These are the charges made to the city and they are now being investigated.

FOUR MILLION MEN BATTLING IN PASSES

Chief Interest Centres on Struggling for Uszok Heights—Russians are Advancing—Petrograd Sanguine as to Outcome of Carpathians Battle

LONDON, April 15.—Special—The battle of the Uszok Pass is still fiercely raging, the fighting favoring the Russians, who capture daily thousands of prisoners, and are steadily advancing. The conflict chiefly centres around the summits of the Uszok Pass, which are still in the enemy's hands. East of the Uszok Pass the Russians captured a village and are threatening the Austrian right in this region.

In Bukowina and eastern Galicia the Austrian offensives have failed, and the German attacks on Kosiouw, ka have so far met with no success.

A Tremendous Struggle.

The Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph cabled:

The battle now proceeding in the Carpathians is the most tremendous struggle that the war has yet produced. It is computed that the forces of the two opponents number something like 4,000,000 men.

Evidently on both sides the process of concentration on this portion of the frontier is still proceeding. It is impossible to say when it will stop. All the other sectors of the line have become absolutely subordinate to the stupendous fight for the ridge separating Galicia from Hungary.

Any show of aggression made by the enemy elsewhere is probably with the sole object of the detention of Russian troops that might be thrown into the scales in the Carpathians. In secret circles that the issue of this battle will have great influence. The results may be decisive.

War Cloud Darker in Italy Now

Austrian Destroyer Sinks Italian Ship Taking Food to the Montenegrins

ROME, April 14.—Tension between Austria and Italy was increased today by the receipt of a despatch from Milan announcing that the Italian ship Ivrea has been sunk by an Austrian destroyer in the Adriatic while carrying a cargo of food to the Montenegrins.

The Italian Foreign Office ordered an investigation of the incident. If this determines that the Austrians were unjustified, a demand for reparation and an explanation will be made at Vienna.

The Milan despatch states that the Ivrea, a sailing vessel was attacked and sunk at the mouth of the Boyana river, the navigable outlet of Lake Scutari. Her crew was rescued and landed on the Albanian coast.

An Austrian official report published this morning in the Idea Nazionale, state that the situation in Vienna is alarming.

Anti-war demonstrations grew frequently and martial law is about to be declared to enable the military to hold the people in check.

It is stated that one-third of the inhabitants of Vienna have left the city. The German Kaiser was in Vienna on Tuesday.

Refuses to Pay Bulgaria

Teutons Apparently Expect But Garia is About to Join Allies

PARIS, April 14.—Germany has failed to pay Bulgaria the portion of the loan also agreed to remit April 1, according to a Sofia special to The Petit Parisien, which says it is believed Germany distrusts the Bulgarian attitude and suspects she already has decided to join the allies.

When it was announced in February that negotiations had been completed for a loan of $20,000,000 to Bulgaria by German and Austrian bankers, it was stated that no political conditions were attached to the arrangement, but it was regarded as significant that Bulgaria had refused the proffer of a similar loan made several months before by the powers of the triple entente.

ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP RAIDS ENGLISH COAST

Passed Over Tyne District of Northumberland County at Eight O'clock Last Night Dropping Bombs on Several Villages Passed—Some Houses Destroyed, But the Damage Was Not Heavy

NEWCASTLE, April 15.—(Special)—A Zeppelin raid was made over the Tyneside district last evening soon after eight o'clock. The whole region from Newcastle to the coast was plunged in darkness. The first news of the attack came from Blyth, eleven miles northeast from Newcastle. The air vessel was heading in from the east at great speed, and as it passed over Blyth it dropped eight bombs on the outskirts of the town. After leaving Blyth the giant aircraft changed its course, and evidently intended to make for Newcastle, but its pilots were obviously baffled by the darkness. Bombs were launched from it from time to time haphazardly, but very little damage was done.

Eventually the airship reached the Tyne at Wallsend, and then proceeded eastwards to South Shields. As it drew near Wallsend bombs were dropped. One of them fell on the railway, narrowly missing a crowded passenger train on the way to Newcastle.

Between Blyth and Wallsend the Zeppelin passed over Cramlington and dropped several bombs in the neighborhood.

One house was set on fire. Altogether, the raid is estimated to have lasted twenty-five minutes, and so far it can be ascertained no great amount of damage was done. A man was injured by a shell splinter at Choppington. Most of the bombs discharged were of an incendiary kind. Information was also received that while passing over Wallsend a bomb struck a house in which a woman was on the point of being confined. She had a miraculous escape, only being slightly injured by a piece of flying masonry.

Shortly after midnight the lights in Newcastle and district were switched on again.

Another Member of 39th Dead

Private Harry Nichols of Peterboro a Victim of Spinal Meningitis

At an early hour this morning Private Harry Nichols, a member of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., mobilized in this city, died from an attack of spinal meningitis. Deceased was nineteen years of age and enlisted at Peterboro', where his parents reside. He had been ill for some days and received every possible attention. This is the third death that has occurred within the ranks since the battalion has been established in the city. The remains of Nichols were taken to Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, and after being prepared for burial were this afternoon shipped to Peterboro' for interment. A military escort accompanied the remains to the railway station.

At a few minutes after one o'clock the cortege moved from Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment to the G.T.R. depot. The members of the 39th Battalion paraded in full fire under command of Col. Preston and presented a fine appearance. A firing party preceded the hearse and was followed by the Fifteenth Regimental Band playing a funeral dirge. The hearse containing the remains, was draped with a large Union Jack. The bearers here were Privates Raymond, Wannell, Lighthall, Leach, Gilmour and Sergeant, all members of the Peterboro' contingent, and comrades of the deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, parents of the deceased, were the chief mourners.

Palma Sentenced To be Hanged

PORT ARTHUR, April 15.—Special—This afternoon Angelin Palma, the 25-year-old murderer of Wm. Lethiecn, was sentenced to be hanged June 30. Mrs. Lethiecn, who, the prisoner claims, inspired lie set and conspired him with money, was in court. The prisoner took the sentence calmly. Later Mrs. Lethiecn was arrested on a charge of contriving and agreeing to Lethiecn's murder. Mr. Justice Sutherland intimated she would be tried this week. She is 27 years old.

RUSSIA'S HUNGARIAN INVASION FUTILE

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, April 15.—The German War Office announces that the Russian attempt to force the invasion of Hungary has failed, the Russians being repulsed at the Lupkow and East Dukla Passes. They are attacking further to the east but have also been repulsed near Koniowa with heavy losses. Their attacking strength has visibly lessened.

Mill Dam Razed By Dynamitards

For Third Time in Two Years Property at Milburn Blown up

KINGSTON, Ont., April 15.—(Special.)—The dam at Jackson's Mills in the Village of Milburn was blown up by dynamite and totally destroyed during the night. This is the third time inside of two years that Mr. Jackson has suffered this loss and every effort to find the guilty parties has been unsuccessful. Mr. Jackson thinks that it is the work of some person who holds a spite against him.

Casualties Among British Forces

Canada's Only Colored K.C. Dies

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., April 14—Dr. Dr. Drake, K.C., the only colored King's Counsel in Canada, and the first negro to receive that title in this country, died at his home here yesterday. He was born in Virginia in 1826, and came to Canada in 1850. He was admitted to the Canadian Bar in 1857, and had practiced here ever since.

The deceased was a prominent Conservative and had spoken throughout this district for the party on many occasions.

AUTOIST INJURED

PORT HOPE, April 15.—Bert Tinney and two lady friends while autoing to Port Hope yesterday afternoon collided with a rig and the automobile was overturned. Mr. Tinney received a wound on the head twelve inches in length. He was hurried to the local hospital and is resting comfortably. The other two were escaped with minor injuries. The automobile is badly wrecked.

HOLLAND TRAWLERS SEIZED BY GERMANY

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, April 15.—The afternoon's official Statement says: Near La Boiselle our heavy artillery completely wrecked German shelters and trenches. In the Argonne district near Fontaine-aux-Charles, local engagements took place from trench to trench in which we gained the advantage. Our ascendancy over the Germans at this point is becoming more and more marked. By the extension of our front at Ailly wood, already reported, was maintained against counter attack. Our progress rendered us masters of a portion of a principal German trench, and to the north of this trench also gained for us a section of ground 400 yards long and 100 yards deep. The new ground gained by us near the Ecoy-Flirey high road remains in our possession.

In Woevre-Haucourt-Mamelon trenches were followed up by an infantry attack. In the forest of Le Petre, after having won in the course of the 13th part of the German lines, we maintained our gains yesterday and stopped counter attacks by machine guns.

In Alsace to the east of La Lauche we made progress amounting to 1500 yards in the direction of Schuepfen-Riethkopf.

MASKED MEN HOLD UP FAST FREIGHT

(Canadian Press Special)

BUFFALO, April 15.—Ten masked men held up a New York Central fast freight near Sanborn, fifteen miles from here early this morning, intimidated the train crew and removed ten big automobile trucks boiled silk to the value of $50,000. Engineer Goss, escaped from the guard amid a rain of bullets and started the engine, stopped to Suspension Bridge and was back in half an hour with a posse of detectives. Hundreds of armed men are now scouring the country, but no arrests have been made or trace of the trucks found.

A Cleveland Judge is said to have decided that a man has a right to choose his wife's woman friends. However he is not advising to insist on the "right."

BRITISH FIND CANADIAN TROOPS OF GREAT ASSISTANCE

LONDON, April 15.—(Special)—General French's report, issued today, pays a high tribute to the Canadian troops.

"All the Canadians serving in the army," he says, "have splendidly upheld the traditions of the Empire and have proved a great source of strength to the forces.

"On February 15 the Canadian division began to arrive. I inspected the division which was under the command of Lieutenant-General E. A. H. Alderson. They presented a splendid and most soldier-like appearance. They were in good physique, hard and fit. I judged that they had been well trained and were quite able to take their places in the line of battle.

"Since then the division has thoroughly justified the good opinion which I formed of it. The troops of the Canadian division were first attached for a few days by brigades for training in the third corps trenches, under Lieutenant-General Sir William Pulteney, who gave me such an excellent report of their efficiency that I was able to employ them in the trenches early in March.

"During the battle of Neuve Chapelle they held part of the line allotted to the first army. Although they were not actually engaged in the main attack, they rendered valuable help by keeping the enemy actively employed in front of their trenches."

New Militia Order

Gov't. to Withold, for Six Months $10 From Each Man's Pay

OTTAWA, April 14—According to militia orders the sum of $10 is to be withheld for a period of six months from the pay of every man enlisted on or after the first of March, 1915, for overseas service. This amount is to provide for the cost of civilian clothing to every discharged soldier at the expiration of their enlistment, and also to partly compensate the Government for military loans made to men who subsequently desert.

After six months' service, or on termination of engagement, the amount is to repaid and civilian clothing issued free on discharge.

TAKING "THE BOYS" TO GUELPH FARM

TORONTO, April 15.—(Special)—About the middle of next week Hon. W. J. Hanna will have the great body of inmates from Toronto Central shifted into their new quarters at Guelph. The buildings and grounds in connection with this institution have been put into first-class shape for the influx, and all accommodations are of the most modern and efficient nature.

Word was received in the provincial secretary's department of one of the most distinctive tributes yet paid to the Guelph institutions. Dr. Hastings H. Hart of New York, one of the foremost medical figures in America speaking at a board of trade dinner, stated that the Guelph project was the most up-to-date of its kind anywhere.

In Minnesota a state prison costing two millions was recently opened, but already had been shown inferior to the one established in Ontario.

STEAMER TORPEDOED BY GERMAN SUBMARINE

Another Member of 39th Dead

Private Harry Nichols of Peterboro a Victim of Spinal Meningitis

At an early hour this morning Private Harry Nichols, a member of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., mobilized in this city, died from an attack of spinal meningitis. Deceased was nineteen years of age and enlisted at Peterboro', where his parents reside. He had been ill for some days and received every possible attention. This is the third death that has occurred within the ranks since the battalion has been established in the city. The remains of Nichols were taken to Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, and after being prepared for burial were this afternoon shipped to Peterboro' for interment. A military escort accompanied the remains to the railway station.

At a few minutes after one o'clock the cortege moved from Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment to the G.T.R. depot. The members of the 39th Battalion paraded in full fire under command of Col. Preston and presented a fine appearance. A firing party preceded the hearse and was followed by the Fifteenth Regimental Band playing a funeral dirge. The hearse containing the remains, was draped with a large Union Jack. The bearers here were Privates Raymond, Wannell, Lighthall, Leach, Gilmour and Sergeant, all members of the Peterboro' contingent, and comrades of the deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, parents of the deceased, were the chief mourners.

FAMOUS WAR HORSES

One probable result of the introduction of mechanical vehicles into warfare will be the abolition of the old custom of civilizing the memory of famous war horses. When Genera's conducted campaigns on horseback before the advent of the field staff motor car, their favorite chargers used to receive many honors. When a statue of Lord Kitchener was erected at Calcutta, the famous soldier arranged that the sculptor should picture him mounted on a stone production of his favorite horse Democrat, which carried him through many important campaigns. Wellington's famous charger Copenhagen, when he died, was buried with full military honors. The Iron Duke's horse was a magnificent chestnut, and he carried his master many hundreds of miles in fights and at the Battle of Toulouse. "It's a fact," said the Duke, with a sad chuckle, "that as I sat in the saddle."

The remains of Napoleon's famous white stallion Marengo are preserved at the Royal United Service Institution, whilst another of Bonaparte's steeds, which was captured at the Battle of Waterloo, and bore the name of King George, figures in many famous pictures and fights. The horse which Lord Ronald Gower rode in the Balaclava charge was cherished by his family until the day of his death, when a tombstone was erected over his grave.

SAVED COLONEL'S BODY

French Soldier's Daring Fast Was Hint Instant Promotion

The deep attachment which often exists between the private soldier and his officer is strikingly illustrated by the following incident. "While leading our battalion in a terrible charge," writes a French officer, "our colonel fell. His body was only 30 paces from the German trenches, and when night came one of my men dragged himself in a white sheet, so as not to be seen on the snow by moonlight, and crept forward to fetch the body. His went very carefully on his knees in the snow until he reached the body and passed a rope round the wounded man; the groans soon ceased and the soldier attracted the attention of the Germans, who started firing at him.

"Owing to the white sheet with which he was covered, they could not exactly see him and missed him, in spite of a lively fusilade. A few minutes later he was back in our trenches. When the Germans stopped firing he returned, long himself tied with a rope so as to allow his friends to pull him back into the trenches in case he was wounded. This time he succeeded, and brought back the body of our beloved chief. He was promoted corporal on the spot."

The Pilot's Pluck

One of the most heroic deeds of the war occurred during the battle of the Rufiji Creek. The second-in-command, a lieutenant, whilst struck H.M.S. Hardinge aground within a few feet of Capt. Pilot Carew, who was directing the navigation of the boat from the bridge. It took off his left foot above the knee and seriously injured his left arm. "Bring me a cha'r and I'll get on with the job," he said, with a grim smile, and while the ship's surgeon dressed the stump of Carew's leg the wounded lieutenant cut off the pilot continued calmly to direct the boat, course, even insisting at one point on turning the wheel with the one useful arm. Then he fainted and was carried below.

THE KAISER'S SANITY A MATTER OF DOUBT

His Ancestors Were Highly Eccentric to Say the Least and He Impresses Physicians as Abnormal

Is the Kaiser insane? This is a question which many people have asked and it is interesting, therefore, to see what doctors and those personally acquainted with the Kaiser have to say concerning his sanity. Many physicians consider that the War Lord's family tree is quite sufficient proof that he is a very suitable candidate for the padded cell.

Frederick I., the first King of Prussia, who is the consequence of a fall from the arms of his nurse, was crippled for life with a deformed spine, had an inordinate love of display and pomp, which was considered a sign of insanity. His son Frederick William inherited his father's passionate temper, and he earned only for hoarding money and forming and drilling an army, eccentricities which Macaulay ridiculed as "the mimicry of a mad house." Although a famous soldier, Frederick the Great had a cunning disposition, and the whole of Europe trembled when, while Frederick William II. and his son, who succeeded him to the throne, were both degenerate, sensual, and cruel.

Mr. Arnold White, who has interviewed the Kaiser, points out in his book, "Is the Kaiser Insane?" how the mind of the chief man has been influenced by the talented stock he has sprung from. He says:

"The Kaiser is a dangerous man who ought to be kept under medical observation, for he evinces homicidal tendencies. From personal observation, I would describe the Kaiser as a degenerate.

"His stature—about 5 feet 5 inches. He wears a restless, nervous, somewhat fierce countenance, and constantly gives utterance at perfectly harmless individuals with a suspicious and sometimes with a menacing expression. At other times his bodily health is more like a boy in his early teens. As a boy in his teens he seemed fairly normal, but his brain has not developed as much advanced, consequently his impulses are beyond the control which should come with age and experience."

Doctors say that practically every person inclined to insanity is cruel, and callous to the sufferings of others. Mr. White, in this connection, says of the War Lord:

"He is infatuated with the chase, and sport with him becomes slaughter. He has always been emphatic on military discipline. His army must be ready to die for him, and to slaughter their parents, brothers and sisters. Cruelty is very infectious, and we see how this principle has been freely extended by the German soldiers to unoffending civilians."

At the same time the Kaiser is said to be unable to endure the slightest pain himself, although he boasted that he was willing to sacrifice 10,000 men to gain Calais. Yet the man who recklessly sacrifices the blood of his soldiers like water, we are told, "becomes completely unnerved in the dentist's chair." The fear of bodily pain is a common phenomenon among the mentally afflicted.

Even if the Kaiser's amazing actions do not prove him to be a homicidal maniac, many consider that his wild speeches confirm him as such.

The following are a few of his wild utterances:

"If I order you to shoot down your parents, brothers and sisters, you are to do so."

"I will walk among you and will be your God, and ye shall be my people. Ye shall walk in all the ways which I have commanded you. Without me ye can do nothing."

"There is only one law—my law; the law which I myself laid down."

"The soldier must not have a will of his own. They must will have only one will, and that will alone."

"The King holds his power by the grace of God, to whom alone he is responsible. He chooses his own path and only decides his actions from this point of view."

A New Anaesthetic

A new anaesthetic is being used in the treatment of wounded in the European war. It is understood to be related to amalgerstine, a preparation discovered, as this is the way, by M. Paulin, a distinguished French physician and pupil of Pasteur. Its action is not local; it operates upon the nerve centres of the body, and produces a state of oblivionsness to pain which may last for several hours. It is claimed that on injection of this fluid into his system the wounded man may be rendered unconscious sufficiently long to cover the period of his removal to the station, where the first surgical treatment of his injuries may be seen to.

WILL NOT PROPOSE PROHIBITION BILL

Premier Asquith Says This is a Matter for Commons Not the Government to Decide—Colonies to be Consulted Regarding Terms of Peace

LONDON, April 14.—The British Cabinet will take no action to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors. After several conferences, the Ministry has decided to leave the liquor question to the people, through their representatives in the House of Commons. Premier Asquith made the announcement to-day.

When Parliament reassembled this afternoon the liquor question and rumors of an early peace were uppermost in the public mind. There were all sorts of rumors that Premier Asquith would have important announcements to make on both subjects.

The Cabinet's position on the liquor question was quickly made known. Parliament had scarcely gone into session when a member queried the Prime Minister on the result of the recent liquor discussions.

The Premier replied that the Ministry had reached the conclusion that the Commons, and not the Government, should decide a matter of vital interest to the British people.

In response to another query, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lewis Harcourt intimated that the Government would consult Canada and other self-governing colonies should fully when the time to discuss peace terms arrives. He had no observations to make regarding the probability of an early peace.

Harold J. Tennant Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for War, made the announcement that there had been 1,545 prohibitions to commissions from the ranks since the beginning of the war.

Then Mr. Tennant stated that beer was the only intoxicant now permitted in the canteen, and that it was not the intention of the authorities to prohibit the sale.

Announcing that the British Foreign Office had requested the American Ambassador in London, Walter H. Page, to telegraph to the American Ambassador in Berlin, James W. Gerard, to find out what truth there was in the reported German reprisals, Neil Primrose, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, added:

"If this report be true, we can only hope that those prisoners are being treated as well as are the crews captured in submarines in this country."

Premier Asquith announced that the House would only sit for three days' work. He also stated, in reply to a suggestion that the members ought to follow the lead of King George and abstain from alcohol, that the suppression of alcoholic liquors at the Palace of Westminster was a matter for the House and not the Government to decide.

LETTERS FROM ABROAD

LETTER FROM PRIVATE W. A. DINGMAN

France, March 28, 1915.

Dear Mother,—

I am quite well; in fact all we boys from home are in excellent condition. At the present time we are at divisional billets for a rest, and I can assure you we certainly know how to appreciate the same.

Well, mother, this is Palm Sunday, and next Sunday should be one of our brightest and happiest days, it being Easter. It will surely be a dull day for nearly all the people in this country and no doubt all the loved ones we boys have left behind will ever realize as dull an Easter. At the same time we all join in sending you our greetings and hope in the near future the peace bells will be ringing for all nations concerned. I am sending a card to Sister Mrs. M. S. Hogle. We have not received our box from home yet, although we expect it any time now. Eddie O'Flynn had a letter from his mother with a list of private boxes in the same, and nothing being with the rest. I am shy of writing paper, so I must conclude. Love to the aunts and all. Kiss the kiddies for me. Regards to Ed. and Brother Bill.

Sincerely,
BILLIE.

Peoli Killed In Air Flight

WASHINGTON, April 14.—In his ast test flight in a new machine of his own devising, with a plane spread of 47 feet, Dr. Ernest A. Peoli, a Los Angeles aviator, 22 years of age, fell to his death just before noon yesterday on a aviation field at College Park, Md., nine miles from Washington. The machine he was said to be the largest ever constructed, and a number of short trials had been made of it.

Dr. Peoli must have died almost instant. His head was horribly crushed, and when the body was disentangled from the debris of the machine no sign of life could be observed. The remains were removed to a local undertaking establishment, and the Coroner gave a certificate of accidental death. The mother of the young aviator lives in Los Angeles.

Dr. Peoli had intended to go to New York Thursday to arrange for a flight from Governors Island to Washington. He had announced that after that flight he would attempt to fly from Washington to St. Louis. Not long ago he flew over the Andes.

Recently he had helped organize the Peoli Aeroplane Corporation, of which Harold Roberts was president, and to which several wealthy New Yorkers were interested. The corporation was the low bidder recently for all ship aeroplane requested by the Navy Department.

The machine in which Peoli attempted to fly today was built here under Peoli's direction. It had a 13-cylinder motor with 150 horse power and was believed to be perfect in design. It proved to be "tail-heavy," however, and fell backward after it came crashing to the ground from a height of 100 feet almost near the starting place.

Dr. Peoli was born in Cuba, but lived in this country for the greater part of his life.

Must Depend On Artillery

Commanders Need Wide Powers and Almost Unlimited Munitions

LONDON, April 15.—(Special.)—Reporting on the severity of the casualties in action Sir John French writes:

"I can well understand how deeply these casualties are felt by the nation at large, but each daily report will show clearly that they are endured on at least an equal scale by all the combatants and by the benignant Europe friends and foe alike.

"In war as it is today between civilized nations, armed to the teeth with the present deadly rifle and machine guns, heavy casualties are absolutely unavoidable. For the slightest undue exposure the heaviest toll is exacted. The power of defence conferred by modern weapons is the main cause of the long duration of the battles of the present day, and it is this fact, which unfortunately for such loss and waste of life. Both one and the other can, however, be shortened and lessened if attack can be supported by a most efficient and powerful force of artillery available; but an almost unlimited supply of ammunition is necessary and a most determined effort on every one so to its use must be given to artillery commanders. I am confident that this is the only means by which great results can be obtained with a minimum of loss."

Will Take Vigorous Measures With Wrongdoers

OTTAWA April 14.—Sir Robert Borden will make a statement on the Public Accounts Committee inquiry before the House prorogues.

His statement is being looked forward to with considerable expectation. The Conservative feels strongly on the revelations and intends to deal vigorously with all wrongdoers. The inquiry will not stop with the closing of the House. The Public Department will continue the investigation and will take action for restitution or prosecution in all cases. In taking such a stand Sir Robert will be backed enthusiastically by the Conservative party.

Inquiry Unique

The inquiry is unique in Canadian Parliamentary annals. In the first place by all Parliamentary precedent the inquiry would not have taken place this year. An inquiry into current accounts was asked for by the Conservatives in 1902 and was refused. In addition when the investigation was started every facility was given the Liberals to carry on the inquiry, in fact, the Conservatives were the most active in forcing to light all information that came out.

The chief result of the inquiry has been to show, that during the orders of Sir Robert, when the war broke out that all contracts were to be let direct. The manufacturers and the wholesalers and middlemen were to be eliminated and despite all the care which had been taken by members of the cabinet, system of graft, collusion, exorbitant profits and 'rake offs' which under the Laurier regime was too deeply rooted in the government departments to be prevent parasite getting their share.

A Complete Reform

That there will be a complete reform of the present system, it is understood, is the intention of the government. There will be a reform in the method of purchasing, auditing and inspection. It is too late in the session for any legislation but action will be taken by the Government after the close of the session. The admissions of Mr. Thomas Fraser, Auditor General, show that the Department particularly needs reforming. Now, bills of the militia Department are paid first and audited afterwards. Mr. Fraser admitted on the stand that a change had been recommended by the Conservative Government shortly before 1896. The change of Governments came too soon for the recommendations to be carried into effect. During the sixteen years of the Liberals this careless system was carried on and Mr. Fraser himself had never suggested a change.

Wilhelm Needs New Boiler Tubes

Repairs to German Raider Can't be Made at Newport News Inside Three Weeks

NEWPORT, NEWS, Va., April 14.—The German commerce raider Kronprinz Wilhelm, it was learned to-day, is in need of boiler tubes, which cannot be supplied at this port and must be manufactured elsewhere. To procure and install the tubes, it is said, would require at least three weeks.

Asking permission from Washington to "move into dry dock, Captain Thierfelder to-day ordered his vessel made ready to proceed up the James River from her anchorage. The examining board from Norfolk navy yard was due at any time to check up on his outline of repairs necessary to make the ship seaworthy.

The German commander did not complete his inquiry into the nationality of members of the Wilhelm's crew last night, as requested by Collector Hamilton, but promised to ascertain to-day whether any naturalized Americans are aboard the ship. At least one American is believed to belong to the crew.

GRANTS PAID TO ONTARIO FALL FAIRS

Provincial Aid Will be Resumed This Year

TORONTO, April 15.—(Special.)—The fall fair grant will be paid in full this year on the same basis as usual. This announcement is made by the Minister of Agriculture. It is pointed out that last fall in the light of the general financial conditions which prevailed immediately following the outbreak of war, it appeared to the Government that it would be impossible to pay more than 50 per cent of the grant, and it was so announced. Since that time there has been a marked improvement, and the outlook is for further improvement in general conditions before July at which time the grants are payable. Hence, the Government is very pleased," is the statement, "to be able to announce that the grant will be paid in full."

Public Accounts Committee Recommends Action by the Dept. of Justice

OTTAWA, April 14.—The Public Accounts Committee finished its work today, but the investigations which it commenced are to be carried on during the recess of Parliament by a commission to be appointed by the Government.

When the committee met today Hon. Dr. Reid, who has been representing the Government at its sittings, moved "Your committee have had under consideration the purchase of horses in the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick for the Department of Militia and Defence, and beg to report to the House the evidence and documents in connection therewith. The committee are of opinion that the evidence respecting the purchase of horses in Nova Scotia disclosed circumstances of such an unsatisfactory character that further investigation and action are necessary, and they recommend that the said evidence and all the documents connected with the matter aforesaid be referred to the Department of Justice with instructions to make such investigation, to institute such prosecution and to take such proceedings as may be found necessary to protect the public interest."

Mr. F. B. Carvell thought the motion should make reference as well to the purchase of horses in other provinces, including Ontario, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, where he thought there had been irregularities. This finally led to an uproar in the committee, after Mr. Carvell alleged that New Brunswick had been mentioned in the proposed resolution as a "dirty institution." Mr. R. N. Rhodes retorted with interest that Carvell's epithet of the previous night, telling the member for Caleton that he was a coward and that his statement was false.

Dr. Reid assured the committee that the Government would investigate the purchase of horses everywhere and moved a new motion eliminating the reference to New Brunswick and recommending a further investigation in any other province of Canada where such steps will be warranted by evidence or information of reliable persons.

This motion was finally carried by 15 to 5.

Mr. W. F. Nickle then made a motion as regards the auditing of Militia Department accounts and this was finally adopted. It was as follows: "That in view of the evidence adduced, this committee draws the attention of the House to the fact that since the inauguration of a system of purchase, inspection and audit that will adequately protect the country from irregularities and frauds and that such legislation be enacted as will accomplish such purpose."

The committee then adjourned after a series of sittings almost unprecedented in its history for their continuous duration, morning, afternoon and night and for the volume of evidence heard in a short time.

A feature of the sittings, as even Opposition members like F. B. Carvell have acknowledged, has been the manner in which Dr. Reid, Government chief sought to lift the veil from every transaction in connection with the purchase of war supplies which looked dubious. The Government has had a representative always present in the person of Hon. Dr. Reid, who has facilitated every effort by Opposition members to get the truth without regard to its effect and the announcement of the appointment of a commission for further investigation is only in line with the Government's attitude all through.

Another Scene In Senate Comedy

Absent Speaker Takes a Look Through Back Door, But Stays Out

OTTAWA, April 14.—Scene, the Senate. Time, Tuesday afternoon. A number of Senators are seen in their seats, some writing letters, some, including Senator Cloran of Montreal, speaking, others asleep. Curtains veiling back door of Upper Chamber are drawn aside and face appears.

Senator Boyer—Mr. Speaker Bolduc, before we adjourn might I draw your attention to the fact that your rival has just looked through the back door.

And thus the curtain is rung down on the third act of the comedy now being presented daily in the Upper Chamber, and entitled "Speaker Landry's Strike," or "Still One Vacant Chair."

There have been few additions to the plot of late, though the Speaker continues to absent himself officially. However there was further dialogue in the Senate this afternoon on the subject. It found origin in a complaint by Senator Daniel, a physician, that the ventilation was insufficient. He said that the spirited condition of the atmosphere was a menace to the health of the Senators when in the chamber.

Senator Boyer—But he has taken a month to tell us of the danger we have been running. If at the end of the session he finds the atmosphere so vile, it is due to the unsavory bills introduced rather than the insufficiency of ventilation.

Hon. Mr. Lougheed said there was nothing the matter with the legislation but intimated that some of the speeches made upon the bills might tend to vitiate the atmosphere.

Senator Cloran connected ventilation and the absence of the Speaker. "Empty is the cradle; the cradle of our liberty is empty," he mourned, "and the House is filled with vitiated atmosphere. It is now up to the Government to expel the vitiated atmosphere and bring in a new baby for the chair."

Hon. Mr. Lougheed moved that the Senate adjourn.

Senator Boyer—Mr. Speaker (Bolduc) before we adjourn might I draw your attention to the fact that your rival has just looked through the back door?

The Senate then adjourned.

It is said that the reason liquor is sold at dances in Chicago is that men will not dance the new steps unless sufficiently lit up.

FEEDING THE MIDDLEMEN.

It would appear that the investigating committee appointed by the present parliament are uncovering interesting evidences of deep, dark ways during the regime of Sir Robert Borden's predecessor. The system which was in existence under the administration in power previous to 1911 despite all the Borden Government has been able to do has continued more or less flourish.

When war broke out Sir Robert Borden wrote a letter to each of the Cabinet Ministers asking that so far as possible in the matter of contracts the original dealer or manufacturer should be negotiated with. This has been the policy of the Government, and that it has not been followed in every case is largely due to Liberal officials carrying out the old Liberal policy and continuing with Liberal middlemen who have been on the ground, and, notwithstanding the Government could do, have in some cases evaded the Government's orders.

Discussing the question in the House recently, the Minister of Trade and Commerce declared that the practice of his department was shut down absolutely on the middleman. "In the case of the French blanket order," he said, "which is a good illustration, the French Government asked this Government to supply or have supplied, 400,000 blankets of certain dimensions and of certain quality. We took that up and it was left to my department to see what could be done. I immediately got in communication with every mill in Canada that could make blankets and asked them directly from the department how many blankets of that quality they were prepared to manufacture in the time specified. A great many people came to see me asking for specifications. My first question to every one was, "What mill do you represent?" And if he did not represent a mill, he had no further converse with me about that. What I proposed to do and what was done was to make the contracts absolutely direct with the mills themselves. That was carried out, and I think that is in principle what every other member of the Government carried out, or desired to carry out."

An example of the way in which the Liberal middlemen, through the connivance of officials appointed by the Laurier Government, have tried to prey on the Government, was well shown in the case of Mr. G. C. Hurdman, Liberal member for Ottawa in the Provincial Legislature. He tried to work contracts through a cousin, Col. Hurdman, an inspector in the Militia Department and a Laurier appointee. Another example has been found in the boot inquiry where it has been shown that Mr. Chas. E. Slater, who made without tender the boots for the Militia Department under the Laurier regime, received over fifty cents a pair on all boots sold by Gauthier Company to the Government. The Government knew nothing of the arrangement, and had no way of knowing. This Liberal middleman who had been accustomed to doing business according to the Laurier methods made no less than fifteen thousand dollars.

Another example of the way the Liberals handled shoes for the soldiers came out when Mr. J. A. McCann, assistant director of contracts, was a witness before the boot committee. He produced a sample boot supplied by the Selden Boot Company and others in 1899 intended for service in South Africa and Canada. These boots showed cardboard throughout the whole of the soles, paper and wood shanks, and counters of seven thickness of material which peeled off like paper instead of oak tanned leather as in use to-day. Four hundred and fifty pairs were refused and the balance not being cut up were put in stores and used.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Sir Robert Borden: "A great task has been forced upon you Empire and Canada, and do not part in saying that it is properly performed."

Toronto News: "The Speaker of the Senate should be returned to the nursery." Not only that, but he should be given a nursing bottle.

German embassy officials at Washington say that the note on United States neutrality was writing when instructions from the foreign office at Berlin. It might have been more loyal service to the future government if the embassy had assumed sole responsibility for it.

Hamilton Herald: "Henry Ford, the American millionaire maker of motor cars, appears to be in pacifist of a rather extreme type. He is of the opinion that every soldier should be labelled murderer." What a reflection on the American soldiers who saved the union fifty years ago."

Edmonton Journal: "The Edmonton school superintendent reports that there were 8,049 pupils in attendance in March as compared with 7,500 in the same month in 1914. Those who have assumed that there has been a considerable reduction in population in the last year will, in the face of this, have to admit an error in their calculations."

Edmonton Journal: "James J. Hill, who has small reputation as a prophet, having foretold in years past a good many things that we didn't like to hear and materially affected only to believe, is out with the statement that the fall of October will see the end of the war." The human mind connects a variety of ideas that do not always materialize.

Wall Street Journal: "To what lengths will the spirit of militarism carry the Government, that it shocks the world by deliberate premeditated murder, absolutely without military advantage? Great Britain cannot hang the submarine officers and crews. It would be justified on any interpretation of international law in hanging Von Tirpitz and the Kaiser himself."

Hamilton Herald: "In assailing the Borden Government, so obviously for partisan purposes, the Opposition in Ottawa is giving the Government a very good excuse for bringing on an election. The Herald has never been a partisan paper, and both in the previous articles which urged a cessation of party strife, it represented the standpoint of the average Canadian. So long as the Opposition maintained its attitude of last August there would have been no justification for an appeal.

Ontario Encourages Northern Pioneers

The marked prosperity in France, proceeding the war, and likewise in Belgium, Great Britain, and Germany was due in first part to the extension of excellent roads which provided the farmers of those countries with a never failing means of easy communication with their local market centres. To-day, in the zones of war, the public road is the pivot upon which all schemes of the strategists turn, but, when peace is concluded, the highways of Flanders and of northeastern France will be among the most important factors in bringing about restoration of conditions which prevailed before Germany attempted to reach Paris through Luxemburg and Belgium.

In Canada, in the early days, road building was accomplished by the statutory, but, during the last century, the military aspect has been lost in the evolution of the service demanded of
